From the 1920s to now the upcoming 2020s, humanity has evolved on all sorts of parameters — good, bad or ugly but never uninteresting. SUNDAY PIONEER’S special year-end edition brings you a slice of life as it has breathed in the 20 to 20 millennium
Ten decades have seen education programmes in India evolve and innovate but all efforts to shrug the colonial medium of instruction have failed, a chapter of study for policy makers

By Shweta Chhaya

Globally, 1920 was the year of reform in school curricula and styles of instruction.

It is very likely that if you are reading this, you are educated, and if you are educated you are reading. But have you ever stopped to think about why you’re reading this? Why are you studying? What is the point of education? What are you trying to achieve by reading this?

Education is a process of acquiring knowledge and skills. It is a means to an end, and the end is to live a happy and fulfilling life. Education prepares us for the future, and it helps us to achieve our goals.

What is education?

Education is the process of acquiring knowledge and skills. It is a means to an end, and the end is to live a happy and fulfilling life. Education prepares us for the future, and it helps us to achieve our goals.

What are the benefits of education?

Education has many benefits. It helps to improve your skills and knowledge, and it helps you to get a better job.

Value education is a way forward but not without seeing an outcome. Children should actually be given credit for their values. Having debates, declarations and lot of enactments would help when they leave school. But this is only happening in the public schools. What about those where parents are not educated and they fall back on school?

In India, the population is getting more educated, but the quality of education is not improving. The children are learning things that are not relevant to their lives. They are learning things that are not useful to them.

As compared to previous years, 2019 was a progressive year for Education with the Draft National Policy on Education being unveiled in India. It’s the first comprehensive policy proposal on education in the country since 1986 and a major game changing statement. To transform higher education system to one of the best global education systems, the Policy proposes significant changes at both secondary and higher education levels and a greater focus on research and innovation.

Artificial Intelligence: That is helping create personalised training course modules.

Tea-tasting: New training methods are helping to increase the skills of teachers.

Regional Languages: Now even the ME (Main) will be conducted in 11 languages from 2023.

Rise of digital content, E-learning, and broadcasting classes are enabling the delivery of education and training at any time and at any place.

2019 also saw the leverage technology to improve offerings to students.

Cinema, being one of the pillars and mirrors to society in India, should definitely talk more about the issues with education in the country. India has a long way to go, but it has also come a long way in the recent decades. The hope is that the government continues to make efforts in providing quality education to all children, regardless of their background.

Since the 1920s, All India Radio has grown in the right direction. Even today, its reach is phenomenal with no less than 50 crore Indians tuning in on a daily basis. That’s quite an achievement, even if we do not mention the growth of private FM radio and digital radio.

Radio listener Javendra Kumar Dhruve has the bio-data of each and every announcer and programme officer of AIR since the beginning. He regularly posts on their birthdays and other events.

In a vast country like India, community radio is an important feature but unfortunately, it has not flourished much. Even smaller countries like Nepal have around one lakh community radios. In the US, there are millions of such radio stations. In India, we have campus radio but not community.

It used to be expensive and required a lot of infrastructural. Now, with the help of satellites, we can connect to multiple stations simultaneously. Through phone programming, we have reached the stations. Take an example. A poor former whose reach to an AIIMS Professor sounded impossible is today, directly speaking with the doctor who gives them appointments and lives them and gives them treatment. The radio channel. A lot of significant social change that happened across the country have been made by those phone programs.

The All India Radio (AIR) has always ensured appropriate language, right pronunciation and original lyrics. We have never used duplicates music. If anybody did, the punishment was quick and stiff. With the introduction of private FM, we see different content.

There is a stark distinction between AIR and private FM. The policy of AIR is public service broadcasting, information, education and entertainment. There is a change in programming. In the FM world, we program for the target audience. Legal guidelines dictate the manner in which we program. But their main motive is to earn revenue. We see the usage of politically incorrect language and content. This is one side to it, but it is an understandable fact that we have seen innovative forms too.

Comic relief

The Indian millennials can laugh at themselves changing the language of humour since it first began in the 1990s that involved taking potshots at gold diggers.

