Mekapati clarifies on row over land to Lulu Group

The State government has started a damage-control exercise over its decision to gift land to the Lulu Group, which has cancelled the deal and approached the UAS-based company Lulu Group, saying that it had cancelled the offer on the request of the government. The government, which is having to deal with the fallout of the proposal cancelled recently for two reasons—their own internal situation and external factors—had claimed that their proposal was completed and not approved by the state government.

The previous government over the previous government over the previous government over the land to the Lulu Group, the minister said, had asked the government to find land for the Lulu Group using the land that had been offered by the state government. The government, which was under pressure to complete the proposal, had followed the process of the previous government and approved the proposal. The minister said that he was not aware of the decision of the previous government over the land to the Lulu Group.

Sujana advises AP Govt against imposing English medium

The recent decision of the AP government to impose English as the medium of instruction for students in primary schools has been met with strong criticism from various quarters. The government has defended its decision, citing the need to prepare children for the global economy.

However, the move has not been well-received by the public, with many expressing concerns about the impact on children’s education and the costs associated with it.

In a recent interview, Sujana, a prominent community leader, has advised the AP government to reconsider its decision. She stated that imposing English as the medium of instruction would be a step in the wrong direction and would have adverse effects on the students.

Vizag zoo gets new guests; zebra, marmoset from Kolkata

The Visakhapatnam zoo has recently welcomed two new guests: a majestic zebra and a lively marmoset. The zebra, known for its striking black and white stripes, adds a unique touch to the zoo’s collection of animals.

With a height of around 1.5 meters and a weight of around 600 kilograms, the zebra is a captivating sight for visitors. It has a sleek black coat with white stripes that run from its head to its tail, creating a mesmerizing pattern.

The marmoset, on the other hand, is a small primate that is native to South America. It is known for its vibrant fur, which is a mix of yellow, red, and orange.

The zoo officials are excited about the arrival of these new guests and are looking forward to sharing the joy of their presence with the visitors.
Seven lakh vacant posts in central govt depts

There were nearly seven lakh vacant posts in central government departments as on September 30, when it was informed on Thursday. Of these, 1.56 lakh vacancies are at Group C and Level I posts, while 1.05 lakh vacancies are in Level II posts, and 1.35 lakh in Level III and Level IV posts. The remaining 1.82 lakh are in various categories of non-gazetted posts.

Government officials said there were 1.56 lakh vacancies in the Group C and Level I posts as these are the lowest rungs of the ladder. While these posts are meant for clerical and lower executive works, 30% of them have to be filled by Arranged Officer (AO) category candidates as stipulated by the All India Services Act, 1950.

MP N. V. Rama Rao, chairman of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Personnel, Public Grievances and Pensions, said, “The situation is likely to worsen as the current month is from October to December, when the rural sector and agriculture sector will witness a drop in activity, leading to a rise in vacancies.”

NCP spokesperson and former Railways minister Suresh Prabhu said the government should have conducted a review of the situation at the beginning of the year and allowed the private sector to begin the process of filling the vacancies.

He said the Centre had sanctioned 31,000 vacancies in the last three years, while 1.56 lakh vacancies have remained unfilled to this date.

N. scaling up of various group C and level I posts has been 2019-20 and 2020-21. In 2021-22, the government is likely to scale up the number of posts to 1.80 lakh, the officials said.

The government has also been instructed to fill the vacancies by the Comptroller and Auditor General of India, which had in its audit report submitted for the year 2020-21, said the Centre programming for the posts was non-serious and the Centre was not taking the matter seriously.

The report had observed that in 2018-19, the Centre had sanctioned 30,000 vacancies, while it had filled only 16,200 vacancies in the same year. The Centre had sanctioned 31,000 vacancies in 2019-20, but had filled only 18,923 vacancies, it said.

The government, the report said, has been sanctioning new vacancies even as the Centre has been facing a problem as regards filling the vacancies.

fresh row over NRC

Clear lessons haven't been learnt from the Assam example and a pan-India push is now underway.

Hindustan Times

IT was a Mod Government, and we need to make the distinction from the 2014 version, but it is a Modi Government that had been set on uprooting the entire country and its institutions. It had been driven by a desire to rewrite a nation's destiny, which apparently seems to have not been achieved.

The Assam NRC, which erupted in August, is the result of a decision by the Supreme Court in November 1997 to clean up the electoral rolls in Assam. The Assam government, following directions from the Supreme Court, then decided to conduct a NRC with the help of the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI), in what became known as the Assam Agitation.

The Assam Agitation, which lasted for more than a decade, came to an end in 2001 with the signing of the Assam Peace Accord. The accord provided for a phased implementation of the NRC, which was to be completed by 2006. The NRC was completed in 2018, and the list was published in August.

The NRC list has been a source of controversy, with many people being left out of the list. The government has been criticized for its handling of the situation, and there have been protests and demonstrations in many parts of the country.

The government has responded by saying that the NRC is a necessary step to ensure that only those who are eligible to vote can do so, and that it is not a political issue.

However, the protests continue, with many people saying that the NRC is a tool to disfranchise and deport people. The government has been criticized for not listening to the concerns of the protesters and for not taking steps to address their concerns.

Andhra Pradesh, West Bengal, Rajasthan, Bihar, Maharashtra and Madhya Pradesh, together amounted to 70 per cent of child marriages in India for 42 per cent of all child brides. According to a UNICEF report, health is fundamental to building and nurturing strong families. Indian women, and especially those in rural areas with an education of 4-6 years, are at a great risk. While the universal goal is to end child marriages, the reduction in the incidence of child marriages is not as significant as expected.

Experts agree that educating young girls is crucial in tackling child marriage. A study by UNICEF highlights the correlation between education and child marriage. Girls who are educated are less likely to marry at a young age. The problem of child marriage is not only confined to rural areas; urban areas also have their share of this issue. Child marriage can have devastating effects on the health and well-being of girls. It can result in poor educational outcomes, increased risk of teenage pregnancy, and higher rates of domestic violence.

Talking about the issue of child marriage,

“Child marriage can lead to serious health problems for girls. It is important to address this issue through education and awareness campaigns. Mothers and communities need to be educated on the dangers of child marriage and the benefits of keeping girls in school.”

Sexual and reproductive health services are essential for young girls who are married. However, many girls face barriers in accessing these services. The government and non-governmental organizations need to work towards increasing access to sexual and reproductive health services for young girls. One of the key challenges is the stigma associated with accessing these services.

Another aspect of child marriage is the involvement of the community. Community leaders and influencers need to educate their communities about the dangers of child marriage and the benefits of keeping girls in school. This can be done through awareness campaigns and community dialogues.

In conclusion, child marriage is a complex social issue that requires a multi-faceted approach. Education, awareness, and community involvement are essential in tackling this issue. It is crucial to address the root causes of child marriage and work towards building a future where all girls can make choices about their education, health, and marriage.

“Working towards a future where all girls can make informed choices about their education, health, and marriage is crucial. It is essential to involve the community in this process and work towards building a future where child marriage is no longer an issue.”

The Liberal’s minority government will try to push a bill on Wednesday to prevent a third vote on the Trans-Pacific Partnership, a trade pact that was doomed to fail in the House of Commons last year.

Supporters of the bill say the measure is needed to stop a third vote on the TPP, which is being negotiated by a group of 11 countries and would boost trade in the Asia-Pacific region.

Three of the original five countries are no longer part of the TPP, and the other two countries have said they will not vote to expand the agreement.

The Liberal government had previously vowed to vote against the TPP in the House of Commons, but the minority government’s plan to prevent a third vote has prompted legislation.
