Alert RPF jawan saves passenger’s life

A 23-year-old woman was saved by an RPF jawan’s quick thinking when the passenger’s life was at stake. The train was travelling between Hyderabad and Bengaluru when the passenger, who had tied a string to her throat, started losing breath.

The reason for the 90-year-old woman’s distress was a medical condition. The jawan, who had noticed her struggling, immediately called for medical assistance. Meanwhile, he administered first aid and kept her conscious.

In the meantime, a doctor from the nearby hospital arrived and conducted emergency surgery on the woman. She was then rushed to a nearby hospital where she was placed under observation. The jawan, who had saved the woman’s life, continued his duties on the train.

The incident highlights the importance of quick thinking and prompt action in situations where someone’s life is at risk. It also underscores the role of RPF jawans in maintaining safety and security on trains.

Protests against uranium mining gain momentum

A 14 yr old, ORR oustees farmers allotted plots

principal secretary Arvind Kejriwal directed GIDC officials to complete the registration of plots for exclusively in villages of the ORR project. The government allotted 43.48 acres of land to the villagers from the first phase of the project. The Collector also allotted 2.19 acres of land to the villagers of the second phase. The allotment process is under way and will be completed soon.

The villagers were protesting against the mining project, which is being planned in the ORR project area. The villagers are concerned about the environmental impact of the mining project and the displacement of their homes.

Telangana Pradesh Congress Committee (TPCC) president and MP Revanth Reddy has alleged that the state government is not clearing the arrears of Rythu Bandhu payments to more than 50 lakh farmers. In an open letter to Chief Minister K Chandrashekar Rao, Revanth Reddy said that the farmers should be given loans but not fees. He said the government should take a call on releasing the money and stated that the Rythu Bandhu scheme would have been delayed due to the KCR government. Despite this, he said that the Rythu Bandhu government had not been delayed with him. He said the TPCC will demand an explanation from the government regarding the release of the linkup fund and the KCR government would not have released the money.

The letter read: "The government is not following any transparent or fair approach to manage the resources. The Chief Minister clearly states that the government isn't able to distribute the money on time. Hence, they delay in releasing the Rythu Bandhu and crop loan waiver might again push the farmers into huge debt trap."

The TPCC chief also claimed that Rythu Bandhu and crop loan waiver would not have been delayed if the KCR government had not delayed the money. He has also stated that the government needs to take steps to ensure in advance that the Rythu Bandhu and crop loan waiver funds.

Revathy Reddy said that the farmers should be given loans rather than fees. He said: "If the government is not able to release the money, then the farmer is left to burn the crop."

He also noted that the government is not able to release money even though the PTTI has released the Rythu Bandhu to Market committee grade-I officials. He said: "The government has been unable to release the Rythu Bandhu even though it has been collected.

"The government has not been able to release the money to the farmers even when the farmers have been unable to live on their crops," he added.

Revathy Reddy also informed the Chief Minister that the government should take a call on releasing the money and stated that the Rythu Bandhu scheme would have been delayed due to the KCR government. Despite this, he said that the Rythu Bandhu government had not been delayed with him. He said the TPCC will demand an explanation from the government regarding the release of the linkup fund and the KCR government would not have released the money.

Money laundering is an offence and he told the "special judge" that he had acted "in tune with the provisions of the Prevention of Money Laundering Act, 2002," he told the bench, adding that the economic activity of a nation and India has an obligation to fight money laundering activities across the world.

Referring to provisions of the Prevention of Money Laundering Act (PMLA), Mehta said that the protections that material collected during the probe is subject to a judicial authority in a wider context. He also added that there was a need for a better legal framework to ensure that the probe is conducted in a manner that is not contrary to the constitutional and legal framework.

In support of his arguments, Mehta quoted a string of case citations and added that "we have no choice but to act."

Mehta, appearing for ED, said during arguments before the Supreme Court Thursday and Friday, that the court must take note of certain factors, which he said are "crucial" to the case. He said that the court must take note of the fact that the Prevention of Money Laundering Act has come under attack due to the recent international developments.

Mehta said that the Prevention of Money Laundering Act has been in operation since 2002 and that it has been used in several cases to investigate and prosecute cases of money laundering. He said that the Prevention of Money Laundering Act has been used in cases of drug trafficking, terrorism, and other serious crimes.

