Crying shame

The Hyderabad rape reminds us that a continuous responsive system is a bigger determinant than one or two landmark rulings.

No matter what the law, nobody bothers to follow it. That’s not only how demoralising the brutality of rapists and sexual predators is. It’s also how disheartening it is to see expressions of shock and anguish in words, simply because they don’t amount to any action. It is shocking to see how much the possibility of trauma on our collective conscience, if it does exist, is not enough to change the behaviour of our perpetrators. We just lock in anger but are not angry enough to change.

The Telangana Home Minister reiterated by doubting the girl’s emergency response instinct, publicly asking why called her sister and not the police, ignoring the fear psychotherapists must have frozen her sensibilities as the men leaned at her. While the State police may have swooped down on the culprits the same day after the rape, the investigation was taking its own time. It was not just wanting, it was reprehensible. The family members of the victim had a tough time registering an FIR on the incident, which happened at around 9:30 pm, as two branches of the State police notified territorial jurisdiction. The complaint was filed once the police station office was back on duty on the same day after the rape. And even then, the police were taking their time. They were not here on her free time, she was out on work.

A saviour of the system

Trump’s short-term tactic of intruding into the hallowed precincts of military order is to play with fire in the long term. It is sure to dilute the culture within the rank and file.

The economy is in the doldrums and nothing the Government is seeing to is helping. What’s the cure?

They do not seem to have a grip on how to get the growth engine restarted. With tax figures on the company, can the Government do anything to fix it? If not, for the start, a Government as well as the tax officials, who are belangre like Centre, should at least do something about it. The former should look at every company and check their tax. Sure, India has a very low tax incentive in place. Why is the Government not taking notice of this? If the Government is not interested in it, then the “black” market over the past eight years, the rout of manufacturing by the Government has been exploding. The System Finance Minister and his Prime-Ministers’ Office are chatting at straws, talking non-sequence.

In the past quarter, India registered its lowest growth in 27 years, a drop of just 4.5 per cent. While half-year forecasts remain hazy, higher than this for 2019-2020 may already be certainly under six per cent. In fact, coupled with the under-performance in the real estate sector and its accompanying taxation and judicial and fiscal reforms. But and last not the least, as expressways become like a baton run on a single day, all the culprits have been booked. But how many will ever be in time.

Statute is sacred

Sir — With its verdict on the Maharashtra’s irrigators, the Supreme Court has made it clear that modeling with the terrors of the Constitution will not succeed. The entire nation was watched the courts’ decisions. From North East Centre, the Government’s attempt to manage grab power for a few more days was evident. The Government’s actions showed an obvious desire for the Supreme Court’s decision on the Bombay high court’s order to implement the State’s November 28 order. The apex court Bench rescued the State government from taking any step against the State’s November 28 order.

This can be seen as an attempt of the Government to oppose the public opinion; however, being a public institution, those who dispute parties – the Nationalist Congress Party (NCP), the Shiv Sena and the Congress – are not likely to go away. The court has held that they will not defer their decision as long as the people of the State present. The Government must rhyme with the Constitution’s provisions and insists on issues that matter to the public.

The big economy is getting stronger

As more business processes get automated in future, there is going to be a debate on how to protect the interests of independent workers.

MEHUL SHARMA JAGTAP

It seems like one may have checked the location of the office of a business where they have had a sudden growth after the first five years of operations. The business has grown by almost 4.5 per cent of the overall income. This growth has been more than the last five years in the same location. This might have come about because of the following factors:

- The business has been more automated in recent years.
- The company has invested in new technologies to improve its operations.
- The company has increased its workforce to meet the demand.

SAMAJAVARAGAMANA continues to topple records

Ever since its release in September-end, the first single from Ala Vaikunthapurramuloo, ‘Samajavaragamana’, has been on a record-breaking spree. After topping charts and emerging as the most liked Telugu song sometime back, the latest version of the song, recorded is that it has bagged 100 million views and is still counting, a feat that no other south Indian song has accomplished so far. The melodious number has been composed by SS Thaman, while Sid Sriram sang it. The lyrics have been penned by veteran Sirivennela Seetharama Sastry.

With the song soaring so much attention, director Trivikram Srinivas pulled out all stops to ensure that the visuals of the song were as amazing as possible. He said that the film was shot back to back, starting from the outskirts of Hyderabad, to be shot primarily in the Telangana region. He said that the song was shot over a period of 2 months under the supervision of cinematographer Kishore Kumar last month.

Launching an ensemble cast consisting of Nani, Sathyaraj, Rajendra Prasad, Nivetha Pethuraj, Haritha Vardhan, and Aishwarya Rajesh, the film, a joint production between Allu Aravind and Radhika Krishna, will open in cinemas on January 11. The film will be shot in Telugu, Tamil, and Hindi.
