Human Milk Banks struggling for survival

H uman Milk Banks (HMBs), which can help prevent premature deaths from infection, is struggling for take-off and survival due to inadequate financial support, lack of government patronage, and mismanagement. In order to ensure adequate supply of breast milk, research has shown that there must be a demand, researchers have found.

By providing pasteurization, HMBs are also making important contributions to India’s health in the Indian context. HMBs are playing a critical role in India’s health where the number of neonatal deaths and stillbirth deaths are high. HMBs are helping to address the issue of safe and sufficient breast milk for vulnerable infants.

The researchers have identified the infrastructure (HMBs), funding mechanisms, operating procedures, policies and federal and state quality assurance.

However, the doctors have left behind vulnerable to human oral care and human oral care products. The HMBs are struggling for survival due to inadequate financial support, lack of government patronage, and mismanagement.

North Korea says latest test was ‘new weapon’

AFP

North Korean leader Kim Jong Un reviewed the test of what he called a ‘new weapon’ on Saturday, the same day he marked the 80th anniversary of the foundation of the ruling Workers’ Party in Pyongyang.

The statement said a ‘new weapon’ test had been carried out in a manner that led to ‘very important results’.

Kim, dressed in a red jacket, white coat and black trousers, was accompanied by officials including Kim Yong Chol, a former spy chief who has been removed from a high-profile nuclear diplomacy role. He also attended in the 1970s.

North Korea said the test was designed to make the journey to a target point in the ‘Vast Area of the Sea’.

In a separate report, the country’s state media cited a report by Sputnik that the test involved a ‘supersonic weapon’. The report said the weapon was likely a ‘hypersonic glide vehicle’. The term refers to an armoury that can fly at supersonic speeds and then slip into a much faster glide. The report said the test was carried out at about 400 kilometres (250 miles) before the weapon appeared to be two short-range missiles.

The regime said Pyongyang fired what it described as a new tactical guided weapon in a region that poses a direct threat to the United States.

Two North Korean men have been arrested on charges of stabbing a girl in South Korea after offering her coffee, police said. The two men, who were identified as 25-year-old Jin Young-gi and 34-year-old Cho Yong-jin, were found with knives in the pocket of the black female who was stabbed in the stomach and a wound to her arm, police said. The victim was taken to a hospital for treatment. The police said they were questioning the two men to determine their motive for the attack.

The shooting at a mall in South Korea on Thursday was the latest in a series of incidents in the country involving affronts to women. The incident comes after a recent study showed that women in South Korea are more likely to experience sexual harassment in public places than in other countries.

The police said they were investigating the incident as a possible hate crime, but did not specify the motive.

In 2017, the South Korean government passed a law to protect women from harassment in public places, but the law has not been enforced effectively.

The police said they had arrested two men, including a 25-year-old man, who had stabbed a woman at a shopping mall in the city of Suwon, South Korea.

The two men were identified as a 25-year-old man and a 34-year-old woman. The police said they had received a report of a stabbing at a shopping mall in Suwon, about 40 kilometres (25 miles) south of Seoul, on Thursday morning.

The police said they had arrested the two men and were investigating the incident as a possible hate crime.

The police said they had also arrested a 36-year-old man and a 34-year-old woman for的可能性 in the case.

The police said they were still investigating the incident and had not yet determined the motive for the attack. They said they were questioning the two men to determine if they were acting alone or if they were part of a larger group.

The Indian subcontinent, particularly India, has had a long tradition of reliance on science and technology. The invention of the wheel, the compass, the calendar, and the concept of zero are just a few examples. India has a rich history of scientific and technological achievements. The ancient Indian mathematician and astronomer Brahmagupta, for example, made significant contributions to the field of mathematics. His work on arithmetic, algebra, and geometry was groundbreaking. The concept of zero, which is fundamental to modern mathematics, is also credited to Brahmagupta.

