Amarnath Yatra cut short | SC Ayodhya daily hearing from Aug 6

After Pak-based ultras' attempt to target yatris foiled, Govt asks pilgrims to return immediately

MOHIT KANDHARI ■ JAMMU

The security forces have uncovered a "sinister" plot hatched by the Pakistan Army to target Amarnath pilgrims in the last leg of the 45-day-long pilgrimage. Following this, the Government on Friday issued an advisory asking the tourists and pilgrims to curtail their pilgrimage to the Amarnath cave shrine and leave the State "as soon as possible".

A top officer of the Indian Army based in Srinagar, along with the Director General of State police, on Friday claimed that an attempt to target the pilgrims has been foiled by the alert troops, who recovered a mine bearing mark of a Pakistan ordnance factory from one of the two yatra routes leading to the cave shrine.

"The recovery indicates that Pakistan Army is involved in terrorism in Kashmir. This will not be tolerated," Lt General KJS Dhillon, Commander of the Chinar Corps, said. Displaying pictures of the mine bearing Pakistan's ordnance factory's stamp, Dhillon said, "It laid to rest any doubts about Islamabad's direct role in attempts to death like IS-K" attempts to destabilise J&K". Meanwhile, the Jammu & Kashmir Government on Friday issued an advisory directing tourists and pilgrims to curtail their pilgrimage to the Amarnath cave shrine and to leave the State immediately. "Keeping in view the latest intelligence inputs of terror threats, with specific targeting of the Amarnath Yatra, and given the prevailing security situation in the Kashmir Valley, in the interest of the safety and security of the tourists and Amarnath Yatris, it is advised that they may curtail their stay in the Valley immediately and take necessary measures to return as soon as possible," the order issued by the State Home Department said.

Last week, Union Home Ministry had rushed 10,000 troops to Kashmir Valley to effectively handle security related and law and order duties. Speculations were rife over the arrival of 25,000 more troops in Kashmir Valley as part of the ongoing exercise.

During a three-day intensive search operation conducted to sanitise the Amarnath Yatra route, security forces had also recovered a cache of arms including an American sniper rifle M-24. Security forces acted on the basis of specific intelligence inputs that Pakistanbased terrorists might target the Yatra using IEDs and attack pilgrims, he added.

Dhillon said the threat of improvised explosive devices (IEDs) in Jammu and Kashmir is more "pronounced" in the hinterland even as the situation along the Line of Control (LoC) remains "largely peaceful". IG Kashmir SP Pani said around 10 serious attempts to trigger IED blasts were recently made in the Valley, mostly in

Pulwama and Shopian areas. Director-General of Police

(DGP) of Jammu & Kashmir Dilbag Singh, CRPF Additional Director General Zulfigar Hasan, IGP Kashmir SP Pani, and others were also present during the Press briefing.
Reacting to the State Home

Department order former Chief Minister Omar Abdullah tweeted, "Although this unprecedented order would seem to suggest a genuine fear of a massive terror strike directed at Amarnath Yatris or/and tourists this will do nothing to dampen the sense of fear and foreboding that prevails in the valley at the moment.

Abdullah, along with his father Dr Farooq Abdullah, had called on Prime Minister Narendra Modi in Delhi on Friday urging him that no precipitous steps of any sort should be taken that may result in situation in the State, particularly the Valley, worsening. "We specifically asked him to let subjudice matters be settled by the courts & other matters be settled by an elected government,"

Omar Abdullah said later. The NC leader has also reached out to other parties in the Sate, including PDP led by Mehbooba Mufti, seeking to discuss the situation. On the other hand, PDP president Mehbooba alleged that the Centre had resorted to "mili-tary might" and techniques like "psychological warfare" in

"First the avalanche of private orders about stocking up supplies that somehow made their way into public domain. And now news like this will create panic & distress,'

Mehbooba tweeted.
"So far, GOI's resorted to military might & psychological warfare like techniques vis a vis J&K. Neither will work," she added. Former IAS officerturned-politician Shah Faesal asked if the administration was going to issue a separate advisory for the locals of Kashmir. "J&K Govt has asked tourists and Amarnath Yatris to leave Kashmir immediately in view of a security threat.

The Supreme Court on Friday said it will hold day-to-day hearing from August 6 to decide the politically sensitive Personal Property States of the Political Property tive Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid land dispute in Ayodhya as the efforts to arrive at an amicable settlement through mediation have failed.

The apex court took note of the report of the three member mediation panel, headed by former apex court judge FMI Kalifulla, that the mediation proceedings which went on for about four months have not resulted in any final settle-ment and it has to decide the matter pending before it.

"We have received the report submitted by Justice (Retd) FMI Kalifulla, the chairman of the Mediation Committee. We have perused the same. The mediation proceedings have not resulted in any final settlement. We, therefore, have to proceed with the hearing of the cases/appeals, which will commence on and from August 6," said a 5-judge Bench headed by Chief Justice Ranjan Gogoi.

Stir against NMC Bill leaves patients in lurch Delhi doctors express reservations over certain provisions

STAFF REPORTER ■ NEW DELHI

Despite assurances of the Union Health Minister Dr Harsh Vardhan, doctors of several Government-run hospitals in Delhi went on strike on crippled. Apprehending law and order issues, the Delhi Police deployed additional police personnel, along with Central Armed Police Forces, (CAPFs) to control the situation.

Resident doctors, who form the backbone of Out Patients Department (OPD) and critical healthcare, withdrew all services in protest against the National Medical Commission (NMC) Bill that was passed by the Rajya Sabha on Thursday.

Protesting doctors and several bodies have expressed reservations over certain provisions of the Bill and alleged that these were "anti-poor, anti-student and undemocratic". The resident doctors' associations of AIIMS, Safdarjung Hospital, RML Hospital and those attached with the Federation of Resident Doctors' Association (FORDA) and United Resident Doctors Association (URDA) boycotted work and held demonstrations

Individual too can now be deemed terrorist by NIA PNS NEW DELHI

Parliament on Friday passed the amended Unlawful activ-ities Prevention Bill (Amendment) Bill (UAPA), 2019 with the Rajya Sabha giving its assent to it. The legislation to give Investigation Agency (NIA) and other institutions to fight terrorism was passed with 147 votes in favour and 42 against. The Lok Sabha had already cleared the legislation on July 24.

Allaying the apprehensions of the Opposition over declaring individuals as terrorists, Home Minister Amit Shah said a four-tier screening mechanism is provided in the proposed law to avoid harassment and uphold human rights.

Stressing the need to strengthen the UAPA, he also said given the gravity of threat posed by terrorism, the new legislation will help the security agencies to remain four steps ahead of terrorists.

The Upper House earlier rejected the Opposition-sponsored motion to send the amendment to a select committee with 104 votes against as compared to 85 in favour. The Congress had also voted in

STAFF REPORTER ■ NEW DELHI

The researchers of Indian Institute of Technology (IIT-D) Delhi have developed a first of its kind machine learning software - 'Python for Glass Genomics' (PyGGi) for predicting and optimising glass compositions

The machine learning software which was launched on Friday will allow researchers and companies to easily predict glasses with superior properties such as scratch and crack resistance at the tap of a button.

The main objective behind the PyGGi is to reduce the cost in predicting new glasses for tailored applications and the software will also help in making new glasses cheaper and affordable. "How many of us have wished for mobile phone screens or glass utensils or window panes that resist damage? Despite two thousand years of usage, developing glasses with tailored properties is still an open challenge," said Professor N M Anoop Krishnan, Civil Engineer Department and project investigator of the project, adding to address this problem, the researchers has developed this software which will help to develop novel glasses such as

The mediation panel, also comprising spiritual guru and founder of the Art of Living foundation Sri Sri Ravishankar and senior advocate and renowned mediator Sriram Panchu, had said in its report submitted on Thursday that the Hindu and the Muslim parties have not been able to find a solution to the vexatious dispute. The apex court, which on March had asked for in-camera proceedings to be completed within eight weeks, but later granted time till August 15 after the panel's earlier report said that the mediators were "optimistic" about an amicable solution.

The top court had fixed the seat for mediation process in Faizabad, Uttar Pradesh, around 7 km from Ayodhya, and said adequate arrangements including the venue of the mediation, place of stay of the mediators, their security, travel should be forthwith arranged by the State Government.

Official sources said Pakistan's response to India's communication is now awaited. "Pakistan has been asked yesterday to provide unimpeded consular access to Kulbhushan Jadhav, in an environment free from the fear of intimidation and reprisal, in the light of the orders of the ICJ. Their response in now awaited," said a Thursday said it was evaluating Pakistan's offer of granting consular access to Jadhav in the ICJ judgement in the case.

Pakistan had put a set of conditions for the consular access which included presence of a Pakistani official when Indian officials meet Jadhav.

India has been maintaining that Jadhav must be given "full consular access" as laid out in the ICJ verdict.

Jadhav, 49, a retired Indian Navy officer, was sentenced to death by a Pakistani military court on charges of "espionage and terrorism" in April 2017 following which India had moved the ICJ.

If policemen are found guilty, they will be dismissed," Director General (DG), Prisons, Anand Kumar said in Lucknow. In the video, a policeman is seen allegedly being bribed by a man wearing kurta-pyjama outside the Sitapur jail. The man in the video, Rinku Shukla, a panchayat member of Unnao, denied having bribed the policeman to meet Sengar. "It is my habit. I might (policeman) for having tea as he was standing there. My intention was not to bribe him. I met Sengai inside the jail 10-15 days ago," he said. Asked why he went to meet Sengar in jail, Shukla said, "I met him because he is our MLA. I am not in the BJP." The rape survivor is battling for life after a truck rammed into the car in Rae Bareli when she was travelling in with some family members and her lawyer on Sunday. the Bench comprising Chief Justice Ranjan Gogoi and Justice Deepak Gupta that he spoke to the victim's mother, who expressed that her daughter be treated at the Lucknow hospital for the time being. Giri told the Bench that he was informed that the victim was still unconscious and on ventilator and her family members were of the view that they should take the call of shifting her to AIIMS if it becomes necessary. He also said critical stage and his father was indecisive on him being shifted to Delhi. Taking note of the facts articulated by the amicus curiae, the bench gave liberty to the families of the victim and the lawyer to approach the Supreme Court's secretary general at any point for shifting the two to AIIMS here. Commenting on the prevailing security situation in Kashmir Valley, Dhillon said, "On July 30, Pakistan army indulged in unprovoked firing and it was responded to in befitting manner, they became quiet thereafter," he said. 15 Corps commander Dhillon said the security forces had considerable success against the terrorist groups operating in J&K recently and most of the top leadership of Jaish-e-Mohammaed, Lashkar-e-Taiba, Hizbul Mujahideen had been eliminated in the operations in last three months. The 15 Corps commander said IED threats had increased in the last year with several attempts made to blow up security forces vehicles or installations. "There was a failed IED attempt in Banihal in June and on August 2, one of the Army vehicles was targeted." said Dhillon, adding that one IED expert Munna Lahori was killed by security forces last week.

Dhillon said security forces conducted an in-depth analysis in the Kashmir Valley and found out that 83 per cent of local people who picked up weapons had a record of stone-pelting. In an appeal to the mothers of Kashmiri youth, the Chinar Corps Commander said, "If today, your child throws stones at security forces for Rs 500, then he will become a terrorist tomorrow. "In 2019, 7 per cent of terrorists have been killed within 10 days of joining (militancy). 64 per cent of terrorists who pick up a weapon is eliminated within the first year. So, I request parents to stop your child from doing stone-pelting, as chances are there that he would be eliminated within the first year of picking up his weapon," Dhillon underlined.

