The RSS realises that the next few months are crucial for a Ram temple at Ayodhya.

Since the Babri Masjid was demolished at Ayodhya in 1992, and in what was then known as the ‘temple area’ of Ayodhya, Hindus have been demanding the construction of a Ram temple at the site. This has been a contentious issue for decades, with Hindus and Muslims in Ayodhya and across the country deeply divided on the issue. The Ayodhya case has been pending in the Supreme Court since 1992, and the court has yet to deliver its verdict. The issue has been a major political flashpoint for several years, with the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) and its allies playing a key role in the ongoing discussions.

In the lead-up to the 2019 Lok Sabha elections, the BJP had promised to construct a Ram temple in Ayodhya, and this promise was a key plank in the party’s election manifesto. The issue has been a major electoral issue for several years, with the BJP and its allies seeking to capitalise on the emotive appeal of the issue to win votes. As is edging closer to a chaotic Brexit by ending the customs union, the prospect of a renewed war in the North is creeping closer.

The real border, for customs purposes, could run down the mid-Atlantic, which is a non-negotiable minimum that the British Government would not accept. It is impossible to square that with May's decision.

The strategy included 25 target sectors, including pharmaceuticals and well-being, tourism and Make in India, we can- not have an environment to promote foreign investments to India. The concept is small, but for the purpose of foreign investment based on its economic impact compared to other invest- ments. This strategy also has an impact on the Indian economy, because it is a manufacturing base.

Oil market on alert as Iran sanctions hit India

OIL MARKET (MUMBAI)

The Finance Ministry is likely to allow discounting of Iran oil through the National Petroleum Trading Company (NPX). India is expected to buy Iranian oil at a discounted rate of about $6.92 per barrel, a source said.

The discounting is expected to be done through the NPX, the trading arm of Oil and Natural Gas Corporation Limited (ONGC), the source said.

The discounting will be done under the framework of the Automatic Relief and Financial Assistances (ARFA) scheme, which allows India to import Iranian oil at a lower price.

Under the ARFA scheme, India can import Iranian oil at a discounted rate of around $6.92 per barrel, the source added.

The discounting is expected to be done on a fixed rate basis, and the rate will be revised every four months, the source said.

The discounting will be done in coordination with the Ministry of Petroleum and Natural Gas, the source added.

India imported around 12 million barrels a day (mbd) of Iranian oil in December, but the volume is expected to decline in the coming months as Iran continues to reduce its exports.

The discounting is expected to help India maintain its imports of Iranian oil at a lower rate, without violating sanctions imposed by the United States.

Iran is India's second-largest oil supplier, after Iraq, and the discounting is expected to help India maintain its oil imports at a lower rate.

India is expected to continue importing Iranian oil for the next few months, but the discounting is expected to reduce the cost of imports, the source said.

These responses are associated with a negative impact on productivity at work and also a decrease in the job satisfaction of the employee. While the person is in a state of sadness, they may get attached to memories, think about the future, or get obsessed with the past. These responses have a direct impact on productivity, which is a significant aspect of work performance. It is important to understand the reasons behind these responses and develop strategies to manage them effectively. One way to do this is by identifying and challenging negative thoughts. This can be done through cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT) or other similar techniques. To improve productivity, it is essential to create a supportive work environment and provide opportunities for personal growth and development. This can be achieved by offering training and development programs, regular feedback, and recognition of achievements. Additionally, managers can play a crucial role in fostering a positive work culture by setting clear expectations and providing necessary support. By addressing these issues, we can help employees reduce maladaptive responses and enhance their productivity.”
