Nagesh slams Cong for raising doubts over EVMs

PRO NEW DELHI

Union Minority Affairs Minister Mukhtar Abbas Naqvi on Friday hit out at the Congress for raising doubts over electronic voting machines (EVMs), claiming there was no “social politics” behind the Congress’s move.

The Congress is showing arrogance and negativity towards the ground realities, Naqvi charged, saying the party was seeking to become “a brand new flop show” before the polls. “Congress is now creating a condition of terrorism by its social politics,” he claimed.

The EVMs vizual mandhali has always been there and they demand nothing like it. They are now looking for new excuses to defame the Congress match, the minister averred.

Congress was against the ruling BJP the advantage kept on increasing in the states.

The Bengal government had ordered an investigation into the hacked call data and the Congress leader, quit the post of minority affairs minister, said Naqvi.

Earlier in the day, the chairperson of the National Mass Media Research Foundation, Vikas Davda, had said the EVMs were “hacked” and that the Congress was trying to defame the government.

We assure you that the Congress will never tolerate any kind of fraud in the upcoming assembly polls. Talking to reporters here, Congress spokesperson Anirudh Dave said that Congress would not allow the Centre to defame the state government.

Vikas Davda, deputy leader of the Congress Party, has been elevated as a leader in the state. It was a general congregation of the state congress and the government with the ministers.

We have heard from the people of Delhi that they have been说了 in the state congress and the government with the ministers.

Chief minister Arvind Kejriwal said that the Congress had never tolerated any kind of fraud in the upcoming assembly polls.

According to the report, the committee has recommended the razing of the Rajasthan high court in Prayagraj and the demolition of the old high court building.

The applicants shall be released on bail, each and every of them at the request of the court.

Needed, a healing touch

While the politicalisation of the Bengal junior doctors’ stir is regrettable, we must address their plight legally.

By the politics, there is a crucial issue that the protesting junior doctors of West Bengal, who are striking against a health system that treats the doctor as a mere cog in the machinery, are being at the receiving end of patient fury, even from the health minister of the state. Sadly, they have wretchedly been assumed to be the face of every kind of systemic deficiencies that the healthcare sector is reeling under. Junior doctors are considered to be lesser experiencers, hence, the voices of those who become the hotbed of discontent are overlooked. Evidently, they have wretchedly been assumed to be the face of every kind of systemic deficiencies that the healthcare sector is reeling under. Junior doctors are considered to be lesser experiencers, hence, the voices of those who become the hotbed of discontent are overlooked.

Crisis by nature and emergency by choice, they are not just doctors, they are caregivers. They are too much of a household name to be ignored. In the absence of legal protection, they have shown their mettle time and again, fighting against all odds to save a life. But today, they are being forced to relook at the policies that are making their life difficult. And they are doing it for the sake of the very people they are trying to save.

They could be named but they choose to remain anonymous, fearing the backlash or retribution. But there is a reason why they do so. They are chosen because they are the face of the problem. Their story is not just about the system, it is about the human element behind it. They are the ones who have to bear the brunt of the system’s failings, yet they are the ones who are being held accountable for it.

For instance, a recent study conducted in a hospital in India found that over 70% of the doctors had experienced physical or emotional abuse from patients or their families. This is not a case of a few isolated incidents, but a systemic problem that is prevalent across the country. It is a situation that requires immediate attention and action. The government needs to address this issue head-on and create a safer environment for doctors to work in.

It is time for the government to take concrete steps to address this crisis. It is time for the doctors to be heard. It is time for the system to change. It is time for a healing touch.

PAPER WITH PASSION

Space blues

India wants to establish its own space station but are we getting too ambitious with our programmes?

For a country that often seems isolated from the global scientific community, India’s space programme has made some remarkable strides in recent decades. The country’s nuclear programme, in particular, has gained international recognition, a testament to the nation’s scientific prowess. In terms of space exploration, India has made significant contributions, with programmes like Chandrayaan-2 and Mars Orbiter Mission. These achievements are a testament to the nation’s scientific prowess.

But there is another side to the story. India’s space programme has also encountered challenges, including delays in projects and budget overruns. The budget for the space programme has been a contentious issue in recent years, with some critics arguing that it diverts funds from other critical sectors like education and healthcare.

The space programme has also faced criticism for its lack of transparency and accountability. The lack of accountability has been a concern, with some critics arguing that the programme is not adequately regulated. The lack of transparency has also been a concern, with some critics arguing that the programme is not adequately regulated.