However, despite these achievements, India's position in terms of science and technology is not as strong as one might expect. The country has a long way to go to reach the level of other scientifically advanced nations. While India has a large number of scientists and researchers, the number of researchers engaged in research is not commensurate with the country's population size.

In terms of research and development (R&D) spending, India is also lagging behind other countries. The government spends close to 1.5 per cent of GDP on R&D, which is lower than many other countries. The private sector also spends a significant amount on R&D, but the total expenditure is still not enough to support the country's scientific and technological growth.

Another crucial pillar is a strong policy framework. The government has to create a conducive environment for firms to develop and manufacture new technologies. A number of detailed guidelines, which require firms to develop and manufacture new technologies, have been released. However, the implementation of these guidelines is often lacking, and the enforcement of regulations is not strong enough.

In conclusion, India has a long way to go in terms of science and technology. The government needs to increase its spending on R&D, create a strong policy framework, and encourage firms to develop and manufacture new technologies. Only then can India achieve its goal of becoming a scientific and technological powerhouse.

Dilli slams Centre for taxing Durga Pujas

A group led by the BJP had raised a demand that the Central government’s decision to tax the Durga Puja in Kolkata is illegal. The West Bengal government has also announced that it will not tax the Puja. The BJP leader Pramod Tiwari alleged that the Centre’s move is illegal.

"It is an insult to the Puja — what about the money spent by political parties on other festivals? There have been religious festivals in the past which have taxed a huge amount of money," said Pramod Tiwari. "Why should the Puja be hit?"

"One thing the Centre has not yet said is who will take care of the puja," he said.

"In earlier years, the Centre had issued a notification that the puja is a religious festival," Senior BJP leader Poonam Sinha said. "But now, suddenly, the Centre has announced that it is a commercial festival."

"The Centre has no right to tax this festival," she said. "We will challenge it in court."

The Government is working on a number of measures to boost liquidity and demand, with the Centre and the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) set to announce steps to address current concerns in the real estate sector and under-strength in the manufacturing sector.

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman today told The Economic Times that the Centre was taking all possible steps to boost liquidity in the economy.

The finance minister was responding to a question on the Indian capital markets (equity amount of Rs 1.5 trillion) being pulled out a net amount of Rs 55,000 crore in the month of August due to the US-China trade war.

"International investors have pulled out a net amount of Rs 55,000 crore in the month of August due to the US-China trade war. The US government continues to keep the situation under watch because of its high debt and trade deficit," she said.

Financial Services, Piyush Goyal, added: "We have received the feedback from the market in this regard. While this is a serious situation, I want to assure the farmers that the government will find solutions for them."

The finance minister also said that the government had increased the amount of foreign direct investment (FDI) under the automatic route. A manufacturing sector under the FDI automatic route will now get 100 per cent foreign direct investment, which was earlier 74 per cent.

"This will be a big boost for the manufacturing sector," she added.

Iyer flexible at bat at any position

West Indies skipper Jason Holder has defended India’s Oriol Coetzer, who is in contention for the Test series against the Windies, saying that he is a good enough batsman to be considered for any position.

Holder said Coetzer’s ability to adjust his technique has been crucial in his recent form, and he is confident that he can handle any role given to him.

“We are confident that he can perform at any position. We have seen his adaptability and he is a good enough batsman to fill any gap,” Holder said.

On the flip side, West Indies coach Justin Langer has said that Coetzer’s batsmanship is declining, and he is not performing well in Test cricket.

“Coetzer’s form has been under pressure recently, and we are concerned about his performance in Test cricket,” Langer said. "We need to find a way to improve his batting in order to keep him in the side.”

In other news, England’s Ben Stokes has revealed that he will miss the upcoming Test series against the West Indies due to a finger injury.

Stokes, who has been out of action since the 2019 World Cup, underwent surgery on his finger last month and has been advised to rest for a further two weeks.

Stokes said: “I’m very disappointed to have to miss this Test series. I’ve been working really hard to get back into shape and I’m frustrated that I won’t be able to play.”

The England cricket team will now have to look for another batsman to replace Stokes in the Test team.
