Relief for Adani in coal scam

Bombay HC quashes DRI's letter rogatories; big firms hope similar treatment

The Bombay High Court on Thursday provided a big relief to Adani group in a coal scam and also paved the way for many other corporate entities to seek similar relief. The court ordered quashing of all letter rogatories (LRs) sent by Directorate of Revenue Intelligence (DRI) to countries, including Singapore, against three Adani group companies accused of overvaluing Indonesian coal imports between 2011 and 2015.

PMS NEW DELHI In a shocking incident, the Border Guards Bangladesh (BGB) on Thursday killed a BSF Head Constable and injured another constable by fring at them from AK-47 assault rifles during a flag meeting on the international boundary in West Bengal. The meeting took place to discuss the arrest of an Indian fisherman by the Bangladesh paramillitary force. Miffed over the incident, BSF chief Vivek Johri called up his BGB counterpart Major General Shafeenul, who assured him a thorough probe into the incidents of fifting and the same and the support of connection with an ongoing domestic probe. The Thursday Bombay High Court order is big setback for the DRI and all those who had alleged that the Adani and several other companies made huge money by overpricing the Indonesian coal imports between 2011 and 2015. The other aspect of the coal scam probe related to allotment fraud had also generated a big controversy when the role of former CBI chief Ranjit Sinha had come under scanner for allegedly helping the accused companies.

Later the BS+ tweeted, 'DK all ranks #BSF salute the supreme sacrifice of Head Constable Vijay Bhan Singh and offer condolences to the family members. # No relief from soaring veg prices till Nov end

RAJESH KUMAR ■ NEW DELHI

The soaring vegetable prices are taking a toll on the common man as well as restaurants, hotels and dhabas. The prices in the retail markets continue to rule high in the range of ₹60-80/kg or higher across the country.

Cauliflower is priced at ₹100-120 per kg. Onion is ruling at ₹60 per kg. Whereas tomato is available in the range of ₹60-80/kg. This despite the Government's measures to boost onion and tomato purce supply via Mother Dairy's Safal outlets.
Similarly, the rates of cauliflower, lemons, spinach, radish, bottle gourd, green mustard, and coriander leaves have continued to rise since August. Lemons are being sold at ₹120 per kg.

The skyrocketing vegetable prices have hit hard all sections of the society. The price rise is seen as a result of demand supply mismatch and traders and darmers say there will be no relief from soaring prices till November-end.

Spinach (palak) is being sold at 70-80 per kg and the rate of wild spinach (bathua) is 50-80 per kg and the rate of wild spinach (bathua) is 50-80 per kg. The same was being sold at 740 a kg till last month. The rate of cauliflower is 790 per kg. Bitter gourd (karela) is being sold at 750 a kg while Bottle gourd (laukee) at 30 a kg. # Low margins of victory in Haryana polls

INSHU MAHAJAN

In Haryana, the State Assembly polls have witnessed victories with vote margins as low as 0.008 percent and as high as 64.05 percent.

The small state of Haryana, which goes to assembly polls on October 21, showcases an interesting trend of electoral contests going right down to the wire and also, witnessing widest victory margins.

The classic case of closest election in Rai assembly constituency (Sonipat district) from where Congress MLA jail Tirath Dahiya had won by just three votes against his rival Inderji Dahiya of Indian National Lok Dal in 2014 assembly polls, still remains afresh in people's mind.

Winning by a whisker, Jai Tirath had entered the books of records for lowest margin victory but his election victory became controversial only recently with the Punjab and Haryana High Court declaring his election as void. Interestingly, the HC verdict came at the fag end of Jai Tirath's term in September when the Election Commission had already declared the October 21 Haryana Assembly polls. The Court had stated, 'It has been proved that nine void votes were cast in favour of the returned candidate (Jai Tirath) and two void votes were cast in favour of the petitioner, Inderjit.

After the deduction of the void votes from their tally, valid votes polled by the returned candidate were 36,6984 and the votes polled by the petitioner were 36,6984.

Another instance of lowest victory margin in Haryana was witnessed in 1982 assembly polls when the BJP's candidate Bhagmal (20981 votes) had won by just 10 votes against his Congress rival Parbhu Ram (20971 votes)
from Sadhaura (SC) assembly seat.

Yet another interesting case is of Bharatiya Janata Party candidate Ramesh, who had defeated his 'namesake Ramesh Kumar Rana of Santa Party by just 11 votes on Gharaunda assembly constituency in the 1996 assembly elections.

Gharaunda assembly seat in the state has an exception of witnessing three election victories with lowest margins in various elections so far.

INLD's candidate Rekha Rana had defeated indepen-dent Jai Pal Sharma by just 21 votes from the constituency in 2005 assembly polls. Similarly in 1968, Haryana's Gharaunda assembly constituency had seen closest contest, with the Bharatiya Jan Sangh's Randhir Singh snatching the seat from Swatantra party's Rulya Ram by just 12 votes.

Iwo assembly con-stituencies namely Narnaund and Rohat had recorded the lowest victory margin i. e 38 votes each in 1991 assembly polls. Congress' Hukam Singh had managed to taste the vic-tory against his rival Janata Party's Mohinder Singh in Rohat assembly constituency had defeated Congress' Jaswant Singh from Narnaund by 38 votes. In 2009 elections, the low-stituency, from where Haryana Janhit Congress's Satpal had defeated his rival Rajdeep of INLD by 145 votes

Rajdeep of INLD by 145 votes.

While the lowest victory margins clearly outline the importance of every single vote in the elections, the state has also registered record highest victory margins.

