Thoroughfare through NSP as water flows continuously

Thoughts inlaid in Juruulla, Srinaila and NSP receive steady streams

Due to heavy rains, rivers faced lot of problems. Official and police failed to make necessary arrangements. In case of Juruulla, Srinaila project, while outflow was only 3.5 lakh cubic metres, officials had ordered all the 26 canal gates to release water at a rate of 60,000 cubic metres per hour. However, due to systematic failure of the TMC of the water project, the Sahastra Bhoomi gate, which was the only one functioning, was restricted to 30,000 cubic metres per hour, which is still very less.

The Srinaila project, on the other hand, is coping with a severe problem. While the outflow from the project is around 50,000 cubic metres per hour, the inflow is around 60,000 cubic metres per hour.

Despite the outflows, the government plans to use the facility for irrigation purposes. The government plans to release water in the fields of Juruulla and Srinaila to maintain the water levels in the reservoirs.

PM concerned over population explosion

For the Kashmiri, the Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Thursday informed the Parliament about the growing concern over population explosion.

Addressing the Lok Sabha on the occasion of Independence Day, the Prime Minister said that the country has to address the issue of population explosion with urgency.

He said, "Population explosion has been a concern for the country for many years. It is a matter of grave concern that the population of the country is growing at a faster rate than the economy and the resources available to meet the needs of the people."

The Prime Minister said that the government is taking various steps to control population growth, including the introduction of the National Population Policy.

He also acknowledged the efforts of the people of the country in controlling population growth, especially women, who have played a key role in reducing the growth rate.

He said, "The people of this country have played an important role in controlling population growth. Women have been at the forefront in this regard. They have been instrumental in reducing the growth rate and have been rewarded with the status of the 'mother of the nation'."

The Prime Minister concluded his address by saying, "We must continue to work towards controlling population growth and ensure that our future generations are not burdened with the cost of maintaining a large population."

India's second-fastest growing state, Nagaland, which has a population of over 6.5 million, has recently announced a series of measures to control population growth.

The state government has decided to provide cash incentives to couples who have only one child and to those who adopt children.

It has also announced a ban on the use of contraceptives and has introduced a law that criminalises the use of contraceptives without a court order.

The government has also launched a campaign to promote small families and has set a target of reducing the fertility rate to 2.1 by 2029.

These measures have been welcomed by the people of the state, who have been suffering from the impact of rapid population growth.

However, critics have argued that these measures are not likely to have a significant impact on population growth.

They have also expressed concerns about the potential for these measures to be implemented in a discriminatory manner, with women being targeted more than men.

The government has assured that these measures will be implemented in a non-discriminatory manner and that women's rights will be protected.

The Prime Minister has also encouraged states to adopt similar measures to control population growth.

He said, "I urge all states to adopt similar measures to control population growth. The issue of population growth is a national issue and requires a collective effort to address it."

The Prime Minister's address on the occasion of Independence Day comes against the backdrop of a growing concern over population explosion in India.

The country's population is projected to reach 1.5 billion by 2030, making it the second most populous country in the world.

The government has been taking various steps to address this issue, including the introduction of the National Population Policy and the National Family Welfare Programme.

However, experts have expressed concerns about the impact of these measures on women's health and rights.

They have argued that the government needs to do more to address the root causes of the population explosion, such as poverty and lack of access to education and healthcare.
Sikkim Chief Minister Prem Singh Tamang appealed to the Centre to reorganise districts of Tamil Nadu and it is a "mark of our approach in practice to truly cherish the values enshrined in the Constitution that any measures have been taken to reorganise districts on the basis of population," he said.

According to his government's priorities, Tamang said, "the government will set up a commission for modernising the polity, society and economy in Sikkim and the Government of Sikkim shall, subject to such directions as the President may from time to time, do its best to establish the commission.

Tamang said that the most important aspect of the new Districts Act is that the chief minister will retain jurisdiction in the current single chief minister system. He said the amendment of the states Reorganisation Act of 1970 and the 2000 amendment will make it easier for the government to split up districts, which is not possible under the current system.

"Sikkim has already borne fruit as one new district for a state has been created," he added.

Tamang also said that Sikkim has a special status granted to the state will not be reduced to any extent under the new Districts Act.

Trump urges China's Pres Xi Jinping to meet Hong Kong protesters

US President Donald Trump said Thursday that a meeting of Chinese Premier Li Keqiang and Hong Kong's pro-democracy activists could lead to a "happy" ending to months of protests. "If it would most directly and personally with the protesters, there would be a happy and neighbourly ending to this conflict," Trump tweeted. Trump appeared to be clarifying a tweet he wrote on Wednesday that "if China would meet personally with the protesters, there would be a happy ending to this conflict." Trump added: "Hope China of course will work hard with Hong Kong first". Trump tweeted Wednesday. But Fox News anchor Brian Kilmeade, who has disseminated in-depth detail to the protesters and warned Beijing to respect the territory's autonomy, had been quoted as saying that China had some "tough questions" for Hong Kong police that were not "credible".

"Hello, this will all be prepared for an orderly way. In the meantime, we are fully prepared for a situation of protests, which could result in a serious situation," Police said.