Stir against NMC Bill leaves patients...

"I reached Delhi on Friday and visited hospital the same day but people informed me about the strike. I saw doctors were staging dharna outside the hospital. Cannot they treat patients who are in need and travelling a long way to see them? There were many patients who returned back disappointed due to strike. "I came here to get my ill daughter treated, but could not do so and was asked to visit later. I was not aware about the strike. I don't know how we will manage our stay here as we are putting up on the roadside pavement facing the hospital," said Vimla Devi, a native of Uttar Pradesh. Meanwhile, Union Health Minister made an appeal to the striking the doctors to resume work during a meeting with a delegation of resident doctors from AIIMS and various other associations. "I have explained to them that this historic bill is in the interest of doctors and patients. I have also addressed queries that they had on certain provisions of the bill. "I also appealed to them to end their strike. I told them that there is no reason to strike. Doctors should not defy their duties towards patients," Dr Vardhan said. FORDA general secretary Dr Sunil Arora said the meeting was "not satisfactory" at least from the association's perspective. "We demand that our concerns regarding role of community health providers (CHP) vis-a-vis a trained doctors, and the NEXT (National Exit Examination) be addressed," Arora said. "Once it goes to the President for assent, we would urge him to send it back to the Lok Sabha for effecting the amendments our fraternity is seeking. A patient care should not be given in the hand of quacks, so we are worried," he said. On Thursday, Rajya Sabha had passed the National Medical Commission Bill for replacing the corruption-plagued Medical Council of India with a new body, in what was described by the government as one of the "biggest reforms" for medical education in the country. The bill will now go to the Lok Sabha again as two amendments need to be approved by it. Asked if the strike would be prolonged, Arora said a call would be taken after a meeting of the protesting doctors. Hospitals in Delhi have put in place contingency plans as regular services were severely affected. The emergency departments and ICUs at many hospitals were managed with the help of faculty members, sponsored residents, pool officers, faculty members of other medical or surgical departments, while OPDs, radio-diagnosis and laboratory diagnosis services functioned on a "restricted basis" in some health facilities and shut at many other places.

Replying to the debate, Home Minister Amit Shah said the proposed law has the provision of four-stage screening with a committee headed by a retired High Court judge and officials going through the process of declaring an individual a terrorist. Moreover, the individual can always appeal to the High Court and Supreme Court, the minister said adding no one's human rights will be violated. Responding to P Chidambaram (Congress) contention about the need to declare an individual a terrorist, Shah said individuals comprise a terrorist outfit. The militants keep shifting or opening new terror organizations once under pressure and therefore evade the law and the new legislation will check it. He also said countries including the USA, Pakistan, Israel, European Union and United Nations(UN) have laws to declare individuals as terrorists. SC: Magistrate can ask for voice sample

New Delhi: In a landmark judgment, the Supreme Court on Friday held that judicial magistrates "must be conceded" the power to direct a person to give voice sample to investigating agencies to effectively further probe in a case.

Ít used its plenary power under Article 142 of the Constitution to fill the void in the Code of Criminal Procedure, which until now did not force people, accused in criminal offences, to give voice samples to probe agencies against their wish.

The top court said until "explicit provisions" are engrafted in the CrPC by Parliament, judicial magistrates would be empowered to order a person to give voice sample

A three-judge Bench headed by Justice Ranjan Gogoi decided the issue after a twojudge Bench had given a split verdict in December 2012 on the subject and referred it to a larger Bench.

"In the light of the above discussions, we unhesitatingly take the view that until explicit provisions are engrafted in the Code of Criminal Procedure by Parliament, a judicial magistrate must be conceded the power to order a person to give a sample of his voice for the purpose of investigation of a crime," the bench, comprising Justices Deepak Gupta and Sanjiv Khanna, said.

"Such power has to be conferred on a magistrate by a process of judicial interpretation and in exercise of jurisdiction vested in this court under Article 142 of the Constitution of India," the Bench said in its ...To investigating agencies to effectively further

The Bench dealt with the issues, including that whether in the absence of any provision in the CrPC, can a magistrate authorise the investigating agency to record the voice sample of the person accused of an offence.

It noted that medical examination of an accused for the purposes of effective investigation of a criminal case has received a wider meaning by the amendments made in the CrPC in 2006.

It, however, said none of these amendments specifically authorised or empowered a magistrate to direct an accused or any other person to give his or her voice sample for the purposes of an inquiry or investigation.

Referring to the 87th report of the Law Commission of India of August 29, 1980, the Bench observed it had said that a suitable legislation, in the give his or her voice sample. Section 5 of the Identification of Prisoners Act, 1920 empowers a magistrate to direct any person to allow his measurements or photographs to be taken for the purposes of investigation or proceeding.

The apex court noted that by insertion of section 311-A of the CrPC, a magistrate has been empowered to order any person, including an accused, to give specimen signatures or handwriting for the purposes of investigation.

It said "what may appear to be legislative inaction to fill in the gaps in the statute could be on account of justified legislative concern and exercise of

Govt ends Cong rule in Jallianwala Bagh Memorial trust

 $T_{\text{passed a Bill which}}^{\text{he Lok Sabha on Friday}}$ removes the Congress president as a permanent member of a trust that runs the Jallianwala Bagh National Memorial amid walkout by the Opposition party alleging that the Government was trying to "re-write" the history.

Besides the Congress, TMC, DMK, NCP and BJD also opposed the Bill and asked the Government to let Congress president remain as permanent member of the trust.

The Jallianwala Bagh National Memorial (amendment) Bill states that it seeks to "delete" the mention of President of the Indian National Congress' as a trustee.

Seeking the passage of the Bill, Culture Minister Prahlad Patel said the Government wants to end politics involved with regard to the Trust. "It is our belief and principle that politics should be removed from the national memorial hence the amendments were brought to the 1951 Act," he said. Patel said no one can from the board of the trust in 2006, he said.

The Bill was passed by a voice vote amid Congress walkout. Earlier, amendments moved by Opposition parties were defeated by a division of votes. A division sought by Opposition members at the time of consideration of the Bill was also defeated by 214 in favour and 30 against it.

Opposing the Bill, Congress member Gurjeet Aujla said the Government wants to re-write the history by removing the Congress president from the trust. "You have no contribution to the country's freedom struggle. Why do you want to control the memorial," he alleged.

Participating in the debate, Akali Dal member and Union Minister Harsimrat Kaur Badal claimed that a close relative of Punjab Chief Minister Captain Amarinder Singh had lauded the role of General Dyer, who was involved in the Jallianwala Bagh massacre, describing it as a "correct" action. She said it was members of the Congress which were involved in the 1984 riots against Sikhs.

While BJD's B Mahtab opposed the Bill saying it will bring no harm if the Congress president remains a member of the trust, DMK leader Dayanidhi Maran said the BJP got a huge majority in Lok Sabha and it should be magnanimous. TMC member Saugata Roy asked the Government rewrite history.

The amendment Bill paves the way for the leader of the single largest Opposition party in the Lok Sabha to be a member of the trust. As of now, only Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha is a member of the trust.

The Amendment Bill confers power to the central Government to terminate the term of a nominated trustee before the expiry of the term without assigning any reason.

As of now, the trust which manages the memorial, has the Prime Minister as the chairperson, President of Indian National Congress, Culture Minister, Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha, Punjab Governor, Punjab CM as its members.

The memorial was established in 1951 by the Central Government to mark the massacre of unarmed people on April 13, 1919 by the British Indian Army under the command of Col Reginald Dyer.

This is a major setback for the State which claims itself as the educational hub of the country. Fate of many engineering colleges hang in the balance as 34 out of the 479 self-financing engineering colleges which took part in the counselling for the Tamil Nadu Engineering Admission 2019 failed to get even one student. Only 22 per cent of the seats in the self financing colleges have been filled up leaving the managements in the lurch.

College of Engineering, Guindy, Indian Institute if Handloom Technology, Salem, had their seats filled within days of the counselling session that has send mixed signals about the quality of engineering education imparted in the

"The self financing engineering colleges have failed to change ahead with the times. In addition to this, there has been a stagnation in the demand for engineering graduates over the years. Both parents and students have failed to take note of the situation," said M Ananthakrishnan, former chairman, IIT Kanpur and former Vice Chancellor, Anna University. Though he did not tell it openly, Prof Ananthakrishnan, a widely respected educationist expressed his unhappiness over the quality of education imparted in these colleges.

Prof S P Thyagarajan, former vice-chancellor of Madras University and Professor of Eminence and Dean (Research), Sri Ramachandra University, pointed out that the proliferation of engineering colleges and the absence of a mechanism to monitor the annual performance of these colleges have led to the deterioration of their standards. 'Equally important is the fact that there has been a dynamic change in skill set required by the industry from engineering graduates. The industries have changed to modern methods of production while the most of the colleges gave failed in updating the curriculum to suit the changed environ-

He also pointed out that students from Tamil Nadu keep abreast of the quality and standard of the engineering colleges where they seek to get seats. "The new age industries in the country prefer science and commerce graduates, offer them training in the kind of skill expected from them and appoint them at lower salary scales for the work previously done by the engineering graduates at higher wages," said Prof Thyagarajan.

Most of these self financing colleges release glossy advertisement campaigns in the newspapers and TV channels in the State which would ensure that no negative reports about their institutions make it to the public domain. Complaints are galore about the absence of faculties

Opp to protest against EVM in Maha on Aug 21

Stepping up their campaign against the Electronic Voting Machines (EVMs), the Opposition parties in Maharashtra announced on Friday that they would take out an all-party morcha in Mumbai on August 21, to protest against the genuineness of the EVMs and demand the use of ballot papers in the State Assembly polls to be held in October this year.

Addressing a joint news conference here, the leaders of the Congress, NCP, MNS, Peasants and Workers' Party (PWP), CPI, Swabhimani Shetkari Sanghatana, Janata Dal (U) and some prominent individuals said that as part of their "EVM-VVPAT hatao" campaign, they would submit a memorandum to the State Election Commission on

They said that all parties would create awareness about the adverse impact of faulty and defective EVMs by undertaking door-to-door campaigns across the state. "Our volunteers will visit people at their homes and get questionnaires filled by them. Once we get all the questionnaires back from people, we will submit the same to the Election Commission," MNS chief Raj Thackeray said.

Demanding the use of balpapers in the Assembly elections, NCP's former deputy Chief Mister Ajit Pawar said:

"We want the elections to be held with ballot papers. We port us in our campaign. The elections should be held in a transparent manner. The people should known whom they voted. "Our agitation is extreme-

Swabhiman Shetkari Sanghatana President Raju Shetti said that a return to ballot paper was imperative for bringing 'total transparency' in the electoral process." We appeal to all village panchayats to pass a resolution on Aug. 15 for banning EVMs and reintroduce the ballot paper system,"

Case registered under triple talaq Act in Mumbai

Within hours after the new Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Marriage) legislation was enacted on Thursday, the police late in the night registered the triple talaq case against a Muslim husband and two of his family members at the minority community-dominated mini township of Mumbra in the adjoining Thane district of Maharashtra.

Acting on a complaint lodged by victim woman Jannat Begum Patel (31), the Mumbra police booked her husband İmtiyaz Ghulam Patel (35), mother-in-law Heena Ghulam Hussain Patel and sister-in-law Sultana Ghulam Hussain Patel under section 498 A (husband or relative of a woman subjecting her to cruelty) and 406 (criminal breach of trust) read with section 34 (common intent) of Indian Penal Code and section 4 of the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Marriage) Act, 2019.