BJP's Umesh Aggarwal, who has been denied ticket to re-contest from Gurgaon assembly constituency had recorded highest ever winning margin of 84095 votes in Haryana assembly polls.

He was polled 106106 votes against his INLDs rival Gopi Chand Galhot in 2014 assembly elections.

Making his poll debut

Making his poll debut from Karnal assembly elections. Making his poll debut from Karnal assembly seat in 2014, Manohar Lal Khattar, Chief Minister of Haryana had registered victory in style by recording second highest victory margin of 63773 votes against an independent candidate Jai Parkash Gupta. The loneest servine Chief

The longest serving Chief Minister of Haryana, Bhajan Lal has the distinction of winning three elections with highest margins from Adampur assembly seat. In 2005, Bhajan Lal (86963 ovtes) won with a margin of 71081 (63-70 percent) against INLD's Rajesh (15882 votes). In the previous 2000 elections, he had recorded victory with a margin of 46057 from the same seat against BPs Ganesh Lal while in 1991, Bhajan Lal had won with a margin of 31596 against Janata Party's Hari Singh.

1991, Bhajan Lal had won with a margin of 31596 against Janata Party's Hari Singh.

After a triangular contest between BJP, Congress and INLD in 2014 assembly polls, the state is witnessing a multicornered contest this time with BJP, Congress, INLD, Jannayak Janta Party, Aadman Party, Bahujan Samaj Party, Loktantra Suraksha Party and Swaraj India in the fray.

With several regional parties adding flavor to the polling season this time, the results on October 24 are tikely to throw some surprises in Haryana.

There are a total of 1.83 crore (1,83,90,525) voters including 98.78 lakh males (98,78,042), 85.12 lakh females (85,12,231) and 252 transgender voters in the State.

Hooda, Khattar intensify campaign

PNS CHANDIGARH

They are the show stoppers for their respective parties BJP and Congress—Manohar Lal Khattar and Bhupinder Singh Hooda—in Haryana and they are leaving nothing to chance as they intensify their campaign ahad of the October 21 elections.

campaign ahead of the October 21 elections.

Khattar on Thursday addressed as many as eight rallies starting from 10.20 am to 9,30 pm from various parts of the State including Ateli, Loharu, Kiloi, Pundri, Siwan, Kaithal, Asandh and Karnal. In his rallies, Chief Minister Khattar is focussing on equal development of state without any regional discrimination claiming that even opposition leaders are astonished the way development in Haryana has taken place in the last five years.

On the other hand, Congress Legislative Party leader and former chief minis-ter Bhupinder Singh Hooda addressed around half dozen that Unemployment is the biggest issue and has increased 10 times to 28 per cent, highest in the country. He says no new industry is coming up and the government is busy in event management.

EQUAL DEVELOPMENT ACROSS THE STATE, SAYS KHATTAR

ACROSS THE STATE,
SAYS KHAITTAR

Chief Minister Khattar, speaking at a Vijay Sankalp Rally in Mahendragarh to support party candidate Sitaram Yadav said that on forming the government in Haryana, all the MLAs of 90 constituencies were asked to make a list of development projects they wish to execute in their areas within a range of Rs five crores.
Since, the allocation was made without any discrimination, all the opposition leaders were surprised on the way of working of this government. Even the supporters and volunteers of BJP were surprised because no one had earlier seen this model of development. He said that the policy of development was equal for the people of BJP

as well as for the MLAs of other

Drawing the attention of the gathering towards the per-formance of his government, Khattar said that in the state there have been governments of Khatar said that in the state there have been governments of many parties including some of the alliance governments, but if the comparison is made in the development of the state these five years would certainly be leaving behind the performance of the previous governments in 48 years. He said that we have changed the meaning of politics altogether. Corruption has been totally removed from the state and the poor man is living a comfortable life in the state. He said that while the con-gress party kept shouting slo-re said that while the con-gress party kept shouting slo-gans of "Garibi Hatao" it actu-ally never worked in this direc-tion. In fact, they should have taken steps to educate the poor so that they can try to explore so that they can try to explore employment opportunities. He said the government has pro-vided LPG gas in 9 lakhs house-holds. He said that in spite of code of conduct being in force at present, still anyone not having LPG cylinder in the state can apply and it is assured that the LPG would be provided to him in a matter of 48 hours. He there was a superfect of the control of lights on 27th, if any application of LPG is not taken care of, he will take the official concerned to task on 28th itself. CM said that there are 300 end points of the water drains that carries the water to fields. Nothing happened in the last 48 years. However, in the rule of BJP the matter was taken on priority and now all these three points are getting water. He said that his government is committed to provide water and electricity to every field. Comparing the commitment towards social good, Khattar informed the gathering that while the BJP government in Haryana has announced that while the BJP government in Haryana has announce ments that too in the period of ten years. Regarding actual implement attoin 80 per cent tation 80 per cent of all the announcements made reached actual implementation and others to be followed to be followed soon.

Accusing the congress party for shattering the education system in the state, CM said that one of the major reasons of the debacle of system was that the teachers were not happy with the transfer policy of the congress government. He said that in Congress regime, any teacher not casting vote to Congress was transferred to Some remote area. On the consomer most earea. On the consome remote area. On the con-trary, the BJP government has made necessary changes to the transfer and posting policy in which the basic principle is to transfer the teachers to the place of their choice. This will make them happy and they will devote much attention to their work, which, in-turn will strengthen the education system.

CM Manoharlal said that the BJP government in state is working in the direction to enhance the income of the farmers to double. He said that if the people of Haryana want to witness the growth of the state continuing in future also, they should vote to BJP only.