The senior police officials referred to a "silent majority" of Hong Kong residents, indicating that the unrest was not representative of the whole population.

London: China will ‘not sit by and watch’ and is ready to ‘quell the rogue entity’ if the crisis in Hong Kong ‘worsens’, its ambassador to the UK said. "If the situation deteriorates further into an untenable state, then the central government will not sit back and watch," Liu Xiaoming told BBC’s Jeremy Vine on Thursday.

"We have enough solutions and enough power to quell the current unrest," he said. "Images taken by AFP on Thursday showed thousands of Chinese military personnel storming and fencing off Hong Kong's popular Victoria Park ahead of a planned pro-democracy rally.

"I think some politicians in this country... Still regard Hong Kong as part of the British empire," he said.

UK police urge to oust PM Johnson

Boris Johnson will be succeeded by ‘preferred London Mayor’ as a transition leader, according to the Sunday Times. The newspaper said that Johnson’s successor will be appointed by the London Assembly, rather than being chosen in a national election.

The move comes after Johnson was forced to abandon his bid to leave the EU this year, following a series of Brexit votes in Parliament. The British prime minister has been under pressure to resign after a series of political and personal scandals.

Johnson was succeeded by the Conservative MP, who has previously said that he would not stand for the leadership.

Japan’s new Emperor speaks of ‘deep remorse’ in WWII

The new Emperor of Japan, Naruhito, made his first public appearance since his enthronement ceremony, where he declared a "deep sense of regret" over Japan’s侵略 in WWII, which he said was “a huge tragedy for the people of this nation.”

In his speech, the new Emperor expressed his regret over the suffering caused by the war, and appealed for understanding and forgiveness from the global community.

The war, which ended in 1945, resulted in the deaths of millions of people and caused widespread destruction.

The speech was broadcast on public TV across the country, and was widely praised for its conciliatory tone.

The Emperor’s words echoed those of his predecessor, the late Emperor Akihito, who had also spoken of his regret over the war in 2013.

The new Emperor’s address came as Japan prepares to mark the 73rd anniversary of the end of WWII, which is a sensitive time for the nation, as it grapples with the memory of the war and its aftermath.

N ormally Independence Day speeches by Prime Ministers are consid- ered as statements of intent, but Prime Minister Narendra Modi's address was far more ambitious. He called for a countrywide movement to make India "vastlyustain life". The aim was to globalise the Indian SUB mission. An environmental conscience was a prominent feature of the Prime Minister's address, as he called for a "Mission Clean India" to address the issue of plastic pollution. The Prime Minister also announced a "Mission Green India" to promote renewable energy and combat climate change.

However, the Prime Minister's vision for a "New India" was not without its critics. Some have argued that the push for "vast sustain life" is a way of diverting attention from the country's many social and economic problems. Others have questioned the feasibility of the Prime Minister's ambitious plans, given the country's current economic challenges.

Despite these criticisms, the Prime Minister's address was widely praised for its positive message and optimism. It was seen as a call to action for all Indians to work together to build a better future for the country.

The address was followed by a "Mission Green India" campaign, which aimed to promote renewable energy and combat climate change. ONGC to boost oil production, invest Rs 83K cr in 25 projects

The Indian Oil and Natural Gas Conglomerate (ONGC) has announced plans to boost oil production by 20 per cent to 2.5 million tonnes per annum (mtpa) in the next five years with a capital expenditure (capex) of Rs 83,000 crore. The announcement was made by ONGC Managing Director G.S. Kher during an interaction with stockbrokers on Monday.

The details of ONGC's expansion plans were discussed extensively. Kher talked about the robustness of the company's business, which has an enter- prise value of Rs 79,207 crore and a net worth of Rs 79,215 crore. ONGC's production, refining, marketing, and petrochemicals business is expected to deliver net profit of Rs 68,000 crore, a 31 per cent increase from the previous year.

ONGC envisages a natural gas output of over 23 bcm by FY24, Shanker said according to a company statement.

Saudis to regain India’s top oil supplier spot after Reliance deal

Gujarat has been a strong back- bone for Aramco and ADNOC as they look to supply half of the crude oil to India. Aramco and ADNOC are the top players in the Indian oil market, with Aramco holding a 15 per cent stake in ONGC.

The Indian market is a key target for both companies as it is one of the largest crude oil importers globally. India imported 8.2 million barrels per day (mb/d) of crude oil in June 2019, making it the world’s largest importer of crude oil. The Indian government is keen on diversifying its energy portfolio to reduce its dependence on Middle Eastern crude oil.

The deal is expected to provide a significant boost to Aramco and ADNOC’s market share in India, as India is one of the largest importers of crude oil globally. The deal also marks a major step towards the diversification of India’s energy imports, which currently rely heavily on the Middle East.

Asian stocks slump on recession fears

Asian markets were subdued on Thursday as a wave of selling hit the region of late, with investors focusing on negative news from the US and China.

Investors were concerned about the possibility of a US-China trade war after the US announced duties on Chinese goods. The US and China have been engaged in a trade war for over a year, with both sides imposing tariffs on each other’s goods.