Last night, we booked the complainant's husband and two of his family members under section 4 of the new triple law and other relevant sections of IPC".

However, the police have not arrested the victim woman's husband Imtiyaz Patel or two of his family members in connection. "We have not arrested any one at this juncture. We will do whatever is necessary during the course of investigations," Kad said.

Ex-Goa CM seeks to know if 'feni' & 'hurrack' cause cancer

Former Goa Chief Minister Pratapsingh Rane sought to know in the state Assembly on Friday whether consumption of local alcoholic beverages 'feni' and 'hurrack' causes cancer.

Speaking during the Question Hour on the issue of cancer cases in the state, Rane said the state government should conduct a survey to know if these drinks cause cancer. "Do you have a study on the kind of cancers that are faced by people in Goa? Have you conducted a study on it," he asked Health minister Vishwajit Rane. "It is a well-known fact that smoking causes cancer. But we also have to know whether drinking local alcoholic brew like 'feni' and 'hurrack' can cause cancer?... A survey should be conducted and its findings be placed in the House," he said.

In his reply, the health minister said the government has the statistics about the types of cancer.

"Maximum cases in the state are that of breast cancer, followed by head and neck and other types," Vishwajit Rane said. He was speaking on the question asked by Congress MLA Aleixo Reginaldo Lourenco over the number of cancer cases in Goa.

Rane said lifestyle is one of the reasons behind the increasing number of cancer cases in

He said the government was serious about the cancer cases in the state and facilities are being created for treatment of cancer patients in the overnment-run Goa Medical College and Hospital (GMCH). According to him, although cancer is on the rise,

"With innovation and technology, we are able to detect cases of cancer more as compared to the past," he said.

nobody is able to tell the exact reason behind it.

"In Goa, lifestyle plays an important role. It is not whether a person is a vegetarian or a non-vegetarian. There are several issues related to lifestyle, which are creating problems. Along with other diseases, cancer is also coming to the forefront," Rane said.

Arunachal scribes demonstrate against Centre's move to repeal Acts for working journalists

Itanagar: Journalists in Arunachal Pradesh staged a sitin on Friday against the Centres move to repeal the Working Journalists Act (1955) and the Working Journalist (Fixation of Wages) Act 1958 along with other labour laws. The scribes under the banner of Arunachal Pradesh Union of Working Journalists (APUWJ) wearing black clothes sat on protest at the Press Club here demanding immediate withdrawal of the two Labour Code bills. In the two Labour Code bills, one on working conditions and the other on wages, introduced in the Lok Sabha, the government proposed to repeal the Working Journalists and other Newspaper Employees (Conditions of Service) and Miscellaneous Provisions Act of 1955, and the Working Journalist (Fixation of rates of wages) Act, 1958 along with 11 other labour laws.

the Narendra Modi government to scuttle the rights of working journalists and the bills are an infringement of the Working Journalist Act, APUWJ President Amar Sangno said.

The state's media fraternity demands immediate withdrawal of the "anti working class, anti journalists" and media workers labour code bills immediately, he said.

The APUWJ, Arunachal Electronic Media Association (AEMA) and Arunachal Press Club (APC) expressed gratitude to the Pema Khandu-led government for fulfilling their long-standing demand for treating journalists at par with group A officers.

The state government in a recent notification said accredited journalists will get facilities enjoyed by group A officers in all the state government accommodations like inspection bungalows, circuit houses, tourist lodges, bhawans and guest hous-

Villagers lock up stray cattle in school, students forced to return home Gorakhpur (UP): Villagers locked up stray cattle inside the building of a primary school in neighbouring Sant Kabir Nagar district, forcing the suspension of the class work on Friday.

The villagers of the Bakhira area herded the stray cattle in Dasdih primary school in Belharkala block alleging they were destroying their crops.

They also kept a watch on the gates to see that the cattle is not freed by anyone.
Principal Taresh Kumar

said he asked the students to return home after reaching the school.

In the morning when I reached the school, the gates were locked and stray cattle was inside. There was no alter native arrangement for holding the classes so the children returned home, he said adding he informed the officials about it.

Later, Block Development Officer Mahabir Singh reached the spot and the stray cattle were sent to cow shelters. We got an information that stray cattle were locked by farmers in Dasdih Primary school and we sent the animals to cow shelters, Singh said. On Sunday, villagers had locked stray cattle inside Amardobha primary school, which is about four km away from Dasdih primary school. PΤΙ

PAPER WITH PASSION = Power shots

With an eye on Assembly polls, the AAP govt offers free electricity but will it be enough to get Kejriwal another term?

hey may look jaded slogans but when it comes to governance in Delhi, it is the classic bijli, sadak and paani (power, roads and water) issues which have worked in local elections. Particularly, the city's power supply has been the most crucial swing factor for the continuity of regimes. Power reforms were the reason the Congress, then led by Sheila Dikshit, got mass acceptability between 1998 and 2013. Her focus was on improving the quality of power supply through privatisation of the electricity distribution sector. And when that frayed at the edges, the mess was a fertile ground for the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) to emerge as a champion of people's right to a good life. The party questioned the privatisation model, alleging financial irregularities by distribution companies (discoms) and suggesting a collusion between the Congress government and the discoms to keep tariffs artificially high at public expense. In fact, power reforms have found mention as a key plank and a promise of an affordable living index in all its manifestos. Not only that, AAP has consistently detailed its rationale for the tariff, revenue and distribution to justify its claims and ensured execution to gain popular vote. Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal intends keeping it that way and as he seeks another mandate; he has not changed Delhi's power tariff, calling it among the lowest in the country, and even announced free electricity for those who consume less than 200 units a month and a 50 per cent subsidy for those who consume till 400 units. The Delhi Electricity Regulatory Commission (DERC) also reduced fixed charges for most domestic connections by up to 84 per cent. The subsidy has, of course, been criticised many times about its broad-based nature that allows many of the privileged to claim benefits but that was revised last year to benefit the low consumption end. And Kejriwal has sweetened his latest announcement saving he has equalised free power for the poor with that of the city's political elite. Some observers also point out that in the absence of a tariff hike, how is it possible to manage discoms with subsidy payments that will cost about ₹1,700 to 2,000 crore additional expense. Despite these naysayers Kejriwal has admittedly scored on power infrastructure, improving the revenues and funds for power companies, eliminating red tape and ensuring almost zero power cuts. But this toggling between populism, vision and institutional viability can prove costly if exuberant enthusiasm is not curbed by rational discretion.

The AAP regime has consistently built social capital that has strengthened its electoral traction. Its improvement of the public school infrastructure, teaching standards and student performance has revolutionised the way we look at Delhi's government schools. The "Happiness Curriculum" and the construction of new classrooms in government schools have received accolades globally. The doorstep delivery of services, the primary healthcare centres offering free consultations, the mohalla clinics, some regularisation of unauthorised colonies have all worked for the "common man's" agenda. This despite AAP's consistent runin with the Centre on allocation of full statehood powers and constant delays on infrastructure projects pending clearance. But AAP is desperate for consolidation of its votebase, which has slipped to a dismal 18 per cent in the May Lok Sabha polls from about 33 per cent previously. It has even slid to third position in five Lok Sabha seats behind the Congress this time. The BJP's vote percentage is at 56 per cent and following victories in the municipal corporation, it is hoping for a short-term cascading impact on the Delhi Assembly polls. But worryingly for AAP, the BJP, in its bid to end a power drought in Delhi, is intensively promoting a Mission 2020 campaign to ensure that the underprivileged pockets, slum clusters and the Muslim community are provided with the benefits of the Modi government schemes. It is this aggression in AAP territory that needs a far stronger counter-script from Kejriwal than just power reforms.

Pipe dreams

The Hyperloop promises to revolutionise travel but questions remain about its economic viability

The world is littered with expensive transportation infrastructure projects that are barely used and even abandoned after a few years. There is the famous example of a brand new airport near Madrid, Spain, which was abandoned after a few months. In 2002, China inaugurated a magnetic levitation train between the Pudong airport and the outskirts of Shanghai, the harbinger of a massive network of space age connectivity. While that train remains the world's fastest commercially operating train, with speeds touching 500 km per hour, it is nothing more than a tourist attraction today. The 30 km rack cost an eye-watering $1.2 billion in the early-2000s and it should serve as a cautionary tale for those who want to make India a hub for the new 'Hyperloop' technology. In essence, Hyperloop is 'Maglev Plus.' Magnetic levitation lifts a 'shuttle' which travels through an enclosed pipe. It operates ideally, in a vacuum, but realistically with very low air pressure, allowing the shuttles to move without any air resistance at up to 1,000 km per hour. Such a system would make immense sense then as a transportation system between urban agglomerations located close to each other. Such as Mumbai and Pune, and it is no surprise that those who back the technology feel that this will make for a great test track. Sure, reducing the three-four hour travel time by road between Maharashtra's industrial hubs will be welcome but there are several caveats. First, there is little certainty on who will fund this extremely extravagant programme. While the Maharashtra government has given it 'infrastructure' status, the State government and the Centre are not investing any money. The estimated project's price is a truly sky-rocketing $10 billion, and that is before the inevitable cost escalations, since the technology itself is currently in its testing phase.

Would the money be better spent on developing a regular high-speed train track between the two cities that tunnels through the Western Ghats instead? Or should money be poured into a unproven technology with immense potential but possibly still years, possibly decades away from commercial application? Will the Hyperloop in India end up like the Maglev track outside Shanghai, a tourist attraction that showcases the future that might have been? It is one thing to look at the future, but practicality should also come into consideration. Massive, futuristic infrastructure projects and technologies get politicians goggly-eyed but running headlong into something without thinking it through is plain silly. Has anyone asked the question on who will use the 'Hyperloop' between the two cities? If the project costs a bomb, then only the very rich or tourists can use it. After all, in Shanghai, locals prefer taking the regular, slow subway train instead of the Maglev. We do not have the luxury of building infrastructure to make a point, we have to build infrastructure to be used by a billion people.

Big cat's leap of faith

An increase in its population is gratifying but the tiger still faces problems, including the frequent man-animal conflicts. A national-level strategy is needed to manage this interface im Corbett wrote in the Man-Eaters of Kumaon, the "tiger is a large-hearted gentleman with boundless courage and that when he is exterminated as exterminated he will be unless pubppinion rallies to his support — India will be the poorer, having lost the finest of her fauna." Had the legendary hunterturned conservationist and writer been alive, he would have noted with relief the contents of the latest estimation report on the number of tigers, titled the Status of Tigers, Co-Predators, Prey and their Habitat, 2018, released by Prime Minister Narendra Modi on July 29, annually observed as Global Tiger Day. The report puts the number at 2,967, which marks an increase of 33 per cent over the figure of 2.226 in the estimated tiger count in 2014 and a phenomenal 210 per cent over the 2006 figure of 1,411.

The increase is gratifying because it comes as a part of a continuing upward trend since 2006. Besides it represents one of the few instances in which the Union or a State Government's efforts have succeeded. It all started in 1970 when the Union Government banned the hunting of tigers throughout the country. Two other important developments followed in 1972 The country's first tiger census put the number of the striped lords of the jungles at 1,827. More important, Parliament passed the Wildlife (Protection) Act, 1972, for protecting animals, birds, reptiles and plants. It prohibited the capturing, killing, poisoning or trapping of wild animals, the injuring, destroying and removing any part of a wild animal's body, also forbade disturbing or damaging of the eggs of wild birds and reptiles. It further prohibited the picking, uprooting, destruction, acquisition and collection of specified plants and trade in these. The Act also provided for the creation of sanctuaries and national parks where wildlife would be safe and for restriction of entry into these. More, it provided punishment for each category of crime.