The condition of farmers and a few other sections is not onout? She said condition of tarmers and a tew other sections is not good, 'she said, blaming both the BJP and the Congress, alleging that 'because of their wrong economic policies, poverty, unemployment and inflation have gone up". She accused political parties of making big promises to people at the time of polls, but forgetting about them after coming to power. 'Be it the Congress, the BJP or regional parties, when they come to power they forget about the promises made by them to farmers. They forget about other sections,' she claimed. "They woo people with sops, but when polls are over, they forget about their promises. Don"t be misled by their manifestos," she said. The BSP chief alleged that both ruling BJP and alleged that both ruling BJP and previous Congress regime's policies were aimed at benefitting rich industrialists. "After coming to power, they do not frame policies for the benefit of common people but only those which benefit rich industrialists, she charged. The BSP leader also alleged that whether the BJP has been in power in Haryana or the Congress, the Dalits have been 'exploited' by both the parties.

TANWAR TO BACK ABHAY CHAUTALA ON SINGLE SEAT Chandigarh: Ashok Tanwar, sacked as Haryana Congress chief last month, who on Wednesday announced his who on Wednesday announced his support to Dushyant Chautala-led Jananayak Janta Party in state polls, has decided to also back senior INLD leader Abhay Singh Chautala on the Ellenabad seat. "Abhay came to meet me at my residence at Sirsa in the me at my residence at Sirsa in the evening. I consulted my supporters. # Cut road construction costs: Road Ministry to NHAI

In the wake of funds crunch Ihitting major road projects, the Road Ministry has asked the Central road making agency NHAI (National Highways Authority of India) to explore reducing the road infrastructure construction costs through new technology and innovative means in a bid to make projects financially viable.

The moves comes after Road Transport and Highways Minister Nitin Gadkari in a review meeting last week suggested the Ministry and NHAI officials to ponder over the idea of rationalising the construction costs.

According to official sources, in an effort to boost the morale of officials involved in highway constructions, Gadkari conveyed them to focus on delivering projects rather than getting stuck in procedures. In the current fiscal, NHAI has set a target of constructing 4,200 kms of roads and awarding projects of cumulative 6,000 kms. # Need to rewrite history from India's point of view: Shah

The First War of Independence in 1857 would have been regarded as a revolt had it not been for Veer Savarkar, said Home Minister Amit Shah here on Thursday amid a row over the BJP sugesting that the Hindutva icon be given the Bharat Ratna. Stressing the need to rewrite history from Indias point of view. Shah cradited Savarkar for calling the 1857 rebellion as India's first independence struggle. Shah said had it not been for him, the rebellion of 1857 would have become history and India would have seen it from the British point of view. His remarks came two days after the Maharashtra BJP unit said in its election manifesto that the party would ask the Centre to confer the Bharat Ratna, India's highest civilian award, on Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, popularly known as Veer Savarkar.

"Had it not been Veer Savarkar, the 1857 'kranti', (revolt) would not have become history and we would have been seeing it from the British point of view," the home minister said.

"It was Savarkar who gave the name First War of Independence to the 1857 'kranti', otherwise, our children would have known it as a revolt," he said, inaugurating a two-day international seminar here on 'Guptvanshak-Veer: Skandgupta Vikramaditya' at Banaras Hindu University

A large number of historians, scholars and political thinkers from India and abroad attended the seminar.

Referring to eminent historians in the audience and on the dais, he said, "It is my request to all that there is a need to rewrite the Indian his-

The Gupta period is called the golden period of indian history and Skandagupta is known for fighting against Hunas. Shah also praised Madan Mohan Malaviya for founding a university where "Hindu dharma and sanskriti" were propagated even after so many years.

He said Skandagupta Vikramaditya needed to be brought on top of our history as he fought and won the war which even Rome lost against the alien enemy.

He re-formulated the revenue collection method, administration and municality, Shah said, adding that was believed that the Gupta ruler stayed at Ghazpur in this Poorvanchal region and worked from here, he said.

ed from all the stakeholders to explore ways to attract more tourists to the state, he said. Patel said he has written to the Union HRD Minister whether it would be possible to make it compulsory for stu-dents of the central school to visit the northeast at least once. "One who has witnessed the region at a tender age would never forget it through-jout his/her life, he said. The four-day festival that began on Wednesday, aims at spreading awareness about the conservation of the endangered Shirui Lily and to promote Ukhrul as a tourist destination.

Speaking on the occasion, Biren Singh said the law and order situation in the state has improved under the two-and-half years of BIP-led rule.

The Chief Minister said more such fests would be organised as there is an environment of peace in the State. Earlier, tourists used to fear to visit the hill areas of the State due to the poor law and order. However, that has changed," he said.

Lauding the hospitality of the Tangkhul community, Singh said more than 2,000 homestays have been booked by tourists for the festival.

Noting that all disputes can be settled through dialogue, the Chief Minister said Manipur belongs to its people and asserted that the state gov-ernment would not allow any-thing that may hurt the inter-ests or sentiments of any com-thing that may nurt the inter-ests or sentiments of any com-munity living in the state.

The Chief Minister said the State Government is urging the Centre to bring about a "topo-graphical need-based budget" to ensure inclusive develop-ment of the state.

"The Centre has imple-mented the Hill Areas Development Programme (HADP) for states with hilly topography like Manipur. Tamenglong district in the state is among the 82 districts across the country where the scheme would be implement-ed in the first phase," he said.

As part of it, Tamenglong

he said.

Apart of it, Tamenglong would get Rs 90 crore for implementation of developmental projects, Singh said.