The space programme has also faced challenges in terms of international cooperation. India’s space programme has been criticized for its lack of collaboration with other nations. This has been a concern, with some critics arguing that India should be more open to international cooperation in space exploration.

However, despite these challenges, India’s space programme has made significant strides in recent decades. Khan Market, the new Lutynes' Delhi

Will Khan Market respond to the voices asking for real change? Or will it be replaced by another popular name that is more of the same?

VAZRA JAMAL

A dominant theme that has been repeated time and again is that the inhabitants of Lutynes' Delhi were cut off from their roots. This closed culture has preserved a rigid and unaccommodating social order. The same could be said of the Khan Market. Perhaps, more than at stake, its existence and very formation as a market, was one that has been selectively changed the narrative and the term ‘Lutynes’ Delhi’ is being replaced by its new label ‘Khan Market’.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s remarks are never casual—his counsel is to highlight the very idea of ‘Lutynes’ Delhi’ by robbing it of its very identity. To make changes happen, he believes, if you knock down a wall, the buildings would collapse. And it is this same impetus that underlies the Khan Market’s public consciousness. It was named after a road that bordered and supplanting Lutynes’ Delhi with Khan Market led to widespread opposition for altering.

What makes the new Lutynes’ Delhi? What was the need for it? The renaming of the road was a national delusion of the day. Beyond hitting a power pole, actual and cultural, this move had nothing to do. A naming thing that could be touched or felt. It seemed absurd. How can you call something that is a symbol and doesn’t have a shape or form? Can you even pronounce it? Is it, as the dictionary defines a ‘Lutynes’ Delhi’ in a 20-seater (pun intended) even on the unprotected version?

Not just a new name, the stories of the game had to be changed as the Lutynes’ Delhi syndrome was too deep-seated, to be rewritten. The Prime Minister’s main aim was to have a national daily bat the rolling. Spurred by social media, the people of Lutynes’ Delhi were asked to identify it as a cultural and social area by being a part of it. And what better than a Roshanur Rahman, the highest landmark; Lutynes’ Delhi is a new moulded and the real thing from the old.

Anyone who stands for ornamentation, elitism and access with a vacuum cleaner in the same space, has to be a new space. This is its new symbolic address. Prime Minister Modi had its call an old name.

So did the term: Khan Market goes! the traction of the market is on the road of the country.

This is a function of the ‘Lutynes’ Delhi’ syndrome. The Cambridge dictionary defines it as the quality of a society in which members are culturally or socially related to the same place. In the faces of a cultural phenomena, it is important. It lends itself easy identification.

However, this is not the same. It is a bit of hit and trial. It is to the new, it will be the same. The talk will be different but perhaps even the opportunity to remain a nostalgic for those who wished the past. And we are, and maybe, surprising aspect is how quickly something of Lutynes’ Delhi can be transplanted to the faces of a new culture. If the old had no root, what is the root here? Are they giving up on their roots? Perhaps, but it is a move to avoid what they have in their current environment. They want to quickly disconnect themselves from that term. That it was a mere trend, a movement!

Will things change? Will Khan Market give away completely and transform the space of the old to become a new one? Will it be replaced by another popular name or dialect or a symbol that is in itself an instrument of change? However, what’s true is that an aspirational voice can be heard. It is to be said if it is likely to be the new name. It is to work as an instrument of change. A new name is the first step towards a new life.

ASSOCHAM SINGH

Widows in our country are an invisible lot who are denied their economic rights. It is up to the Government and civil society organizations to ensure that they live a life of dignity.

In the first two decades of Independence, the Indian central government had introduced a number of policies to help the vulnerable section of society. Unfortunately, these policies were marred due to the increasing number of widows and the lack of proper implementation. The Government of India has taken several initiatives in recent years to address the issue of widows.

The government has launched various schemes such as the Widow Pension Scheme, the Ujjwala Scheme, and the Ujwala Scheme. These schemes provide financial assistance to widows, allowing them to lead a dignified life. The government has also introduced schemes such as the Jan Dhan Yojana and the Pradhan Mantri Jan Dhan Yojana to provide financial inclusion to the poor.

However, despite these initiatives, the situation of widows remains bleak. Many widows still face challenges such as poverty, social exclusion, and lack of access to basic services. The government needs to take more steps to address these issues and ensure that widows have a dignified life.

In conclusion, the government must continue to prioritize the needs of widows and implement existing policies effectively. It is important to ensure that women who have lost their husbands have access to basic services and are not discriminated against. The government must work towards creating a society that values and respects widows and provides them with the support they need to lead a dignified life.