The Act was an important step as the Wild Birds and Animals Protection Act of 1912 (eight of 12) and the various State laws prevailing until then offered little protection. It was, however, aimed at wildlife in general and not specifically tigers. For the latter, Project Tiger was launched on April 1, 1973, with two objectives — identification of the causes of shrinking tiger habitats, adoption of remedial measures and repair, to the extent possible, of the dam-tenance of a viable tiger population. The project's distinguishing feature has been the creation of sanctuaries, called Tiger Reserves, to protect tigers from poaching and other threats. Against nine spread over 9,115 square kilometres at the beginning, there are now 50 of these encompassing an area of 74,749 square kilometres. No human activity is allowed in their core areas, while limited access is granted to the buffer zones around these. Strong action is being taken against poaching with rangers and forest guards being provided wireless communication systems, improved weaponry and facilities for rapid movement.

Funded by the Union Government, administered by the Union Ministry of Environment, Forests and Climate Change (MOEFCC), and functioning under the direct supervision of the National Tiger Conservation Authority (NTCA), set up under the provisions of the Wild Life (Protection) Amendment Act, 2006, Project Tiger has made the most important contribution to increasing the number of tigers. One, however, has also to take into account the efforts made nificantly, particularly since poaching to meet the demand abroad for tiger body parts for their allegedly medical and aphrodisiacal value, has been a contributory factor in the decline in numbers. In this context, one needs to recognise the critical role played by the Wildlife Crime Control Bureau (WCCB) set up in 2006 under the same amendment act that established the NTCA.

A statutory multi-disciplinary body under the MOEFC, to combat organised wildlife crime in the country, it collects and collates intelligence pertaining to organised wildlife crime and disseminates the same among State and other enforcement agencies for immediate action. Its functions also include the establishment of a centralised wildlife crime data bank, co-ordination of actions by various agencies in enforcing the Act's provisions and assistance to foreign authorities and international organisations to facilitate global action against wildlife crime. Among other things, it also helps to improve the capacity of agencies combating wildlife crime to conduct scientific and to protect wildlife from crimes professional investigations and successfully conduct prosecution for the same

A proud feather in its cap has been the United Nation Environment Progamme's conferring on it in November last year of an Asia Environment Enforcement Award in the cessfully innovating enforcement techniques that have dramatically improved action against trans-boundary environmental crimes in India. Earlier, in 2010, it had received the prestigious Clark R Bavin Wildlife Law Enforcement Award for outstanding work on wildlife law enforcement. Not surprisingly, its actions, along with those of other enforcement agencies, have resulted in the arrest of 350 wildlife criminals and huge seizures of tiger/leopard skins, rhino horns, elephant ivory, turtles/tortoises, raw mongoose hair, mongoose hair brushes, protected birds, marine products, live pangolins, deer antlers and so on across the States.

Innovation category for suc-

There is, however, hardly any scope for complacence. Human-tiger conflicts are becoming more frequent as the increase in the number of tigers continues along with into their habitats in the form of new settlements, more extensive farming, infrastructure, and environmentally-disastrous industrial projects benefitting blue-eyed entrepreneurs. In this context, there is an urgent need to implement the NTCA's suggestion for developing a national level strategy for management of human-tiger interface and dispersing tigers in compliance to its standard operating procedure, ensuring active collaboration between district administrations, police and forest department personnel, and, when required, for mob management to ensure safe capture or movement of

All this, however, will not help if State Governments clear projects threatening the tiger's survival. Two examples come immediately to the mind. Maharashtra sanctioned last year the diversion of 467.5 hectares of forest land in Yavatmal district for a cement plant. Also, its recommendation has led to the clearance, in principle, of 87.98 hectares of land in Kondhali and Kalmeshwar ranges — barely 160 km from Yavatmal — to an explosives company in defence products.

Unfortunately, tigers do not vote. Nor do they contribute to the funds of political

Strange exchange

Sir — It is amusing that only three days after some 50 eminent citizens came together to write an open letter to the Prime Minister, requesting action against "Jai Shri Ram" being used as a war-cry and the increase in religion-fuelled hatecrime such as lynching, another group of 62 celebrities responded to it in defence of the Government's silence. Is the Government not accountable to the citizens anymore? After all, supporters of the Prime Minister seem to have taken up the task of answering for him. The 62 celebrities have written an open letter against the "selective outrage and false narratives" and accused the writers of the first open letter of not having condemned separatist slogans that were allegedly raised on university campuses. Food platform Zomato has served up an exemplary lesson on the idea of India by telling a customer, who had demanded his delivery agent be changed because he was a "Muslim fellow", that the company is proud of the country's diversity and "not sorry to lose any business that comes in the way of our values." Zomato's response is similar to what Ola. the app cab service, had told a customer in Lucknow last year, who had tweeted that he cancelled his cab with a driver who had a Semitic name because he did not "want to give his money to jihadi people."

Ola had replied: "Ola, like our country, is a secular platform, and we don't discriminate our driver partners or customers (on the) basis (of) their caste, religion, gender or creed. We urge all our customers and driver partners to treat each other with respect at all times." It is sad to realise that the well of hatred is apparently bottomless. Now that the dam has burst the poison comes out in jets, streams and rivers of hate, trying to consume anyone and everyone with a Muslim name. A regulatory approach

It is the responsibility of the taxi aggregators to ensure passenger safety. Monitoring app-based services is essential for accountability

ecently, the Karnataka Government asked taxi aggregators like Ola and Uber to withdraw carpooling services in Bengaluru. The Government said that the ride-sharing services were illegal as there is no relevant legal provision in the Karnataka on-demand Transportation Technology Aggregators Rules, 2016, which currently governs the operation of taxi aggregators in the State. Undoubtedly, these ridesharing taxi services, wherein multiple passengers avail the same transportation facility at the same time along a common route, is an ideal supplement to the public transit system. This facility is very likely to minimise the travel costs, level of greenhouse gas emissions and traffic congestion among other things.

Although the shared mobility service has its own benefits, the main challenge facing it is that these services do not fit into our existing legal framework. The civil liability of the taxi aggregators like Uber and Ola for the damages caused by the car drivers during the course of a ride is uncertain. The inevitable question which arises is whether these car drivers are the employees of the taxi aggregators, who hire them to provide transportation services.

On this issue, taxi aggregators like Uber have stated time and time again that the car drivers, who register with them to provide transportation services, are not "employees" but "independent contractors" and, therefore, ineligible for any employee benefits

Legally speaking, as far as the manner of execution of the work is concerned, an independent contractor is not under the direct control of the person who has employed him/her to do the work. On the other hand, an employee acts under the direct control and supervision of his/her employer. Thus, the employer is not vicariously liable for the tort committed by independent contractors in the course of work.

These taxi aggregators further contend that they only provide a convenient forum to connect the riders with the selfemployed car drivers. In this regard, it is pertinent to note here that the relevant provisions of the Karnataka On-demand Transportation Technology Aggregators Rules, 2016, prescribe that the taxi aggregators must issue brand stickers and identity cards to the registered car drivers and organise at least one structured refresher training programme in a year.

The taxi aggregators must also ensure that all the taxies at their command maintain uninterrupted contact with the control room and that the vehicles entered in their licence do not operate independently or accept bookings directly. They are continuously tracked with GPS and GPRS facility, with the provision of a panic button to alert the control room of the aggregator as well as local police.

Simply put, these taxi aggregators control the manner of the work carried out by these self-employed drivers, thus bringing them under the purview of "employee". On the other hand, Ola, Uber drivers, who generally own the cars, have the freedom to work on their own time, thus giving them more control over their work schedule. They are also free to work for their company's competitors. The Karnataka On-demand Transportation Technology Aggregators Rules, 2016, gives liberty to the registered car driver, who is in operation under one taxi aggregator to operate his vehicle simultaneously with any other aggregator. This implies that the taxi aggregators have no absolute control regarding the time and manner of the work carried out by registered car drivers, thus bringing them under the purview of "independent contractors"

To remove this ambiguity, the court's opinion on the subject is the need of the hour. The much-needed clarity on the liability of taxi aggregators will also remove ambiguity with respect to insurance coverage policies in cases of damages caused by the the drivers during the course of a ride. The safety of passengers is a growing concern with respect to shared mobility services as it involves sharing the cabs with unacquainted people. High level of security technologies to help the rider in trouble, strict screening procedures for drivers, effective monitoring by the control room can, however, address the safety issues. The larger question to ponder over is the responsibility of the taxi-aggregators. The answer to be sought is whether the taxi aggregators exercise sufficient control over the manner of work of the drivers so as to hold the former liable for the damages caused by the latter in the course of a ride. In this digital age the old definitions of employer, employee, independent contractor hold no relevance.

I SPOKE WITH PAKISTAN AND INDIA; BUT THAT'S THE BATTLE, FOR A LONG TIME. IF I CAN, IF THEY WANTED TO, I WOULD CERTAINLY HELP THEM.

Time to stand up for real

While Modi's first term performance may be open to debate, what the current victory has done is to highlight the fact that he can no longer get away by foisting the blame on his predecessors

rime Minister Narendra Modi's recent electoral victory can be clearly attributed to two essential arguments that he was able to sell successfully, no matter how cosmetic the value. First, that the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) was a party with a difference when it came to matters of honesty and integrity. Second, it was not a family concern and had no place for dynasts. Without any doubt, the Congress and some other Opposition parties are facing an existential crisis, having been voted out of power earlier for corruption and now because the voter has made its distaste for family-run concerns pretty obvious, especially given the rather underwhelming performances of some of these very "families."

Unfortunately, if we go beyond the superficial, the reality on both counts is quite different. As the Report by the Association for Democratic Reforms makes it quite clear, as per their own declarations, the average assets of those in the Union Council of Ministers is ₹14.72 crore, while 22 (39 per cent) of them have declared criminal cases against them, of which 16 Ministers have serious criminal cases pending. As a matter of fact, of its 301 members in the Lok Sabha, 116 have declared criminal cases pending, just marginally better than that of other parties and certainly no indication of either honesty or integri-

Moreover, despite its claims to the contrary, the BJP is really no different from the family concerns that it so disparages. It, too, is run by an extremely small and close-knit "family", albeit not related by blood, in which other leaders are treated more as bystanders or retainers.

While Modi's performance in his first term may be open to debate, what the current victomay be open to debate, what the current victory has done is to highlight the fact that he can no longer get away by foisting the blame for the prevailing difficult security, social, economic or law and order issues on his predecessors, something he had turned into a fine art then. And immensely challenging task is at hand for the Government with the economy being in the dol-drums foreign invectors jumping the ship the drums, foreign investors jumping the ship, the security environment far from being conducive and the country's foreign policy has just been upended by the actions of US President Donald parison to the fact that the BJP's credibility rests solely on the popularity that Modi enjoys and without him, it is likely to flounder very quick-

Interestingly, his popularity depends significantly on the larger-than-life image he has been able to generate as a leader, who is not only seen as strong, bold, pragmatic and decisive but also a very capable administrator, who is forward thinking and empathetic. While much of this is a carefully tailored media creation, the latest being his participation in a survival-based reality show, similar to what Russian President Vladimir Putin puts on, his inability to fully live up to the image he projects is quite evident.