The major change is this comedy increased choice of storyline and choice of material. It is interesting 15% of comedians think that writing is the most important thing. But people are happy to spend a lot of time in their writing and do not mind that they go through a lot of rejection.

Stand-up comedy has existed in India for over 30 years. In 2008-2009, Vir Das and Papa CJ returned to India to make their mark on the comedy circuit.

Break free from the restrictions of ancient Indian society, the millennials are making their mark in the world of comedy.

I wish to conduct a survey on understanding the millennials of India. This survey gives a gist of the ever-changing mindset of the millennials, which is far different from that of the older generations.

In my land, a lot of options exist to attain you and all are allowed to co-exist. But merely allowing does not do anything. Co-existing is not easy.

Did you mean a way by which you can quickly overcome the negativity of being divisive, which is not any great philosophy?

I do not see any recent revolutions. I have seen so far.

The least difficult because the onus is on one person to keep the audience engaged with no support except a working microphone. The size can vary from five to 50,000, and performance duration can vary from five to 120-150 minutes.

The problem with being divisive is that it is not any great philosophy. Therefore, I would wish a new one.

Product, producer, and director. He did not write his jokes, rewrite his jokes at least 50 times before settling on the correct version.

Time for change

From the time when women didn’t have the right to vote, to only 78 women parliamentarians in India, the country has still a long way to go before they can be fully empowered.

Women’s suffrage is the right of women to vote in elections. Most countries granted women the right to vote in the first half of the 20th century. New Zealand gave the first to women to vote in 1893, while Australia followed in 1902.

The movement made more gains for women. By the early 20th century, women were able to attend college and to train for professions, although not in the same numbers as men. They began to offer more demo- cratic professions like law, medicine, clergy and corporate. In the after- maths of the Women’s Suffrage Movement, women’s economic rights rose in society. Since there was more educational opportunities for women in 20th century, women’s suffrage increased but not to the same extent as men’s suffrage. Rhythm Divine Melody is blessed with eternal flow where music is concerned. Change, since the 1920s when it was spiritual, to 2020 when TikTok has changed the notes, has all been about creativity.

Music on India has been the biggest medium for the promotion of music and music of times. The film industry makes public imaginations much bigger in its release and vice versa. It is easy to see the release of songs in its cinema halls. It has also used more folk music than modern. Folk music in those days was like medicine. Music helped individuals release stress, helped them sleep, and was a premium source of knowledge. Folk music has a household way before it got commoditized.

Earlier, music was viewed as a creative outlet people liked and adopted. People bought tickets to listen to good music. In the presence of time, music moved towards commercialization. It’s no longer used only for therapy. If we look at the music trajectory over the past few decades, we will observe that earlier music was created for human needs, for peace but now it is created for business purposes. In context of music learning, we will see that there is still some purity left in our cultural and classical Hindustani music. If we compare it to using habits, we see that the people neither used to have a ticket of 18-110 years but now it has reduced to 6-70 years.

Similarly, old original music is also still there, but Indian music can still be heard by Indians. This distinction is pretty much made. If I were to ask, come to listen to me and my songs and see not only bring them tickets to dance and enjoy. They come for the music.

India’s music has evolved considerably since its strictly spiritual roots. The 1980s saw the advent of big film industries — the rise of the Hindi film industry, and consequently film music becoming a major part of the average Indian’s musical diet, and the birth of Doordarshan — the largest employer for Indian musicians in South Asia. Label-led industrial distribution of music and western melodies made their way to Indian shores in the 90s and were a rage until the turn of the decade. The continuous change in the music industry was the advent of music streaming a decade later with the likes of Bhans that democratized access to premium quality music for one and all and moved the country’s rich and vibrant regional and indie music industries.

Music and visual aesthetics as films moved away from pure visual representation. In these accounts, theatre became a defining paradigm for incorporating sound within the cinematic frame and providing actors, writers, singers and others for the new need that had arisen.

Song & Say

The Best Thing about Music in 2019 is the emerging talent which is irreplaceable. Social media platforms have helped in providing a platform to so many artists. It’s a good platform for the industry with the rise of independent-singers, too. Everyone is open to new sounds nowadays.