Mentioning that around Rs 600 crore would be spent on improving road connectivity in Ukhrul district, the Chief Minister said around ₹250 crore has been sanctioned for construction of roads between Kamjong and Tengnoupal districts.

History will take note of those who ridiculed abrogation of Art 370: PM

A verring that history would take cognisance of statements by all those who ridiculed the Government's decision to abrogate Article 370 of Constitution, Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Thursday demanded to know if the country—after its much-discussed decision—had been "ruined" or "has the country lost" Kashmir as predicted by a few Congress leaders.

PAPER WITH PASSION

Ayodhya closure

The issue can hardly churn up emotions the way it did in the 1990s. Now that it has been flogged enough, what next?

context effect is an aspect of cognitive psychology that describes the influence of environmental factors on one's perception of a stimulus. That's exactly what has happened in the Ram-Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid tussle at Ayodhya. At one time, it embodied the beginning of identity politics, the accommodative Hindu versus the appeased Muslim swiftly turning into a disparate equa-tion based on denial for a new narrative. Therefore, the "rightist" Hindu wanted a historical revision of being the original claimants of civilisational land, in this case the birthplace of one who defined the ultimate ethics of being human and behavioural propriety, Maryada Purushottam, or Lord Ram. One that had been ordained by faith than historical evidence and the mysticism of which, many felt, should override every human construct and depre-dation, in this case a mosque built in the Mughal era of Babar. That thought process, claimed by the BJP posited itself against the liberal-secular matrix of the time as a bequeathed colonial legacy. It codified nationalism or Bharatiyata for a generation that was far removed from the freedom struggle and was fast finding its feet in a globalised world. What it also did was separate Hinduism, the philoso-phy, from Hindutva, the practice of it. That has come full circle and now that the BJP has got a mammoth verdict, it has legitimised the majoritarian discourse. To that extent, there is a general acceptance of the reality of the temple. Even residents of Ayodhya are fired of being circumscribed by a political context that doesn't help their aspirations and are accepting of any solution, so long as there is closure. With jobs and education on their mind, an entire generation, be it Hindu or Muslim, born under the shadow of the dispute is ready to cast away a beast of burden. This changed perspective then has dulled much of the appeal of Ayodhya.

Of course, the Supreme Court must be appreciated for stripping down the complexity of religiosity to the titular nature of land ownership and attempting a mediation. The three main parties — the Nirmohi Akhara, Ram Lalla Virajman and the Sunni Waqf Board — have presented their points of view. Nirmohi Akhara lays its claim by virtue of being servitors of Lord Ram for generations while the Sunni Waqf Board has based its case on the fact that the Babri Masjid stood till 1992. Yet some of its members have reportedly softened up to settle for an alternative mosque, a counter assurance that no other mosque will be touched and that ASI would restore other mosques in the area. Ram Lalla, who became a legal party in the title suit only in 1989 when former Allahabad High Court judge Deoki Nandan Agrawal moved the High Court, claimed the entire birthplace as divinity reincarnate. So, now the court has to sift through issues like memory, continuity, belief systems, tradition and historical evidence, howsoever little of the last. But weighing abstractions and perceptions may be an extremely delicate matter. The Ram Mandir was an emotionally galvanising force that had got the Sangh Parivar close to claiming political power through the BJP. And though the Atal Bihari Vajpayee era, by virtue of its coalition pressures, demanded pragmatism in governance, the current Narendra Modi regime has no such reason to compromise. There are also expectations of it to translate ideological reverence into action, considering it has to justify the core of its being, the committed Sangh Parivar cadres. The party brass is hoping it will at least be seen as attempting a closure within legal perimeters, even if not entirely successful. Perhaps, Modi is in a rush to foreground Hindutva concerns like abrogation of Article 370, Ram temple, immigrants and uniform civil code so that they do not remain irritants to his definition of the Hindu Rashtra and by implication development. That itself is fraught with grave challenges as without sales pitches and illusionary diversions, he will have to now walk the talk on real issues. Modi's bigger con-cern is the electorate which feels betrayed on livelihood and comprises the poor, both rural and urban, and the middle classes. That job is tougher if indeed the BJP pursues the idea of Ram Rajya. For Lord Ram willingly sacrificed Ayodhya's throne for harmony in the kingdom, avoided any criticism and stood firm on his principles. He also gave back Lankans their land after the war with Ravana. Yet the Ayodhya dispute has only entrenched divisiveness in the country. Perceived justice over historical injustice may not be walking in his path.

Still too hungry

India has slipped from the 95th to the 102nd rank behind neighbours on a global index of nutrition est this! According to estimates by the United Nations Development Programme, nearly 40 per cent of the food produced in India is wasted or lost and this costs the country one lakh crore rupees every year. And, yet, according to the Global Hunger Index (GHI), that measures the level of hunger and under-nutrition worldwide. India has slipped from the 95th rank in 2010 to the 102nd in 2019, behind its neighbours Nepal, Bangladesh and Pakistan. The four indicators for the index are undernourishment, child stunting, child wasting and child mortality. Alarmingly over one in every five children in India is "wasted" (low weight for height), the highest for any country. This damning report is full of irony as from being an importer of food in the 1960s, when India had to rely on shipments from the US, today the country has become the largest exporter of rice in the world. We are the second-largest producer of both rice and wheat. Between 2012 and 2015, three years, India exported 63 million tonnes of grains. Besides, now we have a smart buffering capacity to deal with shortages and crisis. Why then are we slipping on hunger targets? First, we need to adopt better strategies for storage and avoid rotting. Latest data shows 4,135.224 metric tonnes of foodgrains were wasted. We could learn from advance food strategies of China, which has invested in state-of-the-art storage facilities. We need to curb food wastage at every level, right from harvesting, transporting, processing, packaging to consuming that is caused due to the loopholes in the transport and infrastructure system. Plus, we have the archaic public distribution system to blame for the inadequate and patchy sup-plies. Many times, even those who are the right candidates for the food subsidy are excluded on the basis of differential BPL (Below Poverty Line) status as the criteria for identifying a household is arbitrary and varies from State to State. Undoubtedly, several nutrition schemes are in operation but aren't properly implemented. For instance, in Bihar and Odisha, where the poverty ratio is very high, poor implementation of the Mid Day Meal Scheme has a major impact on food security. After 2024 we will have the largest population on this planet. The average household spends 40 to 45 per cent of its budget on food. So, for the next 30 years, the demand for food will spiral. If nothing is done at the policy level in terms of coordination and rationalisation, we will continue to hang our heads in shame and never be able to shed the tag of a nation with starving millions.

