The Centre and the States are at loggerheads over the implementation of the National Register of Citizens (NRC). After Assam Registrar Prateek SK Sharma said a Left-led Kerala Government refused to implement the NRC, the Centre took the decision to implement the NRC across the country for its “Save National Capital” programme. The Congress, the Left, and the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) are against the NRC. However, the BJP-led centre is pushing for the implementation of the NRC, including in the state of Jammu and Kashmir.

Citizens (NRC) to demonetisation: Rahul Gandhi

Rahul Gandhi, in his speech, called the demonetisation drive “naked power grab” and accused Prime Minister Narendra Modi of trying to “fear-monger” against the Congress.

“The only way to fight against each other cannot be to fight against the economy. The only way to fight against each other cannot be to fight against the people of this country. The only way to fight against each other cannot be to fight against the people of this country. The only way to fight against each other cannot be to fight against the people of this country.”

Rahul Gandhi’s speech was a clear challenge to the BJP-led government, which has been pushing for demonetisation as a way to combat black money and corruption in the country.

Dakshin Kannada: Aam Aadmi Party formations protest against CAA

Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) formations across Dakshin Kannada district have called for a day-long bandh against the Citizenship Amendment Act (CAA) and the National Register of Citizens (NRC).

The protest was organised by the AAP’s local chapter in Dakshin Kannada and was supported by various other political parties in the district.

The AAP has been criticising the CAA and the NRC, arguing that they are aimed at creating a sense of divisiveness and fear among the people of India. The party has been calling for peaceful protests and demonstrations to oppose these laws.

The protest in Dakshin Kannada was one of many that took place across the country in recent days, as people are expressing their concerns about the CAA and the NRC.

The CAA, which was passed by the Indian Parliament in December 2019, grants citizenship to people of Indian origin who have been living in India as refugees or immigrants.

The NRC, on the other hand, is aimed at creating a list of all citizens of India and eliminating those who are not citizens of the country.

The protests against the CAA and the NRC have been met with violence in some parts of the country, with clashes between protesters and police.

The AAP has been calling for peaceful protests and has been working with other political parties to organise coordinated protests against the CAA and the NRC.

Who is Prashant Kishor? Puri asks on poll strategy being roped in by AAP

Arvind Kejriwal’s latest trick is to involve an experienced poll strategist. AAP President Prashant Kishor has been roped in to help the party in Delhi’s Assembly elections. Speaking in the national capital, Kejriwal sought to highlight Kishor’s experience when he was roped in before the Lok Sabha elections in 2019.

Kishor had joined the party in December following the December 12 bypolls, in which the AAP had lost in five out of eight wards.

Kishor was a key part of the AAP’s strategy in the 2019 Lok Sabha elections and prior to that, in the 2014 general elections, when the party came close to forming the government under Kejriwal.

He had served with the party for about a year before leaving the AAP to join the Congress in December 2020.

However, Kishor had quit the Congress in September 2021 and rejoined the AAP, setting up a heated debate in the party about his role.

He had been accused of trying to replace Kejriwal as the party chief, leading to a bitter internal battle.

During the campaign, Kejriwal had accused the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) of using its national leader Arvind Kejriwal’s name to solicit votes while the AAP has been against using the name of its chief minister in the polls.

Kejriwal had also accused the BJP of using the name of its national leader Arvind Kejriwal to solicit votes while the AAP has been against using the name of its chief minister in the polls.

EU chief warns new Brexit delay might be necessary

The European Union (EU) and Britain are at loggerheads again over the terms of Britain’s departure from the European Union, with the two sides each accusing the other of reneging on prior agreements.

The British government has ruled out extending the current Brexit transition period beyond October 31, which is the date set for Britain to leave the EU. In contrast, the European commission has called for an extension to December or March, arguing that it is necessary to ensure a smooth transition and to facilitate trade negotiations.

The situation has raised the possibility of a “no deal” Brexit, which would mean the UK leaving the EU without a trade deal, leading to customs checks and tariffs. This could have significant implications for trade and investment between the two blocs.

Sir Robert Cullen, former Governor of the Bank of Canada, said that a “no deal” Brexit could cause a “significant economic shock” for the UK and the EU.

Sky News reported that British Prime Minister Boris Johnson had told EU leaders that the UK would not accept an extension to the Brexit transition period beyond October 31.

The European Commission is preparing a list of goods that could be traded duty-free with the UK if there is no deal, according to a leaked memo.

The UK has said that any extension to the transition period would be conditional on a political declaration from the EU committing to a comprehensive free trade agreement (FTA) that the UK could then negotiate.

The European Commission has rejected this idea, saying that an FTA is not possible without a deal on the great brexit bargain.

The UK has also threatened to block goods from the EU from entering the UK’s customs territory in a no-deal scenario.

The situation has also raised the possibility of a “managed no deal”, which would mean the UK leaving the EU without a trade deal, but with some kind of customs arrangement in place to manage trade.

The EU has said that it would be willing to consider a managed no-deal scenario if the UK was to demonstrate a “serious commitment” to continuing the transition period.

