A week ago, the Centre launched the NPR in eight states, including Assam and Telangana, with an aim to identify and register all Indian citizens. The move has sparked protests and launches in the country, with the Centre continuing to implement the NPR in other states.

Some states, such as Kerala and Tamil Nadu, have already started the NPR process, while others, like West Bengal and Odisha, have delayed its implementation due to protests. The NPR is scheduled to be completed by March 2023, with a view to replacing the NRC.

The country today needs constitutional experts to put in place a mechanism so that confidence in the Constitution is restored. Gehlot said at a press conference.

The charge sheet has named former managing director of the bank, Vinod Kumar, and chairman M.D. Radhakrishnan and other officials with kickbacks.

Unfair selection

Former Indian star spinner Harbhajan Singh has stirred a hornet's nest by questioning team India selections.

When it comes to论坛-bearing selector's opinions to the cricket team that forms the backbone of India’s cricket team making a fuss about the selection process, one usually thinks of former India captain and current hotelier of the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) Harbhajan Singh. However, it is no secret that it is the most contemporary Harbhajan Singh who has taken to voicing his opinions, questioning the selectors, if it’s a surprise. While the selector’s selection is often a subject of debate, Harbhajan Singh’s viewpoint has been quite controversial.

And now, Harbhajan Singh’s recent statement has once again raised the eyebrows of the fans.

In the recent past, the selector’s selection has been a topic of heated debate. The Indian cricket team’s performance in recent years has been inconsistent, and the selectors have faced criticism for their decisions. Harbhajan Singh’s comments are likely to further fuel the debate, and it remains to be seen how the team management will respond to his criticism.

Focus more on mining sector to regain its 3% share in GDP: CII

The mining sector, which has been in a state of disarray, needs a strategic makeover to boost its contribution to the GDP, according to a report by the Mining Secretariat of the Confederation of Indian Industries (CII).

The report, "The Mining Sector and Its Role in the Indian Economy," highlights the sector's potential for growth and suggests measures to enhance its contribution to GDP.

The report points out that the mining sector contributes significantly to the GDP, with minerals accounting for around 3% of the GDP. However, this share has been declining over the years due to various factors such as declining output, rising costs, and regulatory issues.

The report recommends focusing more on the mining sector to regain its 3% share in GDP. It suggests measures such as increasing investment in mining, improving infrastructure, and simplifying regulatory processes to boost the sector's contribution to the GDP.

The report also highlights the importance of the mining sector in creating employment and generating revenue for the government. It recommends exploring new mining sites and technologies to ensure sustainable and efficient extraction of minerals.

The report concludes that a strategic approach is needed to revitalize the mining sector and boost its contribution to the GDP.

Musharraf challenges verdict in high treason case: Pak media

At a tense trial on Friday, Pervez Musharraf, Pakistan’s former military ruler, tried to stave off his government’s efforts to keep him behind bars for life by arguing that his impeachment under the constitution was illegal.

Musharraf, who was tried and acquitted for high treason last week, was arrested on Saturday, the day the case began, and has been held in prison ever since. His lawyers say he was arrested without a warrant.

The trial began in the capital, Islamabad, with the government seeking to have Musharraf removed from office for his role in a 2008 military coup that ousted the elected government of Benazir Bhutto.

Musharraf, who is currently in detention, has been charged with high treason for his role in the 2008 coup, which he led while serving as Pakistan’s president.

The government argues that Musharraf committed high treason when he imposed martial law and suspended the constitution, thereby nullifying the elected government of Bhutto.

The trial is expected to last for several days, with both sides presenting their arguments. It is the first time Musharraf has faced trial in Pakistan since he was forced into exile in 2013.

Musharraf has repeatedly denied the charges and has said he did not plan to return to Pakistan to face the charges.

The trial is likely to be highly charged and is expected to be a major test for the country’s legal system and its ability to handle such sensitive cases.

Musharraf’s lawyers have already indicated they will challenge the legality of the trial and the constitutionality of the charges.

The government has also indicated it may seek to extend Musharraf’s detention in prison beyond the normal maximum sentence of seven years for high treason.

Musharraf’s trial is expected to be closely watched by international observers, who are likely to be concerned about the fairness of the proceedings.

The case is also likely to have implications for Pakistan’s political future, with the government and opposition parties both seen as likely to use it to score political points.

It is also likely to have implications for the country’s relations with other countries, particularly the United States, which has been critical of the government’s handling of the case.

Musharraf’s trial is likely to be a major test for the country’s legal system and its ability to handle such sensitive cases.

We three cousins were in the same room. I was so excited because I had just returned from being in the army. I had been fighting for my country, and now I was home. My cousins were so happy to see me. They had heard that I was being honored at the governor's mansion, and they wanted to see me. I was so proud of my country and my family. I was so happy to be home.

I want to tell you a story about my experience in the army. It was not easy. We had to fight against our enemies, and we had to do it with courage and determination. I was so proud of my country and my family. I was so happy to be home.