ne of my favourite ways to travel around the country is to board a train. Unfortunately, due to pressing engagements and the able to take as much advantage as I would want of this uniquely Indian way of travelling. There's something quintessentially Indian about taking the train, getting to know the fellow passengers and chatting with them over a cup of tea as they head to their respective destinations. While writing these lines, there is a vivid image in my mind of one such journey I made and I'm certain, a similar image must have appeared in the minds of the readers, too.

An interesting aspect of train travel is the diversity on display during the journey. One gets to hear of so many languages, accents, smell a variety of food and absorb different perspectives. Once, it got me thinking about what it means to be an Indian.

Unlike other nations like Pakistan, India is not defined by a particular religion. Some may argue that being a Hindumajority country, an Indian's identity is primarily driven by this majoritarian outlook. Such an argument does not hold ground because not only does India contain a multiplicity of religions but significantly also a multiplicity of represent all Hindus. It's the same with languages as well.

The recent debate about Hindibod water because of the variety of language spoken in our country. If you do not believe me, just ask a Maharashirtian or a Tamilian about how they feel about "Hindibod water because of the variety of language spoken in our country. fathers didn't suffer the same fate as he did.

Dastagir was a true Indian. In such moments, we forget about which religion a person belongs to, which caste he was born into or which language he speaks. All that we care about and all that we remember is the great sacrifice of an Indian and brother. In reality, this is what it means to be an Indian. It means recognising that at the time of independence, we promised ourselves and our future generations that we would set aside all that divides, to forge a better India. The poignant story of Dastagir reminds us of this core value.

Another value that forms the core of heins an Indian is or value.

Another value that forms the core of being an Indian is the respect and admiration for knowledge. This is evident from the fact that whenever a book falls down to the ground, we almost unknowingly touch it to our forhead as a sign of respect. It is this core value that has enabled India to be blessed with brilliant minds. We have had leaders in the field of mathematics, literature, technology and philosophy among others and I believe that one of the primary reasons for our intellectural prowess is the manner in which our culture respects knowledge and the pursuit of the same.

The most recent example is that of Indian-origin economist Abhijit Banerjee, one of the winners of the Noble Prize for economist. His win adds to a very rich list of Indian luminaries.

Sadly, however, some of our leaders attempt to replace these values with those that are antithetical to Indian core values. We are told now to focus on our differences rather than strengths and our leaders repeatedly show disdain for knowledge with an affinity for dogma. This is not the idea of India we cherish and it is not what it means to be an Indian.

Sir — This refers to the editorial, "Bangla pride" (October 15). The Nobel Prize for Economics awarded to Indian-American Abhijit Banerjee, his French-American wife Esther Dufflo and Michael Kremer for "their experimental approach to alleviating global poverty" and experimental approach to alleviating global poverty and ways to alleviate it. The husband and wife have spent considerable time studying various poverty alleviation programmes. Welcome as much this is, we will perennially regret the decision of the wise men to deny a Nobel prize to the Mahatma despite the fact that he was nominated thrice.

We revel in the general feeling of happiness among Indians that one of them, albeit with an American passport, is a Nobel laureate yet again. Indians are competent to excel in any field but for that, a conducive environment is required, which unfortunately is not available in our universities.

The setting up of such big units in large numbers by IRCTC with the help of long-term bonds will provide huge employment in the public sector, apart from giv-ng sizeable profits to the public exchequer. Products can be sold in the open market so as to ensure that private players bring down their prices. Employment in the public sector can go up, too, by retriev-ing unaccounted money through the Voluntary Disclosure Scheme, whereby those declaring may be asked to invest 50 per cent of the amount in other longterm infrastructural bonds with nominal interest to be issued by public sector undertakings like the IRCTC.

Time for some 'Freakonomics'

Would tweaking a few procedures actually help the country's economy recover? Maybe the answer lies in field trials

e International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank cut down India's growth forecasts to six per cent for the fis-cal year 2019-20, from nearly seven per cent, riding on a weak-■ cal year 2019-20, from nearly seven per cert, riding on a weak-ening domestic demand. Industrial growth shrank 1.1 per cert in August, after a gap of 26 morths, reinforcing fears of a slowing economy and deteriorating consumer sentiment. Industrial production, as measured by the Index of Industrial Production (IIIP), had grown 4.8 per cert in August last year. Data released by the statistics office showed the April-August factory output growth at 24 per cent, well below the 5.3 per cent for the same period in the last fiscal. These numbers paint a rather grim picture of a long wirtler ahead for the economy of the country. So, is it time to use Randomised Controlled Trials (RCT) to test and/or tweak policies in select nockets to brin out the their results? in select pockets to bring out better results?
For the uninitiated, RCTs are most commonly used in the field of medicine to check the impact of a particular chemical concoction on a randomly chosen group of patients with a condition. Two or three sets are "administered" or "not administered" different variations of the drug to see the beneficiary impact on health.