Take foreign policy for instance. No Prime Minister, other than Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, has devoted as much time and effort to foreign policv as Modi has done. He has been travelling much of the world to raise India's stature with-

CLEARLY, TILTING TOWARDS THE US HAS NOT BEEN WITHOUT ADVERSE CONSEQUENCES, AND DESPITE RHETORIC AND POSTURING, IN HIS DEALINGS WITH BOTH THE US AND CHINA (REMEMBER THE WUHAN SUMMIT?), MODI HAS EMERGED AS A WEAK AND

LEADER, UNABLE TO STAND UP FOR WHAT IS OBVIOUSLY IN OUR NATIONAL

ALL THE in the international community. Yet, in our own neighbourhood, in Afghanistan, where the Taliban is on the ascendancy, Modi's influence is as PLIABLE good as non-existent and we find ourselves discarded by the wayside.

For us, Afghanistan's importance is in the access it provides to the Central Asian Republics through the Iranian port of Chabahar. By succumbing to American pressure over sanctions against Iran, we have dealt a mortal blow to our Chabahar initiative and hope of access to those Republics. Similarly, the re-emergence of the UShas once again derailed our efforts to isolate Pakistan internationally, a key interest.

Clearly, tilting towards the US has not been without adverse consequences, and despite all the rhetoric and posturing, in his dealings with both the US and China (remember the Wuhan Summit?), Modi has emerged as a weak and pliable leader, unable to stand up for what is obviously in our national strategy in Modi's Kashmir policy.

There is a similar disconnect with regard to our internal security issues as well as our military capabilities. Regardless of whether the Balakot episode should be seen as the "new normal" or not, our Kashmir policy has not made much headway, especially given the increase in popular discontent within the Valley. While levels of violence have been contained, for the present, the Central Government has made little effort to push for an equitable political solution that can help negate insurgency. Of course, one may well be proved wrong with the recent induction of a hundred companies of the Central Armed Police Forces (CRPF), ostensibly to strengthen the counter-insurgency grid. This seems odd given that there are more than adequate troops already available in the sector. This action may well herald a serious effort to break the political as to the manner in which the situation develops in the coming days and

In this context, it is also worth repeating that while much is made of cross-border terrorism, even at the worst of times, foreign militants have played only a marginal role in the ongoing insurgency. While we must stay alert to avoid a Kargil repeat, we have to focus inwards. In addition, while the issue of funding of separatists by Pakistan receives enormous media attention, we refuse to acknowledge the bigger problem of domestic financing. Surely our intelligence agencies and the security establishment are quite aware that the militant groups corner a percentage of all Government contracts and developmental funds in Jammu & Kashmir. This is what makes the business of insurgency tick and what the Government needs to tackle.

Finally, where this divergence between fact and fiction is most notable is in the Prime Minister's dealings with the military. In these past five years, he has made much of the military publicly, even constructing the long demanded National War Memorial in quick time. Undoubtedly, as it is generally accepted, his electoral victories also owe much to the "surgical strikes" undertaken by the military. While scarce budgetary support for defence is understandable, what is utterly incomprehensible is the fact that the Government spares no effort to demean, degrade and demoralise our forces.

Examples abound and are well known to bear repetition, with the latest example being the manner in which a modified form of One Rank, One Pension (OROP), given by this very Government with much fanfare, is in the process of being gutted. The problem for the Prime Minister is that he can't be all things to all people. More importantly, we the people deserve to know what exactly he stands for? So, will the real Modi please stand up? (The writer, a military veteran, is a consultant with the Observer Research Foundation and a Visiting Senior Fellow with The Peninsula Foundation, Chennai)

When anything goes

A few media outlets, who still hold on to the intent of objective journalism, have become victims of not only external forces, but also by the mess created by their more subjective peers. The battle for media freedom, in an era of subjective journalism and relative truths, will be messier this time round

n 1995, I came across a book written by a Pakistani political activist Lin 1985, after he was released from solitary confinement where he had been mercilessly tortured by the police. As a young activist, the author had participated in various protests against the reactionary Gen Zia dictatorship (1977-88). In the early 1980s, accused of being a member of a "terrorist communist outfit" and an "Indian agent", he was thrown in jail and constantly tortured in the various prisons of interior Sindh. Finally, in 1985, he was allowed medical treatment in Karachi. He was not a member of any communist outfit, nor was he a member of Zia's most active opponent, the Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP). He wasn't a Sindhi, Baloch or Pakhtun nationalist either. He belonged to the Jamiat Ulema-i-Islam (JUI) — one of the few Right-wing parties that were against the Zia regime.

In 1984, when the Zia dictatorship banned student unions, various Leftwing student groups and the student wing of the Right-wing Jamaat-i-Islami, the Islami Jamiat Tulaba (IJT), set aside their ideological differences to protest together against the ban. At least for a month or two, the dictatorship was put under tremendous pressure, until the IJT decided to suddenly exit the protest.

During the same period, journal-ists and their unions often cooperated to protest against what were called "Zia's black laws" against Press freedoms. A detailed study by Philip E Jones of the 1968 movement against the Ayub regime saw similar left-right alliances taking shape. The late scholar, Khalid bin Sayeed's study of the 1977 movement against the authoritarian Z A Bhutto regime also speaks of the left and right journalist groups coming together. This happened again during the movement against the Musharraf dictatorship in 2007.

There is nothing unique about this. Large protest movements have a tendency of bringing together distinct ideological groups to address shared concerns. Consider the present scenario in the context of the kind of harassment and censorship the country's media has been facing these days. If, for example, one media group comes under attack by the powers that be, its peers are likely to either remain quiet or even celebrate!

How did this happen? Whenever a profession, an institution or an individual faces a crisis, the instinctive thing to do is to point out the external forces responsible for triggering the crisis. And on most occasions, the external forces are the triggers.

Pakistan has had a long history in which certain state institutions, Governments and political parties have bullied, harassed, terrorised and censored the media. However, if today we begin to again point out these external forces, we won't be saying anything new. We won't be saying anything that hasn't already been said for over 40 years. It is being lamented again. But during a crisis, it is equally important for one to look for triggers within.

Internal reasons that might be contributing to the crisis often get ignored when all the effort is being invested in pointing out external triggers. Looking for internal triggers is important because, I believe, the crisis faced by the media today may be slightly different than before.

To begin with, there is a battle going on within the media between objective journalism and subjective journalism. The former is based on facts that are thoroughly investigated, checked and cross-checked. Their agenda is simply to provide information without any obvious bias towards a particular political party or individual, a state institution, a religion, a sect, an ethnicity, etc.

We can all agree that absolute objectivity is impossible, but at least the intent to be objective (in the media) was once there. That's why, for example, newspapers used to have what were called "gatekeepers." Their job was to safeguard the intent of remaining objective and factual.

But from the 1990s onwards, across the world, we saw a concentrated attack on the whole idea of objectivity. Vulgar post-modernism derided objectivity as being an intellectually elitist tool to repress popular opinion. The gatekeepers were brushed aside and a new subjective idea of journalism started to take root. All of a sudden, anybody could say just about anything.

That's why what is being said especially on TV news channels — is mostly opinion. But opinions are not necessarily facts. As a US Senator once correctly pointed out: "Everyone is entitled to their opinion, but not to their facts." The whole Fox News model turned this on its head. Opinions were presented as facts and anvone with a theory or a rant was welcome to appear on TV. This model was a huge commercial success. Those, who thought they knew better than the snooty experts and intellectuals, lapped

Conspiracy theories, distortions of historical and contemporary facts and the demonisation of imagined enemies, all became acceptable content. News journalism crossed into show-business and reaped the ratings. After the success of Fox News, almost all private news channels, which mushroomed across the world, including Pakistan, adopted the same model.

The nature of the media as a business changed. The intent of remaining objective was now bad for business. When news media, show business and popular opinion came together, the result was a new form of entertainment + a kind of "newstainment" that blurs the line between fact and fantasy, truth and lie. It became okay to come on TV or print in a newspaper or a website "facts" such as: 9/11 was an inside job; that ancient Hindus were flying around in spaceships thousands of years ago; that one can derive energy from jinns: That Malala's shooting was staged: That there were billions upon billions of dollars stashed by Pakistani politicians in foreign banks: That he or she was corrupt or a traitor, or an infidel or a racist, a sexist, immoral, fascist, liberal fascist, et al. All this is now okay to say and write as long as it is generating ratings, circulation, likes and retweets. All forms of media have become platforms for all kind of opinions. But opinions dressed as "facts." Ironically, the attack on the idea of objectivity was encouraged by the media. But if objectivity as an intent once bothered external forces, adopting subjectivity can become a self-destructive act. Subjective journalism does not bother about objective things such as evidence. But this opens it up to counter-accusations that also do not bother with things such as proof. That's why the nature of censoring today's media has become a lot more brazen than before. It's all subjective now, all "relative." One man's ban (on a media group) is another man's act of patriotism, and another media group's triumph. Typical post-modernist hogwash. The few media outlets that are still holding on to the intent of objective journalism have become victims of not only external forces threatened by their objectivity, but also by the mess created by their more subjective peers within the media industry. Therefore, this time the battle for media freedom is and will be a lot more complex and messier. (Courtesy: The Dawn)

US to impose additional 10% tariff on $300 bn Chinese goods: Trump PTI ■ WASHINGTON

 $P^{\text{resident Donald Trump on}}_{\text{Thursday announced that}}$ the US will impose an additional 10 per cent tariff on \$300 billion in Chinese imports, as he accused China of not being serious in arriving at the trade deal and failing to keep its promise to buy more American agricultural products.

In a series of tweet, Trump said the new tariff, in addition to the 25 per cent on goods worth $250 billion that was previously in place, would come into effect from September 1.

The announcement came a day after US Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer and Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin returned from Shanghai after two days of latest round of trade negotiations with China.

"Our representatives have just returned from China where they had constructive talks having to do with a future trade deal," Trump tweeted. "We thought we had a deal with China three months ago, but sadly, China decided to renegotiate the deal prior to signing. More recently, China agreed to buy agricultural product from the US in large quantities, but did not do so, Trump said.

"Additionally, my friend President Xi said that he would stop the sale of Fentanyl to the United States — this never happened, and many Americans continue to die!" said the president.

"Trade talks are continuing, and during the talks the US will start, on September 1st, putting a small additional tariff of 10 percent on the remaining 300 billion dollars of goods and products coming from China into our country,' Trump tweeted.

"This does not include the 250 billion dollars already tariffed at 25 per cent. We look forward to continuing our positive dialogue with China on a comprehensive trade deal, and feel that the future between our two countries will be a very bright one!" said the US

Since the commencement of trade war last year China and US have so far hit each other with punitive tariffs covering more than $360 billion in twoway trade.

Trump kicked off the trade war demanding China to reduce massive trade deficit which last year climbed to over $539 billion. He is also insisting on China to workout verifiable measures for protection of intellectual property rights (IPR) technology transfer and more access to American goods to Chinese

Airtel to shut down 3G network across India by March 2020

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

Telecom major Bharti Airtel I on Friday said it expects to shut down its entire 3G network across the country by March 2020, the process for which has already started with Kolkata service area.