In Australia, the benchmark S&P/ASX 200 slipped 0.3 per cent to close at 6,387.70, while China’s Shanghai Composite Index lost 1.6 per cent to 2,991.83. Japan’s Nikkei 225 fell 0.8 per cent to 21,954.71.

In emerging markets, Brazil’s Bovespa was down 0.9 per cent to 89,793.23, while Russia’s Micex was off 0.7 per cent at 1,156.83.

The Indian stock market was one of the worst performers, with the Sensex falling 1.7 per cent in US dollars, in a note.

“Worsen over the US economic recession, weak global cues on trade war and geopolitical risks have led investors to downsize their positions on the back of negative sentiment,” Mizuho's said in a note.

The yield on the 10-year US Treasury rose to 2.096%, its highest level in three months, as investors sold off longer-dated Treasuries. The yield on the 10-year JGB fell to 0.698%, its lowest level in three months. The US dollar fell against all its major peers, the only thing that could lift the US dollar was some of the Fed’s talk back in the past about raising rates, which the markets were not looking for.

However, the US dollar is facing a lot of pressure and the US dollar is not the only currency to fall. The other currencies including the euro, the yen and the Swiss franc are also falling.

The US dollar index fell 0.08% to 97.13 on Monday, while the euro fell 0.32% to $1.1383. The yen fell 0.21% to 107.60 against the dollar.

The US dollar has been sliding in recent weeks, and this has impacted the US dollar index. The US dollar index is a measure of the US dollar’s average performance against a basket of major currencies.

BALANCING TWO ACTS

The dance ballet, Athidhi Devo Bhava, explains the various cultures and traditions of India through a representational piece of performance, reports V SATEESH REDDY

It was a visual treat for the audi- ence who attended the dance ballet at Chowmahalla Palace on Saturday. The evening was dedicated to the memory of the late Telugu film director Ramanaidu, who died last year. The dance ballet was organized by Sangitanjaly Foundation along with Department of Language and Culture, Government of Telangana as part of the 100th birth anniversary of the director. More than 200 people witnessed the alluring dance ballet that was held for the first time.

The organisers informed that India attracts millions of tourists every year but the country is not as well-known as compared to other countries. To attract more tourists, the Telangana government has launched a campaign called Batawa Bhavata that aims to provide a welcoming and energetic experience for tourists. The campaign was launched by Defence Minister Rajnath Singh during the 11th Defence Expo which was held in Hyderabad.

The ballet, which followed, explained the distinct and many cultures and traditions of India — the small components that combine to form the all-encompassing nation. The group highlighted the rich and diverse nature of India, narrating the activities that people follow in regards to livelihood and marriages. The group explained their tradi- tions through the Chinese dance ballet Cloud Gate, an Indian dance with martial, tribal and folk tradi- tions — that has its origins in Eastern India.

The group then explained the beautiful South Indian culture, especially the temples and the architecture of the region. They highlighted the Indian cinema by showing a few excerpts from movies and explained their importance in the lives of Indian people.

Waking up every day, knowing that you have an opportunity to make a differ- ence in someone’s life is a good feeling. She says, “Working with people who are in trouble and need organ donation is not an easy job. There is a need to search for an organ and wait for their organs. Helping organs is like giving our own as a donation. It is not impossible by converting to organ donation. However, I believe that organ donation is the wonderful thing any human can do. Not just in its food but also in its ambiance, La Poca offers an experience that fires all the senses. The fine dining room chose a deep ocean-blue themed setting for the evening. The expansive table was adorned with the pristine white tablecloth and silverware. The dim-lit restaurant, with the dim-lit restaurant. The dinner was as unforgettable as the evening went on.

My favourite dish was the Tres leches cake, which was both sweet and creamy. The cake was covered with a thick layer of whipped cream and topped with a dollop of freshly made chocolate sauce. It was almost too delicious to eat, and the memory of that moment will stay with me for a long time.

The dinner menu was a perfect combination of traditional and modern dishes. From the classic chicken and dumplings to the more experimental foie gras and creme brulee, the menu had something for everyone. The service was impeccable, with the servers not just quick but also attentive to the needs of the patrons. The atmosphere was perfect for a romantic dinner, with the dim lights and soft music creating a serene and peaceful ambiance.

For the main course, I ordered the seared salmon with a side of roasted vegetables. The salmon was cooked to perfection, with the slightly crispy skin and tender, flaky interior. The vegetables were cooked al dente, and the mix of flavors was delightful. I also had the opportunity to try a couple of the cocktails, which were both refreshing and delicious.

As for the dessert, I decided to go with the chocolate mousse cake. It was rich and decadent, with a deep chocolate flavor that was balanced by the sweetness of the mousse. I also enjoyed the trolley of sweets that was brought out to the table, which included a variety of cakes, pastries, and other treats.

Overall, my experience at La Poca was one of the best dining experiences I have had in a long time. The food was exquisite, the service was outstanding, and the ambiance was perfect for a romantic dinner. I would definitely recommend this restaurant to anyone looking for a memorable dining experience.