In Hindi music, it is great to see so many artistes growing and making the scenes bigger. I feel very happy about it.

The Biggest Change in the music world is the number of independent talents which are getting recognition and there should be more women (artists and composers).

Even member of the industry should be taken care. One change that I would like to see in 2020 is more talented people from remote parts of our country be recognized. Our nation is full of talented people but they need to be trained.

I would love to see more original music, floating in the industry, in a film or independent music. It is great to have new songs because there are such talented composers, lyricists and singers with new ideas and that would mark the era for us.

A Strong Melody is the foundation of any song. Great lyrics add character. These are the basics one needs for composing any song. In Hindi, the music scene has changed a lot and the kind of listeners have gradually changed. The generation today has a different taste. I’ve noticed that the span and length of the songs have slowed down. The patience level to sit and listen to a song has reduced over the years.

Wishing you all a very Happy New Year!

described India as the Diabetes Capital of the world

The technological advancements in healthcare has benefited millions, including the diabetes market. In 2015, it was valued at $1 billion, but it is expected to grow to $3 billion by 2020. These advancements include wearable devices, telemedicine, and cloud-based solutions. The Indian government has also initiated several programs to improve diabetes management, such as the yushman Bharat program, which aims to provide better access to healthcare services.

 Deaths by Diabetes was reduced due to the introduction of new medications. America’s population also increased in health because of a new interest in nutrition, exercise, and physical health. The death rate decreased by 50% from 1920 to 1930. People are now living longer and have a higher quality of life.

The technological advancements in healthcare have benefitted not just the industry, but also the patients. In 1920, insulin was the only treatment available, but now there are many more options. This has led to an increase in the number of people with diabetes being able to lead normal lives. In 1920, only 32.7% of the new Diabetes cases were due to heredity, while in 2015, this percentage has decreased to 13.3%.

 The 1923 Nobel Prize in Medicine was awarded to Sir Frederick Banting and Charles Best for their discovery of insulin. The discovery of insulin sparked controversy as to who should receive the credit for the discovery. However, the Nobel Prize committee decided to award the prize to Banting and Best, as they were the first to publicly share their findings with the world.

In 2019, science and health experts were told that insulin is the effective treatment for diabetes. The latest technology allows for more precise treatment, leading to better outcomes.

 In India, about 50.9 million people suffer from diabetes and this figure is likely to go up to 80 million by 2025, making it the Diabetes Capital of the world.

The grand Indo-Pacific game

The two high-juliette events held recently in Asia, one in Japan and another in Australia, marked a "strategic shift in the Pacific islands"...
India gears up to play the Great Indo-Pacific Game

Unlike the previous UPA government, which was shaggy about using the term 'Indo-Pacific' in its diplomatic/strategic discourse, the Modi government has clearly articulated its policy towards the region. A series of recent events in New Delhi suggest that India is finally set to play the game, writes SANJANA MOHAN

Along with the rise of China and India, the Indo-Pacific, too, has become a new area of geopolitical significance. As East Asia is a region that is home to the world’s largest economies, and the region is also of strategic significance due to its control of the world’s waterways and the importance of the countries in the region, it is no wonder that the United States, China, and India are all taking a keen interest in the region. The Indo-Pacific region is now a major player in the global economy, and it is expected to play an even more significant role in the future.

India, which has been a member of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) since 1992, is now looking to increase its influence in the region. India has been increasing its diplomatic and economic relations with the countries in the region, and it is hoped that this will help India gain a stronger voice in the region.

The Indo-Pacific region is also of interest to the United States, which is looking to increase its presence in the region. The United States has been increasing its military presence in the region, and it is hoped that this will help the United States gain a stronger voice in the region.

Justice for Rohingyaas: Will it ever come?

The Rohingya of Myanmar are one of the world’s most persecuted communities. Global awareness of them has grown, especially since the Myanmar military launched a brutal crackdown on the Rohingya people in 2017. This conflict has been ongoing since the 1940s, with various military attacks and forced displacement. The Rohingya people have been denied citizenship and human rights, leading to widespread violence, persecution, and human rights abuses.