The company said it was keeping razor sharp focus on driving greater realisation and Average Revenue Per User (ARPU) but emphasised that tariffs need to move up in long term for industry viability. The process of switching off the 3G network has already started with Kolkata in the recent-concluded June quarter. By September, the shutdown will be affected in 6-7 more circles and between December and March the entire 3G network would be shut down, Gopal Vittal, CEO (India and South Asia), Bharti Airtel, said during the company's post earnings call. "Yes, we do see an upgrade when someone moves from 2G to 4G... On spectrum, probably by April 2020, we will really have only 2G and 4G. So all our spectrum will sit on 4G other than the administered spectrum which is on 2G, plus a small slug of spectrum that we require to run our 2G networks...every thing else will be sitting on 4G band," Vittal said.

The company has added 8.4 million 4G customers and has 120 million data customers of which about 95 million are on 4G. Data usage by Bharti's subscribers has now reached over 11 GB/month.

Airtel had said on Thursday that in line with its focus on network experience, it had refarmed spectrum from 3G networks to 4G across both the 900 as well as 2100 bands and begun the process of shutting down 3G networks in India. This has enabled the company to deliver improved indoor coverage as well as enhance capacities, it had said. The company has emphasised that tariffs need to move up in the long-term for industry viability.

Badal Bagri, Chief Financial Officer of the company, said that the broader industry which has consolidated to three large players continues to see "some semblance of stability". "While we have witnessed revenue growth despite any outright tariff increase, we continue to believe that prices needs to move up in the long term to ensure industry viability," Bagri said.

wo men from Thailand's Two men from The Deep insurgency-hit "Deep South" have been arrested linked to several small bomb attacks which rattled Bangkok Friday as it hosted a regional summit attended by US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, leaving four people wounded but not disrupting the diplomatic event.

Thailand, which has a grim history of political violence and is fighting a long-running rebellion in the Muslim-majority south, remains deeply divided after a controversial March election returned a junta to power as a civilian govern-

Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-Cha, who led the former junta, told reporters "there were nine successful or attempted explosions...

We haven't ruled out any motives.

Two men from the far south were arrested after wires and ball bearings were found in an inactive device outside Thai police headquarters late Thursday, in what police said was a linked incident.

Police chief Jakthip Chaijinda confirmed the men came the Muslim-majority area bordering Malaysia which is in the grip of a 15-year insur-

But he said it was "too early" to clearly tie them with the rebellion. Any connection to the insurgency will cause deep alarm in Bangkok, which has failed to win peace in a conflict which has left more than 7,000 Occasionally the shadowy rebel cells take their violence outside their region to mark kev anniversaries or kickback against specific Thai actions. Outrage is boiling in the south over the treatment of a 34-year-old rebel suspect who was left in a coma hours after being taken into a notorious military interrogation centre in Pattani province.

The blasts in Bangkok Friday appeared to be symbolic attacks aimed at embarrassing the government during a major summit but not designed to cause mass casualties.

Small devices -- some believed to be so-called "ping pong bombs" around the size of a table tennis ball -- exploded at several locations across the city, none close to the summit venue.

Officials said four people were wounded. "Reports are they were

'ping pong bombs' hidden in bushes by the road," said Renu Suesattaya, director of Suanluang district where the first bombs were reported.

Two further explosions shattered glass near a wellknown downtown skyscraper, emergency police added.

Bomb disposal experts were deployed around the Mahanakorn Tower -- owned by the King Power group that counts Leicester City football club among its assets. Most of the dead in the highly-localised insurgency in the south are civilians, but the conflict garners few international headlines. Malay-Muslim militants are fighting for autonomy from Thailand which annexed the region over a century ago.

In its report submitted before the court, the FIA stated that Tiwari has been living illegally in the country, while Kamran gave him shelter and also helped him prepare doctored documents.

An FIA official told PTI that the agency had sought 14day remand for the two men. He said the FIA raided Tiwari's residence in Mominabad on the report of an intelligence agency and arrested the duo. According to FIA, Tiwari

Paris, Aug 2 (AFP) Bank of Finland chief Olli Rehn has withdrawn from the race to be the EU's pick for leading the IMF, a French finance ministry official said Friday, leaving just two candidates in contention.

Rehn's departure from the vote of EU ministers called by French Finance Minister Bruno Le Maire leaves just former Dutch finance minister Jeroen Ďijsselbloem and Bulgarian Kristalina Georgieva, the current number two at the World Bank, left in the race.

A second round of voting is now underway to choose between Dijsselbloem and Georgieva, the French ministry official said.

The choice of the candidate to lead the International Monetary Fund (IMF), who by convention is a European, had exposed deep divisions within the EU and forced Le Maire to Southern countries chafe at the prospect of seeing Dijsselbloem in the post because of his tough stance against nations like Greece when he headed the group of EU finance ministers.

Writing on his Twitter account, Rehn confirmed he was pulling out to find a unity candidate for the "exceptionally meaningful and motivating job," he wrote.

years of outright junta rule.

Seoul: South Korea's military said North Korea fired unidentified projectiles twice Friday into the sea off its eastern coast in its third weapons tests in just over a week.

The North's increased testing activity is seen as brinkmanship aimed at increasing pressure on Seoul and Washington over the slow pace of nuclear negotiations. Seoul's Joint Chiefs of Staff said the launches were conducted at 2:59 a.M. And 3:23 a.M. From an eastern coastal area but did not immediately confirm how many projectiles were fired or how far they flew.

The North fired short-range ballistic missiles on July 25 and conducted what it described as a test firing of a new multiple rocket launcher system on Wednesday. Experts say the North is demonstrating its frustration over planned US-South Korea military exercises and stalled nuclear negotiations with the US, and its weapons tests could intensify if negotiations do not proceed rapidly over the next few months.

CONVERSATION 60 MINUTES

EFFORTLESSLY CONTROLLED TO THE STATE OF THE

Actress SONAKSHI SINHA believes that sometimes the best way to get across a difficult message is through humour. By Ayushi Sharma urned out in all-white — a lacy bralette draped with a short cropped jacket and culottes paired with sporty shoes — I could feel the peaceful aura which actress Sonakshi Sinha exuded at a single glance. We are like yin and yang, as I am dressed in black. Both perfect for an ideal exchange of ideas.

Though she has adorned simplicity, her choice of roles are bold and more complex. In her latest outing Khandaani Shafakhana, she plays Baby Bedi, who is a quick-witted small-town medical representative from an orthodox Punjabi family. Despite her earnest efforts, her modest income never matches up to the est income never matches up to the mounting bills, which results in multiple loans and creditors knocking at her door constantly. One day, she is presented with an unique opportunity. She must choose between her utterly ordinary life or bail her family out of their perenni bail her family out of their perennial money crunch by running a sex clinic, which she inherits from her estranged uncle. The conditions in follows is the no-holds-barred journey of a girl in a world where people prefer to hush up things. This small-town girl will break all the taboos around sex, open hearts and ultimately, minds.

Sonakshi says that there is a social taboo around the 'sex' word itself. We have made it abnormal to say it out loud or discuss it openly with anyone, within families or even with friends. That's just how, as a society, we have been brought up. Yes, things are changing gradually. She says one of reasons why she did the film was, "Because I am one of those people who never had this conversation with my parents. And this despite the fact that I come from a liberal and modern family. So imagine, if I am having this issue, what people in small towns are going through and how they must be feeling. It is surprising to see sex being treated as a taboo especially in a country, which is so heavily populated. In the trailer, there's a dialogue — Duniya mein 17 per cent abaadi vale hum aur baat toh aise karte hain jaise 130 crore log parshaad vale kele khake prakat hue hain. (We constitute 17 per cent of the population and we talk as if this appeared as a blessing of God). Envision a country like this. Maybe this is the reason why India is over populated because we do not have proper sex education and we don't talk about it openly. The actress feels that this should-

The actress feels that this shouldn't be the case. "Whenever there's a condom advertisement, one probably feels awkward and acts innocent. But why? Is practising safe sex a crime? No, right? Then why does this happen," she asks, clearly referring to our history where ancient texts reveal that sex was considered a mutually pleasurable act and premarital sex was accepted. But today, sex talk, sex education and everything related to the topic have a stigma attached to them.

Sonakshi feels that such subjects, when merged with an element of humour, stays with the audience. "If you ask my opinion, yes, comedy does help a lot in putting across a subject like this. But I don't believe it is the only way to express the message. There have been films with social messages, which are serious but they were a bit different. This kind of subject needed humour. Also, what are films? They mirror the society, right? So it's human nature, if you show somebody where they are going wrong, they get defensive but if you do it in a funny manner or joke about it, they always listen. It becomes more palatable. Humour just makes people think without offending them, of course," explains the Dabangg actress.

She is happy to become a flagbearer for women by taking up a subject like this. Does she think a male protagonist would have been better for the role? Or if it was a male filmmaker directing her, would she have been as comfortable? "There have been films with male protagonists but I am really happy to take up sex as a subject. It's important as well as relevant in today's day and age. It is something that should be dis-cussed and thought about to make a difference in the future. For this particular role, a female protagonist was required," she says with great zeal and goes on to add, "Honestly once you decide to do a film, if it was this particular theme and even if it was a male director, I would have done it with conviction and I would have stood by my decision. I think, that's exactly when you throw all your embarrassment out of the window because once you are committed to do something you have to put your heart to it. However, I feel, the kind of sensitivity that Shilpi (Dasgupta) has directed this film with definitely did make me a lot more comfortable. She has done it so beautifully that it's not even border line cheap or vulgar in any manner.

It's a very well-made, intelligent and

The reason why I did the film was because I am one of those people who never had a sex conversation with my parents. And this despite the fact that I come from a liberal family. So imagine, if I am having this issue, what people in small towns are going through. It is surprising to see sex being treated as a taboo funny film. As I said before, it's always good to express these kind of emotions and thoughts with humour."

Sonakshi is one such person, who believes that roles and characters that are played on-screen shapes you in real life. "Your roles always teach you. I take away something from most of my roles. It's like the role is a part of yourself and at the same time, you take something from it. I could easily relate with the character of Baby Bedi. And it's not only me but every other girl as she is one of those, who somewhere, when she was a child, had a dream of becoming a doctor but due to family responsibilities, she had to let go of that dream. You'll see how she comes back to following it. I am sure a lot of people will be able to connect with her. I did too, in certain ways," she says.

What was Sonakshi's understanding of the role? And how did she prepare for it? She answers in a manner that leaves nothing to doubt. It seems she has a habit of taking everything with ease and that is the reason why she appears so confident be it on-screen or in front of the media. She tells us that her way of preparing was to speak with the director. "There was no research involved as such. I spoke to Shilpi because she had a certain vision for it. She showed me a few videos of some medical representatives — how they talk, how smart and straight they are, what they say to sell a particular product. We did readings with the dialogues. It was very helpful. It gets you into an easier flow," says she. Just the way in which Sonakshi speaks, I sensed how effortlessly simple she is.

VINTAGE HEART

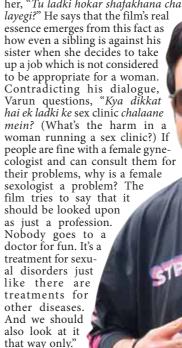

Actor VARUN SHARMA doesn't mince words while talking about the need for sex education in India. While he might have made his mark in comic roles, he doesn't allow that to temper his conversation when talking of serious issues, says Chahak MITTAL

Can you imagine actor Varun Sharma aka Choocha of Fukrey in a serious and intense avatar? Probably not. It would be difficult to even imagine him beyond his idiotic yet endearing and comically sweet roles.

ic yet endearing and comically sweet roles.