US to keep 8,600 troops in Afghanistan after deal

President Donald Trump on Thursday announced that the US will keep about 8,600 troops in Afghanistan after the planned withdrawal, a permanent presence that will accomplish “zero goal.”

Trump’s announcement comes amid mounting concerns over the situation in Afghanistan, where the Taliban have made significant gains in recent months.

Trump’s decision is in line with his goal of ending America’s longest war, which has been going on for more than 18 years.

Trump also said that the US will withdraw all troops if the Taliban agree to a cease-fire and if the Taliban are not engaging in violence.

Opening up for what?

It seems unlikely that the Cabinet's decisions will lead to a flurry of FIUs amid major structural changes in the country. Such an outcome is unlikely for a number of reasons. First, the announcements are more profound than actual. As per the cabinet's announcement, the number of FIUs will increase from 23 to 45. Yet, the reality is that the existing FIUs have not been used to the fullest extent. In terms of compliance, these FIUs have not been effective in detecting and reporting suspicious transactions.

Second, the announcements are likely to be perceived as a political move rather than a genuine attempt to strengthen the anti-money laundering framework. The government's track record in implementing anti-corruption measures is not impressive, and there is a lack of transparency in the appointment process for the heads of these FIUs.

Third, the announcements are likely to be fraught with practical challenges. The government needs to ensure that the new FIUs have adequate resources, training, and technological support to carry out their mandate effectively.

In conclusion, while the announcements are welcome, they are unlikely to result in a significant change in the financial landscape of the country. The government needs to take concrete steps to ensure that the new FIUs are effective in detecting and reporting suspicious transactions. Only then can the country hope to combat money laundering and terrorism financing effectively.

The Indian Constitution, the Government of a State accepts a unique position. Thus, by virtue of the Constitution, the Governor, presiding over the legislative assembly, has the power to call, adjourn and prorogue the assembly, to preside over the convocation of the State and to perform all such other functions as the Constitution confers on him. It may be noted that the Governor can, in the absence of a quorum, continue the assembly and adjourn it for the day.

The Governor, by virtue of the Constitution, is appointed to the office of Governor by the President of India on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, in consultation with the leader of the majority party in the State legislative assembly, on the advice of the Council of Ministers and with the concurrence of the Governor. The Governor, in this capacity, has the power to refuse assent to any bill passed by the State legislature, and in such cases, the Governor’s refusal can be overruled by the State legislature by a majority of two-thirds of the members present and voting in the legislative assembly.

The Supreme Court, in Jayalalithaa’s case, went on to say that a Governor was a functionary under the Constitution of India and was not an administrative officer of the State, and that action taken by him could not be interfered with by the court.

The appointment of convict SKM leader, PS Golay, as Sikkim CM has thrown up some interesting questions about constitutional propriety because the Governor in the matter had acted beyond his jurisdiction.

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman’s stimulus package has been described as ‘too little, too late’ to prevent a contraction in vehicle sales, and to cut GST rates together with a vehicle-scheme window, which will need to be seen to shore up the declines, Fitch Ratings said on Thursday. On August 5, 2019, Sitharaman announced a package to boost consumer sentiment and the auto industry. The package promised limited benefits to the auto sector and increased government spending to bolster the economy. In this context, Fitch Ratings said, “The package, unveiled as the first of three planned stimulus packages, includes a reduction in the excise duty on BS-VI vehicles, a boost to auto export credits, an overall increased government spending of 2 6% of GDP and accelerated refunds of goods and services (GSGT). “We believe that this initial stimulus package is focused on a vehicle sales tax cut in FY2020Q4 2019-20, a phase-out of the automotive sector’s decade-long, self-inflicted moribund condition, and some pressurised pressure on the sector’s unviable 11.8% per year-GDP growth. In addition, some strong stimulus policies will be developed to boost the domestic auto manufacturing, which we feel need must be a priority and are critical to make sure the government’s commitment to make in India is fulfilled. We believe that the government understands the gravity of the situation and how impactful this initial package will be for the country’s auto sector.” Fitch said there were some shortcomings in the stimulus policies directly focused on the country’s auto sector. Therefore, the government announced initiatives to assist the auto industry in a more pragmatic manner, Fitch Ratings added. “We believe that an important area of focus is the support to new and existing components in the automotive sector and in the broader auto supply chain. We also note that the government has indicated that it will increase the green stimulus timings in registration fees will have a very marginal impact on consumers and business sentiment, whose trajectory through the announcement of a 20% duty instrument that provides a 20% excise duty cess rebate on production at the industry’s manufacturing unit. “This is because the delayed implementation of the package and the potential impact on consumer spending and production will not support consumer spending power and the increased stimulus will be used by consumers, as the government said in July 2019, to buy goods.” Fitch Ratings said. “However, we believe that the increased government spending will have a stronger impact on consumption for vehicles, but it does not address the capacity utilization and production adequacy in the industry, in addition to the working capital demands of the automobile industry.” Fitch added. “The measures may increase the demand for government spending in the long term. The automotive sector has a significant share of its revenue from the government, in the form of taxes. We believe that the liquidity crisis in the shadow banking sector will have a significant impact on the demand for new vehicles from both businesses and consumers.”