Coming from the creative soil of Kolkata, Nobel laureate Abhijit

Banerjee chose to apply a similar model for solving big picture issues at the ground level. The economist and his co-awardees, through Banejee chose to apply a similar model for solving big picture issues at the ground level. The economist and his co-awardees, through their trials, studies and experiments, argue that it is possible to arrive at optimal policy solutions based on empirical evidence, having tested their variables in controlled trials on a small target. This means breaking down macro problems such as poverty, mainutrition or an economic slowdown into smaller packets. Then pockets of focus target groups are subjected to policy trials, allowing faster results and direct solutions. It seems to be opening a host of possibilities for lawmakers and policy formulators, not to forget those who have to implement them.

Coming back to the deepening economic slowdown issues — "If we consider this to be the real challenge for India in the short term — It would, with the will of the policy-makers, be possible to allow some controlled trials on select groups for a short period. This would be a test case for boosting demand in the particular micro-pocket of the economy. For example, if the Government wants to increase rural offtake for houses and two-wheelers or even four-wheelers, it can (at least in theory) offer a cashback/interest-free limited equatementhy installment (EMI) or an insurance free, with every loan sanctioned at the much talked about Loan Mela.

A particular pocket can be subjected to this or a variation (either all of the options or some) loan mela bonanza during the festival season, while the other can have plain vanilla bark offers meant for this region and sub-group of customers. The results emerging from this limited trial can throw some long-term solutions to tacking ghosting small-lime to forwors and impacting or predicting or predic from this limited trial can throw some long-term solutions to tack ling ghosting small-time borrowers and impacting or predicting con sumption behaviour. Who knows, some far-reaching insights on the impact of demonetisation and the digital economy can also be found in the side alleys? Yes, it needs an economic scientist to honey-comb tons of data on consumer behaviour, have a clarity of thought and principle to arrive at effective solutions, before being put across the bureaucrat's desk to be formulated into a meaningful macro policy document.

Herein lies the critique of the now Nobel-awarded proof of breaking big problems into smaller, manageable questions and solving parts, for the "whole matrix", in short, RCT.

ing big problems into smaller, manageable questions and solving parts, for the "whole matris", in short, RCT.

The first being that such experiments reduce the scope of economic uncertainties by eliminating the possibility of manual selection. The second and perhaps more and (if we were to look at the problem of the economic slowdown) is that small interventions and policy tweaks or ab tof additional benefits with a loan may increase offaxie in the short-term and also perk up consumption. But it hasnot been proven to be of benefit for the larger economy. Perhaps the impact of a large population could be disastrous, which may delay consumption, for want of a better sop or cashback (if you will). Also the question of whether this will ultimately lead to overall prosperity and not really impact the macro monetary decisions of the Government will need hard thinking.

Now, with all this "Freakonomics" possibilities, we jump back to the consumption economy which is fast becoming a Doomsday prediction coming true. The Government is seen taking widespread reforms (not randomised) agenda, giving lax sops and amouncing sectoral booster packages but the consumer is reluctant. Is it time for senior policy makers to actually start doing the rounds of the country to see the impact of the fiscal reforms on the ground? Would thexeking a few procedures actually help the economy recover? Maybe the answer lies in field trials.

A stirred and shaken India

By pursuing an ultra-nationalist agenda, Modi has validated the two-nation theory that formed the rationale of dividing British India to create Pakistan as a Muslim homeland olonial India's Muslim leaders shivered at the thought of being perpetually controlled by Hindus in a united India once the British left the country, unless there were safeguards enshrined in the Constitution. Prime Minister Narendra Modi has proven them right. By pursuing a populist ultra-nationalist agenda, he has unwittingly validated the much-maligned 'two-nation' theory that formed the rationale behind dividing British India to create Pakistan as a Muslim homeland.

His policy pits Hindus against Muslims, an unfortunate schism that all of his predecessors fought against. Seven decades after the blood-soaked Partition, hyper-nationalist Modi won a landslider e-lection victory in May, donning the saffron-coloured garb of Hindu gurus and allowing divisiences based on Islamophobia.

His rown is made of two emotion-filled explosive elements: Kashmir and migration, both having a common thread of bias and suspicion against Muslims. They have roots in the century-old vision of Hindutux, or Hinduness, outlined in the 1920s by VD Savarka, a violent revolutionary-turned-ultra-nationalist. Savarkar, a firitish-trained lawyer and avowed atheist, espoused several ideas to deal with Indias minorities, minicking Adolf Hilter's racist solution to Germany's Jewish question.

Since his re-election, Modi's administration has aggressively moved on both Kashmir and the alleged illegal migration from Bangladesh, which is India's most friendly neighbour. In early August, keeping local leaders in detention and deploying nearly a million security personnel in Kashmir, it abolished a decades-old law that granted Kashmiris special rights — their own flag. own laws and land rights. Meanwhile, Indias Home Minister Amit Shah, who heads Modi's administration and deploying nearly a million security personnel in despined to the Open Control of the Control of the India, nevertheless, seems determined to push ahead its agenda. It has started a campaign to round up Muslims unless they can prove they have lived in India way before 1971 when Bangladesh was created. They will be put in concentration camps, which ironically the migrants themselves are building now.