I have been waiting for sometime and anticipating that he would be be comic in real life as well. As I walk up to him, he asks for a short two-minute break with the sweetest request ever made, "Hello, I am extremely sorry can I please come back shortly?" As I nod a yes, he smiles and leaves to keep his just-made promise intact. He returns and as we start talking about his latest, Khandaani Shafakhana*, it turns out that he is as adorable as he seems to be in all his roles. And in some parts, serious too, depending on what is up for discussion. He still wants to keep certain things in the old school format yet follow the new changes in society and accept them with open arms. Just like he does in his film.

The film that revolves around Baby Bedi (played by Sonakshi Sinha), a young woman who inherits a sex clinic or a shafakhana from her late, estranged uncle. Amid a range of challenges and backlashes from the society, she tries to break taboos and ultimately open several minds. Varun, who plays her brother, Bhooshit Bedi, follows and believes in multiple stereotypes about sex disorders just like the other small town people. Completely opposing the idea of woman sexologist, he questions her, "Tu ladki hokar shafakhana cha-

Sexual disorders are common but we hardly talk about them and this leads to various problems, especially in a taboo-ridden society like India. This is something which the actor realised during the film. He says, "People do suffer from them in a large number but never discuss them. And we never even pay attention to them as they are not considered important. And due to this, there have been so many times where when two people are going to get married and the guy is aware about his sexual problem but he doesn't discuss it. Neither with his family, nor with the girl's. It is finally revealed after the two get married and that is when the problems begin to arise. This has led to the break down of so many marriages in India." Indeed, an example of impotency in men and his difficulty in discussing it was evident in one of the episodes of Amazon Prime's Made In Heaven, where the girl gets to know about her husband only after they are married. Varun says, "The man needs to accept it rather than hide it as a weakness and maintain an illusion. This would in turn affect not just his life but also his partner's. Aur isliye, baat karni bohot important hai especially family ke saath. Sex education, hence, is a must. In metros, it might still be surfacing among the

chhote sheheron me nahi (But not in small towns)."

Recalling his teenage years, the actor says that he, too, hadn't received any sex education. He adds, "I learnt and found everything myself through internet and discussed it with my friends. I am from the 90s and at that time, the atmosphere wasn't this liberal. There was not much exposure. We couldn't talk to our parents about even our bodily changes and issues so openly like kids do today in big cities. And I realised these things much later than at the time that I was grappling with them."

And talking about small towns, the actor from Punjab points out that whenever he would cross a bus-stand, he would read 'Sex Clinic' written on a wall in bold letters, it immediately caught his fancy. "I used to stop and wonder how boldly the term (sex) has been written. A term, which we cannot even utter in regular language. I found it to be very fascinating, different and new. I am sure there would have been a number of people who thought like that. The film, through its desi humour, is trying to change just that — so that we aren't taken by surprise. It aims to normalise it. If we are able to do it, then we succeed and it would be amazing. But if not, people will enjoy the film and return home. Simple!" says he.

Hesitation is one of the reasons why, in future, Varun wants to create an open relationship and share a friendly space with his children so that they can easily talk to him about just anything. He believes that this should be the ideal case too. "Ideally, one should go to the family first and then to the internet only to verify. But the case is reverse today. People refer to the internet first before going to their families. Earlier, even though we might have not conversed on sex-related subjects, we still spent more time with each other at home and had fun. Today, mobile phones get the highest attention," he says and goes on to add, "Thodi si cheeze vapas se old school honi chahiye. (Some things should be back to being old has become a comedy icon in the eyes of most youth, never fixed or planned to pick up the genre. He says, "Maine kabhi socha bhi nahi tha main comedy karunga. (I had never even imagined myself doing comedy.) I never thought I could do it. When I did theatre and shows, I only did intense roles. Ironically, Fukrey was my first attempt at comedy and I

fully by the audience. And this is the biggest thing for someone who is making a debut. After that, I felt that I could make someone smile and laugh. I realised this genre has chosen me. I now love it. I enjoy spreading happiness and I just hope to do this for most of my life. There are many other genres too, which I want to explore but I would not do just any film for the heck of it. Until I am not convinced or feel that I would be able to do justice to my role, I won't take it up. But of course, never

VERVE 45 MINUTES

From an asthmatic sickly boy, the journey to becoming a Guinness world record holder in mountaineering was riddled with hurdles but SATYARUP SIDDHANTA refused to give up, says Sakshi Sharma journey from being an asth-matic kid, who could barely run 100 metres, to being the youngest Guinness world record holder for climbing the seven summits and seven volcanic summits, Satyarup Siddhanta has fought against all the odds and made India proud by inspiring young talent.

But Satyarup knows how to crawl out from the depths. While climbing the Everest, which he considers his most challenging expedition, he fell into a deep crevice after a snowbridge broke enroute to camp. He was stuck in the middle and it was so deep that he could not see its bottom. But he was lucky enough to be alive and tell the tale.

He says, "On my death bed, I won't remember how much bank balance I have or what contract I won or lost." Rather, he wants to feel content that he touched lives. But to battle the odds, tough conditions and extreme weather needs a special kind of motivation. He says, "Every step that I put on the high altitude, fills me up with gratitude. It's like a miracle, as I never thought I could climb any mountain. The joy in surpassing my own limits, breaking the barriers and shattering the self limiting belief makes me feel unstoppable." He realised human potential is unfathomable and the discovery of this strength served as the greatest motivation for him.

Adventurous since childhood, Satyarup says, "I never dreamt of mountaineering, but I was always adventurous in my thought process. I used to read a lot of novels and imagine that I am the central character. People often saw me on the treetop or climbing on the parapets or the boundary walls. Sharing about his initial years, he says, "Because my college was in the Himalayas, I had intense asthma attacks because of the high altitude." The turning point came when he had an asthma attack and had forgotten the inhaler in his room. He says, "I was rolling on the ground to breathe and get some oxygen. I tried everything possible to regularise my breath but nothing worked. After 10 minutes, it automatically became normal." This incident changed Satyarup's life. He became contemplative and saw the incident through a broader perspective. He realised how dependent he was on his inhaler and wanted to get rid of that helplessness for which he started training his body by eating food that he was allergic to. It was when he joined a job at Bengaluru in 2005 that the seeds of showed him his trekking pictures at Parvathamalai hill which gave him an insight into the world he was not aware of. He says, "For a moment I was shocked because I always used to think that treks were possible only in foreign countries because the adventure novels that I read were mostly set abroad. I asked my boss if I could also do this, and he counter questioned, 'if I can why can't you?" This excited him to the core but he knew that it would not be easy for him on account of his asthma. But, he decided to chase his dreams and went on a trek to Parvathamalai hills. He says, "When I reached the top, I not only had the joy of climbing the hill but also of the fact that I didn't use the inhaler during the whole journey. I felt liberated. That moment instilled confidence in me and I realised that I could achieve all my dreams if I am

Since then there has been no looking back. Satyarup decided to fight with his problems and fulfill his wildest imagination. He says, "Every weekend, people saw me on the Western Ghats trekking, diving and skydiving. I never thought that I would become a mountainer." Things took a 360 become a mountaineer." Things took a 360 degree turn in 2010 when he went for the Everest base camp trek in Nepal. He says, The highest mountain stood there casting a spell on me. I did not know what mountaineering was, I just knew it is yet another mountain, a little high but I could definitely do it. So, I promised Everest that I am going to come back." But, he soon realised that mountaineering was not like normal trekking and was a different game altogether. But he clung on to his dream and started preparing for it.

He then went to Kilimanjaro, the highest mountain in Africa and came to know about the concept of seven summits. (The 7 summits represent the highest point on each of the seven continents). Satyarup says, "I was blown away by the idea and started dreaming about it. But, soon realised that I didn't have money for climbing even one and here I am thinking about seven mountains."

Talking about the challenges of his journey he says, "I went to Mt Denali, the highest mountain of North America in Alaska, unsupported and unguided because of its heavy cost." But the good part was that he completed the journey and this boosted his confidence for Everest. But financial constraints held him back, so he collected funds from his college, friends, collected funds from his college, friends, parents and crowdfunding. But in 2015, there was an earthquake in Nepal which killed more than 10,000 people and all expeditions were closed. Talking about the tough time he says, "I lost my four friends, I was shattered. Our dreams were crushed but Lidid not lose hope. I held together all but I did not lose hope. I held together all the broken pieces of my dreams and started rebuilding it." Mountaineering involves challenges in all aspects, be it physical, mental or financial. A mountaineer should be strong enough to combat these in order to turn their dream into a reality. Satyarup says, "You have to be mentally very strong because it's not easy to see someone falling from the cliff in front of your eyes but then you have to walk ahead without feeling anything. This needs a lot of guts." One needs to be patient in order to handle the uncertainties. Talking about the financial challenges, he says, "I had to leave my job because there was no policy for such long leaves in my office. So, I had to choose between Everest and my job and I chose the former because I had no idea whether I would come back from the climb or not. I thought there was no point bothering about the job? The Everest climb cost ₹20-25 lakh and Antarctica ₹76 lakh." He has run up a loan of 45 lakh for which he works at two jobs — morning and evening — to pay his EMIs. Therefore, he is trying to get the government's support. He feels that India is not mature enough about mountaineering. He says, "There are consistent efforts to encourage sports which has shown results as we have been breaking records. My request is to extend this to mountaineering as well." He hopes that the government understands his situation

"It will be a failure on part of our country if the potential and passion of mountaineers is held back because of financial constraints. I could have used this money to buy a house or a car and lead a settled life but I wanted to make my country proud. Nobody asked me to, but I felt an urge to be instrumental," adds he. He repeatedly urges the government to support mountaineers who silently bring glory to the country but are suffering ter-and reverts with a positive response.

Patience and power

Production consultant of Dynasties, DHRUV SINGH, says that tiger is one such animal that can freeze for unimaginable lengths of time. By Team VIVA

Phone Circle Consultant in the epic wildlife series Dynasties. He was vital in liaising with the Forest Department and local community in Bandhavgarh to make the filming happen. He also spent several days on the field filming with the production crew, given his expertise and awareness of the local scenario and challenges.

Tell us about your journey. How did you get into this profession and how many wildlife shows have you been a part of?

Since my childhood days, I have been interested in wildlife, all thanks to my parents, who pioneered the wildlife and ran one of the first wildlife lodges of the country in Bandhavgarh, Bhopal in 1978. I was brought up in Bandhavgarh and had been exposed to tigers since childhood. Initially, in this profession I was a wildlife photographer. I can still recall the day I got an opportunity to work on a wildlife documentary and since then I never looked back. So, I have been working on such documentaries since the year 1996. My first film was the Lands of the Tigers (1997), which was a groundbreaking film of BBC on the Indian subcontinent and it was one of my most enjoyable experiences in life. That's how my passion for tigers and wildlife grew and turned into a profession.

What is that one trait of a tiger that is distinct from other animals?

