Unlock the power of partnerships

It's time like-minded organisations come together to forge collaborations that can catalyse public health and development. The author says Sita R BUDARAJA and RANJAN WADHWA.

The vision of a sustainable and equitable world forge on with the Paris Agreement in place. But it will take all of us to keep us on track. Governments, civil society, the private sector, and individuals must work together to reach the 1.5°C climate stabilization target and limit global warming by reducing greenhouse gas emissions. When nations invest in areas, including health, nutrition, and education, their children’s lives are improved. When public and private funding growth is robust, a nation's human capital—knowledge, skills, and health—can be enhanced.

The authors believe that in order to achieve these goals, public private partnerships (PPP) need to be redefined. PPPs that link the public and private sectors and have the potential to be a key driver or catalyst to drive transformation and help reach the SDGs.

Recent history witnessed some powerful examples of such partnerships. The India Health Fund, which is focussed on strengthening India's health system, is one such example. The fund has a strong partnership model, and collaboration and coordination can lead to significant impact on the development of solutions and implementation from these findings and experiences.

Technology can help public sector organisations become a viable partner in addressing crucial health and development challenges. Many companies are embracing technology to help address challenges such as the global fight against the COVID-19 pandemic.

However, with the exception of research, resources, reach, and expertise, the private sector has been absent in the development of India’s health system. The private sector’s role in India’s health system is underdeveloped. With the exception of research, resources, reach, and expertise, the private sector has been absent in the development of India’s health system. The private sector’s role in India’s health system is underdeveloped.

Despite these efforts, there is still a huge scope for alliances and partnerships to further the momentum. High-level time-related collaborations came together to forge partnerships that catalyze public-private collaboration and accelerate the adoption of technology. These partnerships are primarily driven by the need to improve health outcomes for the nation, vastness in terms of both quality and quantity issues. This makes it clear that there is a need to be aware of the landscape of changes that nations are facing in order to make a digital leap towards the industrial revolution.

Digital infrastructure is now forming the backbone of the growth of all types of organisations. The introduction of artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning is revolutionising the health system in the world, right behind China and the US. However, this is not enough.

The Government has made several efforts to encourage the use of technology in its own service delivery systems. The use of technology in health care has been a reality for a long time.

Anand Kumar, who runs a coaching centre for students of all levels, experience and background, says Kritika when asked about the drives behind her passion. "It all started when I was 10 years old. I was never good at handstands, so I was always struggling to get out of the class, and before I knew it, I was taking part in various kinds of sports and began doing well in them. I took part in almost every sport at the school. I even participated in national-level competitions and eventually took up athletics after my Class 10," she says.

Bollywood goes ‘social’

For Bollywood, 2019 was the year of socially relevant films that straddled box office success with hits like Bala, Article 15, Gully Boy having cerebral content.

One of the biggest money spinners of the year was Koffee with Karan, which was also a misfit in the minds of many. But, Bollywood offered a counter narrative in the form of Jawaani Jaaneman starring Saif Ali Khan, Kapoor Khan, and Boney Kapoor. Deadpool and Marvel

Bala and Good Newwz, which focussed on the issue of male pattern baldness, also offered a brave take on the subject, these two stood out. Lagaan, starring Sonam Kapoor in the lead role, was one of the first major Bollywood productions in deals with homosexuality though there was some controversy. "I want people to see that there is always an opportunity for a person to pursue their passion and dream. People go on their dreams but sometimes their passion or interest lies. One should be unafraid to look for one's passion. Believe that you can and be who you are meant to be."

In the past, there were attempts to talk about social issues through films, but the approach was different. There was a need for a fresh perspective, a new way of looking at things. With the success of films like Bala and Good Newwz, there is a sign that films are allowing their writers and directors to experiment with different genres and plots.

"A writer should write what he/she does best, what moves her/him profoundly, no matter the genre or plot. Fortunately, that's what we have in Bala and Good Newwz. The films that deal with social issues and are not afraid to take their place in the mainstream. It shows that writers are allowing that social conscience to influence their work and create a wonderful trend," noted writer Anupama Kulkarni.

The success of Abhishek Bachchan and Varun Dhawan, who have pursued careers in comedy, is a reminder that it is possible to have a successful career in Bollywood. It is also a sign that the industry is willing to experiment with different genres and plots.

"The recent success of Abhishek Bachchan with a film that can challenge the angst of a common man and make a few more aware as a society," added Bhushan.