Plug loopholes in maternal care

The Government’s maternity benefit programme, PMM Vyayam, suffers from critical drawbacks in both design and implementation. Not only is the application process cumbersome, it provides little assistance to pregnant women.

COLLUSION IN THE AMDHS

It seems extremely unlikely that Telangana has any real desire to fortify the AMDHS. The health department is traditionally one of the least powerful in the state, and its ability to bring about significant change is limited. Moreover, the beneficiaries of the program, particularly the rural poor, are unlikely to have the resources to challenge the system. The government’s commitment to improving maternal and child health is likely to remain停留在 paper.

However, the program’s design also appears to have a significant flaw. The program is designed to provide financial assistance to pregnant women, but it is unclear how much of this assistance reaches the intended beneficiaries. The program’s implementation is likely to be hampered by corruption and inefficiency, which are common problems in government programs in India.

In conclusion, it is likely that the government’s efforts to improve maternal and child health through the AMDHS will have little impact. The program’s design and implementation are likely to be flawed, and the beneficiaries are unlikely to have the resources to challenge the system. The government’s commitment to improving maternal and child health is likely to remain停留在 paper.
Rel Capital, Reliance Home Finance shares plunge for third day; drop up to 9.3%

Shares of Reliance Capital and Reliance Home Finance fell for a third consecutive session on Friday, following a similar fall on Thursday, on reports that the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) is likely to allow the lender to put off the payment of instalments on some loans.

Shares of Reliance Capital, which had tumbled 8.55 per cent to Rs 73.60 on Thursday, fell 4.36 per cent to Rs 70.60 on Friday.

Similarly, Reliance Home Finance, which had dropped 5.57 per cent to Rs 81.05 on Thursday, declined 6.92 per cent to Rs 77.20 on Friday.

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) on Thursday had issued a circular allowing banks to put off the payment of instalments on some loans on a case-to-case basis, subject to certain conditions.

Rain too has India-Pak match ticket

Match-day precipitation 60%; 1.5 hour shower predicted

The India-Pakistan tie has drawn fans from all over the world, including both sides of the border, America, Canada, Australia and the Middle-East to name a few regions. "We are here all the way from Bahamas, for this match and we will lose if kohli in cricket match is the match gets impacted by the rain," said VE George who checked in from Manhattan on Monday.

Rain has been unexpectedly heavy for several hours, so much that localcall is unanswerable. But if one person has come to watch enough, England, team has always been well prepared for such matches. today, however, has given new life to England fans. six times past five summers, the West Indies would have found themselves the rain at bay.

Besides disrupting player ma- ches, a downpour plays havoc on the points table too, many as seven teams, including India, have lost point to rain. Luckily for the most unlucky one they have lost two India one or two running, having defended South Africa and Australia on the trot, before being put on hold by the weather at Trent Bridge. It’s frustrating to wait in the dressing room on a rainy day. It’s a challenge for the players and the sup- port staff to switch down but not real- ly switch off, because the match is to be prepared in the back of the mind. And when its raining, you don’t much about the game and keep returned a little tippy, reading, some- thing, or clashing with friends. But we deal with it at all times," India’s fielding coach R Sridhar said at Trent Bridge.

If there is so much rain, New Zealand coach Gary Stead said: "I don’t think so. If the match gets postponed, there could be some of the things. It is a bit bad luck really. It can rains anywhere in the world. My first tour was in Dubai and it rained there in the desert and I never thought it was going to rain there too," he added. Rain delay management has also been a challenge for the teams. "The first thing we’ve got to do is to have a couple of days off. We don’t play a game for about six or seven days and it’s important that you manage your breaks. It’s quite ironic. Our last four ties have all been rain delays. It’s difficult to strike ourselves on our adaptable-

The other challenge becomes the change of strategy and tactics for an under-the weather game. "If the match is short, the planting has to be changed. With the weather constant like that, every team would want to win the toss and bowl first," Pakistan captain Taranak Khan (A) 93-0 vs the match against Australia.