The trait that appeals me the most is the patience, especially when they are about to hunt. And because I have spent all my life with tigers, I have observed them. A tiger can absolutely freeze for unimaginable lengths of time. There will be absolutely no movement. One can never sense that the animal is around them. So when a tiger is inquisitive, it would just freeze in any position. And you can see that in some of the parts of

How difficult was it to shoot in Bandhavgarh Reserve for the

It was a struggle that we knew we were getting into. I would like to advice people, who want to make a film or a documentary on the animal — do carry a few pills for blood pressure because it's a real challenge. Actually, filming wildlife itself is a challenge as it's among one of a few professions or maybe the only type of genre, where the subject you're going to film is completely uncertain. There is no surety whether you're going to see a tiger or not. There could be days when you wouldn't see a tiger at all. There was a part of the shoot, where out of three weeks, for two weeks we didn't find a single Raj Bhera, the tigress. It was a very stressful moment for the entire crew. However, shooting in Bandhavgarh, we had the best possibility of seeing them because it has the highest numbers. We knew the territories, which part of the park to find them. So we had the best knowledge and that made Bandhavgarh the perfect location to film the show

What is the current situation of tigers in India? Is it better than before? If yes, then how and what more can be done to help conserve the tiger? I would answer that in two ways. The number of tigers is before but even that is worse. Where will they go and how can we create a space for them is a challenge. And to answer that further, the government of Madhya Pradesh has taken bold steps. Because of their conservation efforts, the numbers have increased. And this is a problem that they have foreseen that when the numbers will grow, where would the tigers go. They have made efforts by making headway into programmes by which they can keep them evenly. They can move them from parts which are big in numbers to areas that have smaller number of tigers. It was very successfully in Panna, where the numbers had drastically dropped. They were able to repopulate by bringing them from other tiger reserves.

Does filming in proximity in the jungles disturb the ani-

The reason why I agreed to work with Sony BBC Earth for Dynasties was that they deeply respect the space for animals. And It was very clear that this film about tigers in their habitat, living a natural life. And that is what was exciting as well as a challenge. In order to make a successful film, we need to have a safe distance. The tiger must not feel your presence, which is a hard thing. So it was all possible because of the lenses we used. The ethics of the channel are very clear. The entire team behaved in a certain manner in which they should. To shoot the tigers, there should not be any disturbance, and the minute a tiger is disturbed, the shot is of no use to us.

What are the ground realities in the jungles that contribute to extinction of animal species including tigers? What can a common man do to help in tiger conservation?

I feel that people of the country are very responsible as they understand what does it mean to be cruel towards animals. That is why most of the species animals have survived in India. Even though India being the most populated country in the world, there is still room for animals. And that is not only because of education or conservation efforts, it is because people care for animals and that for me is the essence of conservation. It is our duty, me as a filmmaker and every other individual as common person to understand their manner of living. Giving them freedom is what matters the most as everybody likes to live in their natural habitat and live a life as they want. If we let them live on their own terms, this simple means that we care enough to protect them. In a nutshell, the biggest responsibility to have is to fidget nature, national parks, reserves and spend time with animals.

What drove you to the world of wildlife? Tell us your scariest moment while assisting in filming the tiger?

when something happens. However, while filming wildlife, it's scariest part is when nothing is happens. It means that it is scary when you can't find anything to shoot. When a tiger sleeps, it sleeps through out the day. The longest we have gone without seeing a tiger is two and a half weeks, almost 18-20 days. It was so dreadful. It's really difficult because the entire crew's patience is tested to extreme levels. And that's where the production plays a big role in keeping the morale of the team high and keeping them excited.

Neymar Jr and Kylian Mbappe trains during session PSG/Twitter

Mbappe urges Neymar to stay

 $F^{\text{rench World Cup-winner Kylian Mbappe urged}} \\ \text{troubled Brazilian Neymar to stay at Paris Saint-}$ Germain on Friday as he apologised for sparking speculation about his own future at the club.

Mbappe, speaking before the Champions Trophy against Rennes in Shenzhen, China, said Neymar was a key player for the French league-winners who are desperate for success in Europe next season.

"Everyone loves him and I love him so much," Mbappe said of Nevmar, who has been linked with a return to his former club Barcelona.

"I don't want him to leave the team, obviously. I want him to stay. When you think about his situation and then he plays very well and he cooperates with the team you can see what he means

The 20-year-old Mbappe, who smashed 33 goals for PSG last season, also doused any lingering concerns over his own plans after he talked about playing "elsewhere" at the French league awards ceremony in May.

"I think it wasn't the right place (to say that)," he told reporters in southern Chinese city. "I'd like to say sorry to the players who were there, because I spoiled the party."

It has been a troubled few months for Neymar, who earned a three-match ban after an altercation with a fan as Rennes stunned PSG on penalties to win the French Cup in April. Neymar also missed Brazil's triumphant Copa America campaign on home soil after suffering an ankle injury in a warm-up friendly against Qatar. And the 27-year-old has been embroiled in rape allegations, vehemently denied, which were dismissed by Brazilian police on Monday for lack of evidence. "He is still the same Neymar," said Mbappe of his team-mate, who trained with the rest of the squad on Friday. "We all know he is in very special circumstances. However he is training with us and he is still performing his best which is not unusual and after all he is a very good player." Mbappe said he hoped to improve on his 33goal tally next season, adding that Qatar-owned PSG also want to take the elusive next step in the Champions League. "We're going to try to win the two national trophies, to not leave matches to chance," he said. "After that there's the Champions League, which everyone's looking at... we have to take that step. "We've found our way blocked the last few years. It's up to us to find a way to go as far as

Burns keeps Aus at bay

English opener smashes maiden Test hundred to help hosts reach close to Aus 1st innings total

AFP ■ EDGBASTON (BIRMINGHAM)

ory Burns's unbeaten maiden Test century saw him defy Australia for more than six-and-a-half hours as he led a determined England batting effort in the Ashes opener at Edgbaston on Friday. England were 267-4 at stumps on the second day of the first Test, just 17 runs behind Australia's firstinnings 284.

Ashes debutant Burns was 125 not out, with the Surrey left-handed opener, whose innings started on Thursday, receiving a huge ovation from the crowd as he walked off England vice-captain Ben Stokes was 38 not out, having helped Burns add an unbroken 73

Australia's total had been built on a superb 144 from Steve Smith in the former captain's first Test since a 12month ban for his role in a ball-tampering scandal in South Africa.

England, dismissed for just 85 in the first innings of their Test win against Ireland at Lord's last week, resumed on 10-0 with Burns four not out and Surrey team-mate Jason Roy on six.

Roy made a blistering 85 in eventual champions England's World Cup semi-final win over Australia at Edgbaston last month.

But he never looked comfortable on Friday and, on 10, he edged fast bowler James Pattinson low to Smith at second slip, with England then 22-good fortune when given out lbw to recalled paceman Peter Siddle on 14. But in a match already full of overturned decisions, his immediate review revealed an inside edge. Root cashed in as he too, like Burns, completed a 110-ball fifty.

But frustratingly for Root, whose conversion rate of fifties to hundreds is relatively poor — 42 to 16 — he fell soon afterwards when he chipped a Siddle slower ball back to the bowler, who took a fine one-handed catch to end a second-wicket partnership of

Australia's pacemen allowed Burns, who unusually tilts his head towards the right before every ball he faces in a bid to compensate for a dominant left eye, to settle by repeatedly bowling around the wicket and so feeding him runs on the legside.

By the time they went over the wicket to him, Burns was well set. Nevertheless Burns, whose previous highest score in eight Tests was the 84 he made against the West Indies at Bridgetown in January, still spent 36 balls in the 'nervous 90s'.

But a quick single off Lyon eventually saw Burns, the man whom England hope will fill a position at opener that has become even more of a problem for them since their alltime leading run-scorer Alastair Cook's international retirement last year, to three figures in 224 balls including 14 fours.

Earlier, Burns could only watch as Joe Denly and Jos Buttler fell cheaply after tea to leave England

But all-rounder Stokes helped revive the innings.

The left-handed batsman hit several boundaries off secondstring bowling on a sunny afternoon as Australia looked to speed 🛮 up their over-rate.

And when the tourists took the new ball on a relatively placid pitch, Stokes drove Cummins down the ground for four to huge cheers from fans in the raucous Hollies

He stood firm when his son broke down and Peter Smith says he is finally letting emotions get the better of him now that Steve Smith's remarkable resurrection from a oneyear ball-tampering ban seems complete with an Ashes hun-

Smith's grinding knock of 144 off 219 balls pulled Australia out of trouble to a respectable 284 after being eight down for 122 on the opening day of the first Ashes Test against England in ...This one, given the context of all that has gone to get to that point now, and he played under a lot of pressure as people fell around him ... that probably made it. If it's not his best, it's way up there," Peter told The Telegraph. The knock was continuation of a remarkable comeback by Smith after being banned till March of this year for the infamous incident in South Africa. Peter Smith's hand was only one around Steve's shoulder when he sobbed and apologised in a press conference on arrival back in Sydney last Little over a year after that emotional breakdown, Smith Senior couldn't be more proud. "He had worked very, very hard to get to that point. That was one thing he did say to me, it was one of the hardest innings he's had to play. And you could see that in that hundred. And you could see the effect that it was having on him," Peter said.

"For that reason you sort of go with him and enjoy it as well, but also know what he's actually going through. I must admit, to begin with, I had more trepidation than I probably ever have had, which was strange. "Then it all unfolded and it became emotional. It was emotional watching him get his hundred. And I'm still quite a bit emotional about it," coach some time in future but has no interest in the high-profile position at this point.

The hunt is on for the new India coach with incumbent Ravi Shastri's tenure coming to an end with the conclusion of the tour of the West Indies.

Ganguly said he's definitely interested in the India coach's job but not at the moment as his plate is full.

'Definitely, I'm interested but not at this point of time. Let one more phase go then I will throw my name into the fray," Ganguly said.

Former skipper Sourav of Bengal (CAB) president, too far from the system that besides being associated with decides the coach," Ganguly the team Advisor. He also does cricket commentary and is the host of a popular Bengali quiz

"Currently, I'm associated with too many things — IPL, CAB, TV commentary. Let me complete this. But I will definitely put my hat at some stage. Provided I get selected. But definitely I'm interested. Not now but in the future," Ganguly said.

One of the most successful Indian cricket captains, Ganguly was the chairman of the previous Cricket Advisory Committee (CAC), which picked Shastri as the India coach last time. The recently-appointed CAC, led by Kapil Dev with Anshuman Gaekwad and Shanta Rangaswamy as other members, is all set to pick the new coach. But it seems that Shastri, who has reapplied for the post, would get another term with the India captain Virat Kohli openly endorsing his candida-> Kapil Dev also said that the skipper's opinion needs to be "respected". Ganguly said there were not many big names in the fray this time around.

"Going by the applicants, I don't see any heavyweight names. I heard Mahela (Jayawardene) would apply but ultimately he didn't. There

> After the ODI World Cup, where India lost in the semifinals, they will be back on the road with a full series in the West Indies, beginning with the first T20I in Florida on > Ganguly, meanwhile, said India's upcoming series would be tough against the reigning World T20 champions, who also defeated England 2-1 earlier this year at home.

"West Indies in West Indies will be a lot stronger. T20 is their preferred format. They enjoy playing T20s and they are the current World T20 champions. The two matches

"Test matches will also be tough as they played very well against England. It won't be an easy West Indies tour as it was five years ago. India will be challenged. There are a lot of young players in the team," in Florida will be tough games.

Ganguly said.
"As I've said before you want to see these young players get consistent opportunities. You keep saying horses for courses but I feel 'don't judge a horse if you want to keep them on the course'. Consistency is important for rhythm and confidence," he Ganguly heaped praise on Steve Smith whose brilliant century helped Australia recover from 122/8 to reach a competitive 284 in the opening Åshes Test.

"Class is permanent and you could see it. These sort of hundreds will remain in everybody's memories. Now they have a big chance of winning the match. First innings scores are very important. From that point of view, it's a fantastic hundred.

'To be away for a year and play the World Cup...He has had a quiet World Cup. And then to start the Ashes with a century, especially when the team was down was a remarkable effort. Ashes is the biggest England-Australia battle," Ganguly said.

The regional side will be aiming to get over the disappointment of World Cup with a good result against India.