Of India's 1.3 billion people, 14 per cent are Muslim. Modis party does not target migrant Bangladeshi Hindus, classifying them as refugees and minorities from neighbouring countries. But it seeks to deport Muslims. In fact, India has already deported Rohingya Muslim refugees to Myanmar and detained hundreds of them. Modi faced global criticism for the Godhra massacre in 2002 in his home State of Gujarat. He ruled Cujarat for 13 years before becoming Prime Minister in 2014.

policy is its anti-minority agenda. It is this very posture of the professedly secular Indian National Congress party and its paramount leaders — Jawaharlal Nehru and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel—that propelled British Indias Muslims to demand a separate homeland as they feared that the Hindus would perpetually control the Muslims once the British left.

The Congress balked at granting special rights and Britain created Pakistan in 1947. But problems surfaced soon afterward with semi-autonomous princely States, including Kashmir.

soon afterward with semi-autonomous princely States, including Kashmir. The picturesque Himalayan region encompasses roughly 135,000 square miles, almost Germany's size, with about 18 million people. India controls 85,000 square miles, Pakistan 33,000 and China 17,000. Both Pakistan and India claim the entire area as their own.

In 1948, after a Indo-Pakistan fight, India raised Kashmir in the United Nations Security Council, which called for a referendum on the territory's status. It asked Pakistan to withdraw troops and India to cut military presence to a minimum. A casefur come ence to a minimum. A ceasefire came into force but Pakistan refused to pull out. Kashmir has remained partitioned out Kashmir has remained partitioned ever since.

Until Hindutva swept Modi to power, India assuaged minorities by pursuing a policy that emphasised on national unity, in contrast, Modi began his tenure by killing a centuries-old Muslim marriage law. Even the Mughals and the British left Indian personal law untuched. The government sonal law untouched. The government voided the Muslim law but kept similar laws for other minorities intact.

What's behind Hindutva polities? To boost his re-election bid, Modi fired up his anti-Muslim rhetoric and took the crusade to India's north-eastern State of Assam, plagued by a half-century-long hate-based politics. The politics that originated with a demand to drive out non-Assamese quickly turned into an anti-Bangaleshi outcry at the BJP's instigation. Modi has vowed to rid the State of all the alleged Bangladeshi migrants.

Following his re-election, the National Register of Citizens, which verifies citizenship, after several flawed counts, has classified nearly two million long-term residents as non-citizens or stateless. Most of them are at the bottom of the economic ladder. They will be detained in camps with limited rights, considering that the government has promised not to send anybody back to Bangladesh, which fears a reverse influx.

Unfortunately for the Hindutva

to Bangladesh, which fears a reverse influx.

Unfortunately for the Hindutva brigade, the citizenship count has become a boomerang. Of the two million designated non-citizens, 1.2 million unexpectedly turned out to be Hindu. Modis followers are now crying foul, demanding a recount. The BJP had expected to find four million migrants in Assam, most of them Muslim.

Assam's neighbour West Bengal, which shares a common language and a rich culture with Bangladesh, is gearing up to play political hotball against the BJP. The hardliners want to replicate the citizenship drill in West Bengal but Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee's party has vowed to fight it. State BJP chief Dilip Ghosh, who is seeking to deport the alleged migrants, remains adamant because rhetoric is the magic wand for his party to win votes.

Muslims foresee the BJPs game: Ironically, while Ghosh wishes to expel them to an unnamed country — presumably Bangladesh — Modi is urging Hindus to floot: to Muslim-majority Kashmir, which barred non-Kashmiris from owning land until New Delhi scrapped its autonomy in August.

The BJP prescription to push more Hindus into Kashmir is intended to change the demographic balance in the restive territory of 12 million people. Modi's abitary action is the mother of several repugnant ideas. This is exactify the kind of capriciousness on the part of the overwhelming Hindu majority that British India's Muslim leaders feared most.

One of those leaders, Liaouat Ali

One of those leaders, Liaquat Ali Khan, the right-hand man of Pakistan's founder, Mohammad Ali Jinnah, artic-ulated this concern while talking with George Merrell, then America's high-George Merrell, then America's high-est-ranking diplomat in India, on December 27, 1946. Liaquat believed that the Congress was "determined to seize power without regard for Muslim rights." Now, 73 years later, Modi's Hindutva agenda, which calls for a Muslim-free India, has proven Liaquat right. By scrapping Kashmir's status, the Prime Minister has taken a highly risky gamble in challenging the secular matrix and embedding a majoritarian consciousness. (The writer is an established author

Can Delhi GRAPple with pollution?

In the absence of a cohesive collaboration strategy with neighbouring States, the Graded Response Action Plan might end up being just another knee-jerk reaction to the pollution onslaught in winters

KOTA SRIRAJ

The fast-approaching winter months have now become synonymous with a worsening air quality in the Delhi-National Capital Region (NCR). The pollution reaches unmanageable levels, largely due to the smoke emanating from crop residue burning in the neighbouring States of Punjab, Haryana and Uttar Pradesh (UP), blowing over to Delhi-NCR.

Incidents of stubble burning have already begun increasing in Punjab and Haryana and are likely to peak in the next 10-12 days as the harvest season picks up in Sangrur, Patiala, Ludhiana and Fatehabad districts. Here, the tradition of open field burning is rampant and continues unabated in spite of the activity being deemed illegal. According to a report by the Centre-run System of Air Quality and Weather Forecasting and Research (SAFAR), this biomass burning is likely to add nine per cent to Delhis PM 2.5 concentration.

In spite of all this, enforcement of the law pertaining to crop burning in Punjab has been lax, to say the least. This toxic mix of smoke and vehicular pollution has resulted in Delhi-NCRS Air Quality Index (AQI) plummeting to alarming levels. However, all is not lost as a bevy of efforts undertaken by the Government and authorities concerned has had a positive impact on an otherwise grim scenario.