The situation is likely to remain tense in the coming weeks, with both sides still waiting for the other to make a final decision on a possible extension to the transition period.

Unfair selection

Indian former star spinner Harbhajan Singh has stirred a hornet’s nest by questioning team India selectors.

When it comes to buying wheat, cattle farmers in India’s cricket team making a fuss selected process, one usually thinks of former Indian captain and current BCCI president for the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI), Anurag Thakur Singh. Singh. So a lot of debate is that the former commentator and Harbhajan Singh has often been the subject of attention to himself. His altercation with Andrew Symonds during a Test match against Australia and with Pakistan’s Saeed Anwar during a One Day International (ODI) match, which led to the latter being dismissed and another player being injured, is one of the most memorable incidents of his career.

The question arises: What makes a selector? Is it his knowledge of the game, his experience in the game, or his ability to judge the performance of the players? Some selectors are known for their bias towards certain players, while others are known for their fairness and impartiality. The role of a selector is to select the best players for the team, based on their performance and potential, and to ensure that the team is balanced and capable of winning matches.

The controversy over the selection process is not new. It has been a matter of concern for cricket fans and players alike. The selection process is crucial for the success of the team, as the right players in the right positions can make a significant difference in the outcome of a match. The selectors are in a position of great responsibility, and their decisions can have a big impact on the team’s performance.

In conclusion, the selection process is an important aspect of any team sport. It is important that the selectors are fair, unbiased, and experienced in the game. The team needs to have the best players available, and the selection process is a key factor in achieving this. The selectors must have a clear understanding of the game and a good knowledge of the players, and they must be able to make tough decisions when necessary. The selection process is a complex and challenging task, but it is essential for the success of the team.
Harness AI power to transform healthcare

To address the twin problems of diagnosing cancer early and to treat it at a fraction of the cost, the field of Artificial Intelligence needs to be explored further.

ELURI SHARMA

In the 19th century, the then US President, William McKinley, called for the US Army to focus on the "arsenal of democracy" and declared that it should be "manned by the men of the West, trained by the men of the West, and maintained by the men of the West." This statement underscores the need for ongoing investment in education and research, particularly in areas that are expected to influence the future of society.

Similarly, the development of artificial intelligence (AI) and its application in healthcare is crucial for addressing the challenges we face today and ensuring a better future for all.

In healthcare, AI has the potential to revolutionize the way we diagnose and treat diseases. By analyzing large amounts of data, AI systems can identify patterns and make predictions that human doctors may miss. This can lead to earlier detection of diseases, which is critical in many cases.

However, the implementation of AI in healthcare is not without its challenges. The development and deployment of AI solutions require significant investment in research and development, as well as in infrastructure and training for healthcare providers.

We must also ensure that the use of AI in healthcare is ethical and transparent. It is essential to consider the potential biases that can arise in AI systems, as well as the implications of using AI to make decisions about patient care.

In conclusion, the development and implementation of AI in healthcare is a complex and multifaceted issue. While there are many benefits to be gained from the use of AI in healthcare, it is crucial that we approach this development with care and foresight, ensuring that the benefits are realized while minimizing the risks.

Having missed the first and second industrial revolution of the 19th and early 20th centuries (in fact, China has missed the third industrial revolution) India has a golden opportunity to catch up on the fourth industrial revolution (right now) which is primarily driven by artificial intelligence and the Internet of Things (IoT).

This is an opportunity, which can be missed because of inertia in the government, which is creating hurdles for the start-ups and the ecosystem.

India, has the potential to lead the world in AI-driven Industries. Several Indian start-ups are already showing the world how AI-driven solutions can be created. However, the government needs to make sure that these start-ups are not stopped in the infancy stage of growth.

There is a need for a top-down approach to AI-driven industries, which can be achieved by creating an AI-driven ecosystem. The ecosystem should include the government, private sector, academia, and civil society.

The ecosystem should focus on three key areas:

1. Innovation and Research: The government needs to invest in research and development in AI-driven industries to create a robust ecosystem.
2. Regulatory Framework: A regulatory framework is needed to ensure that AI-driven industries operate within a legal and ethical framework.
3. Education and Training: There is a need for a robust education and training system to ensure that the workforce is equipped with the necessary skills to work in AI-driven industries.

The ecosystem should be driven by the government, which can provide the necessary support and guidance to these start-ups. The government should also work with the private sector, academia, and civil society to ensure that the ecosystem is sustainable.

In conclusion, India has the potential to lead the world in AI-driven Industries. However, the government needs to take a top-down approach to create an AI-driven ecosystem, which can drive innovation and create jobs for the youth.

The government needs to take a more proactive role in driving the AI-driven ecosystem, which can help India to catch up on the fourth industrial revolution.

Delhi in line for full points

At a time when the Indian pacers' workload management has become a focal point and top stars only want to bowl a specific number of overs in red-ball games to get into the groove, the sequence of the Test match as JadHAV and bowled twice extra overs put the team in a 154 balls to bowl down the middle order.

However, all they could manage in the second innings was an 83-run lead which certainly won't help Hyderabad avoid follow-on.

The team will also walk away with a bonus point.