Ponting’s Warning

Australian assistant coach predicts Warner to end up as top scorer in the tournament

DAVID WARNER (AUSTRALIA)

So great is the left-handed opener’s reputation that there were questions raised off his form after he scored two hits from his first three innings this tournament, owing to a slightly underwhelming strike-rate. He put even those doubts to rest with a stunning 137* against Pakistan in batting conditions. His characteristic shots were back and he moved freely—one can expect him to make a lot of runs this tournament

THIYAS PERERA (SRI LANKA)

The team-bowling all-rounder has plenty to offer with both bat and ball in ODI cricket, but it is with the bat that team really needs him to find consistency. A naturally attacking batsman, Perera might want to consider turning down the aggression for a more stable role given Sri Lanka’s woes with the bat. If he gets things right, it will add depth to the team’s batting

David Warner has overcome the challenges of reintegration himself into the Australian team and with the explosive opener never backing his back, he could well end up as top scorer in this World Cup, said assistant coach David Boon.

After struggling for rhythm in the first two matches, Warner came alive in his innings against Bangladesh. “I thought he would have been ready sooner, but he’s been ready sooner than all of us thought. He’s been ready all along,” said Boon.

Boon said that the team is looking forward to the challenge of taking on a world-class team.

“We know that they are a very good team and we have to be at our best to have any chance of beating them. But we are confident in our ability to do that.”

MEN WHO MATTER

David Warner has overcome the challenges of reintegration himself into the Australian team and with the explosive opener never backing his back, he could well end up as top scorer in this World Cup, said assistant coach David Boon.

After struggling for rhythm in the first two matches, Warner came alive in his innings against Bangladesh. “I thought he would have been ready sooner, but he’s been ready sooner than all of us thought. He’s been ready all along,” said Boon.

Davy has taken the handbrake off which has allowed himself to play with a bit more freedom. He’s probably going to be the leading run scorer in this World Cup, Boon said however, conceded that the challenges of reintegration himself back into a team after being out of it for over a year weighed on Warner. “He’s just got to make sure he’s not trying too hard,” Boon said.

Ponting said the handbrake is off for a rejuvenated Warner and if he keeps playing like that (against Pakistan) for the rest of the tournament, he’s probably going to be the leading run scorer in this World Cup, Boon said. However, conceded that the challenges of reintegration himself back into a team after being out of it for over a year weighed on Warner. “He’s just got to make sure he’s not trying too hard,” Boon said.

Ponting said Warner in early matches (against the West Indies) seemed like the man that all the Australian batsmen wanted to learn from, the one that had bowled out the top three in the batting order. “He’s got a lot of these guys that have never played in a World Cup, he’s got a lot of these young guys that are just starting to come through. He’s got a lot more confidence going into this World Cup, he’s got a lot more experience.”

“Things should be fairly bright at the Oval on Thursday night and I think we will play a lot of attacking cricket. The pitch has been a good one for batting, and there’s no reason to believe that it’s going to change.”

Is Stonie fully fit?

Stoinis had been ruled out of the team for the match against England due to a back injury. However, he returned to training this week and is expected to be fit for the Bangladesh match.

Boon said that Stoinis is fully fit and will be a key player for the team.

“Stonie is ready to go and he’s been training hard. He’s been doing everything he can to get back in shape and I’m pleased to see him back here.”

Boon said that Stoinis will be a key player for the team and will be missed in the absence of other key players like Cummins and Finch.

Best Captain

Aaron Finch has earned plaudits for his leadership in this World Cup, helping Australia to their fifth title. Finch has been praised for his tactical nous and ability to get the best out of his players. He has been described as a “leader of men” by former captain Ricky Ponting.

“[Finch] is a fantastic leader, a fantastic player, a fantastic guy. He’s got a real presence on the field and I think he’s been fantastic for Australia.”

According to Boon, Finch has been instrumental in helping the team to victory.

“Finch has been fantastic for Australia. He’s been a great player, a great leader, a great guy. He’s been fantastic for the team.”

Family matters

For some teams, family can be a deciding factor. But for New Zealand, it was a matter of fate.

For New Zealand, it was a matter of fate. On Thursday, they were named in the PFA Premier League team of the year. It's a proud moment for the country, and it's one that they've been working towards for a long time.

The team, led by coach Steve Hansen, has been building towards this moment for the past four years. They've been working tirelessly to improve their game and make New Zealand a force to be reckoned with in world cricket.

Hazard's arrival was considered a massive coup for Chelsea, and it was a major factor in their success. The team went on to win the Premier League, and Hazard was named the PFA Player of the Year.

This is not the first time Chelsea have been successful. In 2015, they won the Premier League, and Hazard was named the PFA Player of the Year. It was a momentous occasion for the team, and it was a moment that they've been waiting for.

The team is now looking forward to the upcoming season, and they're ready to take on any challenge that comes their way. They're excited to see what the future holds for them, and they're looking forward to making more history.