Today's television shows are regressive: SUPRIYA PATIHK

Television soaps of today have become a pale shadow of its successful pioneers, to the point that modern-day soaps have nothing new to offer than repetitive plots and characters that refused to acknowledge modernity.

Not so for serials like "Khichdi", "Mr.kitli", "Koi... Mil Gaya", "Kasam", or even "Aap Ke Aa Jane Se Acha".

"They were the shows that brought something new to screens," said Suhasini, a long-time serial spectator. "They were not just about the usual melodrama, but had characters that were relatable and had depth.

But today's soaps are not that. They are all about drama and conflict, with characters that are one-dimensional. The plots are predictable and the writing is not up to the mark."

"I have been a fan of serials for a long time, but I have stopped watching them now. The quality of content has really gone down," said another viewer, who did not want to be named.

The conventional soaps have been replaced by reality shows and web series, which have a more unique appeal to the younger audience. "I prefer watching reality shows and web series because they are more engaging and offer something new," said a 30-year-old viewer.

The的一代, or the "theatre generation", as they are known, are not the audience for modern-day soaps. They prefer content that is more authentic and relatable. "I am more interested in watching shows that are based on real-life stories," said a 25-year-old dentist.

However, Suhasini and others believe that the industry needs to change its approach to serials. "We need to create shows that are unique and have a message," she said.

The industry, on the other hand, is notndering what its audience want. "We create shows based on what we think the audience will like," said a producer.

But viewers want more than that. They want shows that are thought-provoking and have a message. "We need to create shows that can inspire and motivate," said a 45-year-old teacher.

The industry needs to take a step back and listen to its audience. If it does, it will be able to create soaps that are relevant and engaging. Otherwise, it risks losing its audience to other forms of entertainment.
KABADDI: THE GAME OF PARTITION

This play is a testament to the mass that was made to participate in one of the biggest political gambles ever. What the people went through at the time is what has carried the legacy. SAHAO MANIA GRIPS TELUGU STATES

In Hyderabad alone, the film is being screened in 95 of the 98 single screens, making it a record of sorts.

It would be a classic case of Hobson's choice for moviegoers this weekend, as Prabhas-starrer ‘Saaho’ Telugu release of the week, will be occupying almost all of the 2,400 or so single screens state in Telangana state. A high-octane action thriller, the film, released on August 15, is expected to be showing in all 98 single screens at the Nizam region, which accounts for almost 60% of the total 1,600 screens in the state.

Although the makers initially considered arriving on December 6, delay in the filming of the climax, which is also why the release has been moved to December 20, the only thing that has been confirmed so far, in the wake of a couple of duds — ‘Kathi’ and ‘Comali’ — is that, for his third film as a director, he has gone in for a couple of shifts — action and stunt sequences. In addition, there is an entire third act that has not been shot yet.

Meanwhile, we hear that Dil Raju’s production ‘Bheeshma’ is going on a full swing. T he Joker has been around for almost 80 years and there’s no shortage of interest in the character. There are even some legendary comic book artists who have brought The Joker to life in their own unique way. But where does this fascination come from? Is it simply the result of The Joker’s unique appearance, or is it something more? Whatever the reason, there’s no denying that The Joker remains one of the most iconic villains in comic book history.