First, awareness regarding the quality of the air we breathe in through regular publicity of the AQI has made people conscious. Second, the introduction of the much-cleaner BS-VI fuel ahead of schedule has also instilled confidence among the citizens. Furthermore, the closure of coal-based power plants and fall in the sales of diesel vehicles have helped salvage the situation in Delhi and the situation now is much better than what it was five years ago. But clearly much more needs to be done. Probably, keeping this in mind, the Delhi Government has introduced the Graded Response Action Plan (GRAP) early this year to handle pollution in an incremental manner, depending on the level of severity, especially in the winters. GRAP came into force from October 14 with the objective to curb air pollution in Delhi-NCR, by proactively rolling out measures like discouraging private vehicles on the city's roads, stopping trucks from outside, using diesel generators, closing brick klins and stone crushing units. It seemed a timely step as on October 13, the AQI was "very poor" with the level going beyond the 300-mark. On October 14, the AQI improved by around 50 points but the situation has continued to oscillate between "poor" and "very poor" over the last few days.

iution-triggering ractors are ecyonic the purview of the Arvind Kejriwal administration and the Delhi Government needs active cooperation and collaboration of the State Governments of UP, Haryana and Punjab. In the absence of a cohesive collaboration strategy, the GRAP might just end up being a knee-jerk reaction to the pollution onsalught. The gaps in the fight against polution are becoming visible with generators being used in Gurugram with impunity due to the exceptional power cuts the city faces. Similarly, many questions were raised on the GRAP's efficacy in January 2019. This is because toxic levels of air pollution monitored over Delhi almost every week, from November

Even though experts have hailed GRAP for the gradual reduction in pollution levels over the years and for fixing accountability — as it clearly marks the agency responsible for each action to be taken — the efficacy of the plan is yet to be proven. This is because many of the pollution-triggering factors are beyond the purview of the Arvind Kejraul

1, 2018 to January 6 this year, showed that the Government's emergency plans to tackle the city's annual crisis had failed, according to a report of the United Residents Joint Action (URIA), a collective of the City's resident welfare associations. The report summarised the findings of 45 Right to Information (RTI) applications filed at 14 Government departments. Responses were sought from Central State and municipal bodies to assess the effectiveness of GRAP. The analysis of data collected by URIA for 68 days showed that except for one day in Central Delhis TIO, the national Capitals air quality was continually above permissible limits.

The GRAP initiative for this year cannot be allowed to be a rerun of last year. The Government must undertake necessary steps to overcome possibilities of failure and achieve the objective of curbing pollution levels effectively. (The writer is an environmental journalist)

According to the NITI Aayog, the index shows that the innovation ecosystem of the country is strong in south and western parts of India. In fact, three of the top five major states are from southern India. Delhi and Haryana seem to be an exception to this rule and seem to be doing well on the Index. Thus, there seems to be a west-south and north-east divide across the country, the index report said.

The index was released in the presence of Rajiv Kumar, Vice Chairman, NITI Aayog, Amitabh Kant, CEO, NITI Aayog, Ashutosh Sharma. Secretary, Department of Biotechnology and Vaidya Rajesh Kotecha, Secretary, AYUSH.

Rajiv Kumar expressed hope that the India Innovation Index would create synergies between different stakeholders in the innovation leds would shift to competitive good governance.

Amitabh Kant added that India has a unique opportunity among its myriad challenges to become the innovation leader in the world.

"Any complaint that generally comes to us will be examined.. If there is any violation, we will look into the matter.." the official said.

Reliance Jio has accused old operators including Bharti Airtel and Vodafone Idea of "illegally" masquerading wire-line numbers as mobile numbers for "undue enrichment"

"severest penalty" on them for violating regulations and licensing norms. After the fresh set of allegations surfaced. But of allegations surfaced the saying lio was trying to misguide the regulator ahead of the crucial consultation on call connect charges (also called IUC or interconnect usage charges).

Meanwhile, at the open house discussions on the issue of call ring-time on Thursday, a senior Jio official urged the telecom regulator to keep the matter under forberance.

Jio has maintained that if at all Trai wants to take a view on the issue, it should be in form of a reference guidelines and not in form of a mandated value. "In such a case, the range of 20 seconds to 25 seconds may be prescribed as reference guideline," Jio has informed Trai, which is in the process of finalising its views on the issue through a consultation paper.

Present economic crisis bigger than that of 2008 as slump more protracted now: Goldman Sachs

The consumption slump, a major challenge afflicting the economy, cannot be attributed to the NBFC crisis as it predates the first default by infra lender ILRFS, says a brokerage, which has also slashed growth forecast to 6 percent with a downward bias.

Many people attribute the deepening slowdown in consumption to the NBFC crisis that began in September 2018 when IL8FS went belly up following which consumption financing — a forte of shadow banks, stopped with a chill in disbursements by these players. According to Prachi Mishra, the chief economist at Wall Street brokerage Goldman Sacks, her analysis indicates that consumption has been falling since January 2018, which is much Ankara rebuffed international pressure to curb its deadly offensive against Kurdish forces. President Recep Tayyip Erdogan vowed on Wednesday that Turkey's operation -- which has been facilitated by the withdrawal of US troops from northern Syria -- would continue.

That came as an extraordinary letter emerged in which Trump warned Erdogan. "Don't be a fool".

N Ireland's DUP oppose UK Govt's Brexit plan

AFP ■ LONDON

Northern Ireland's Democratic Unionist Party announced Thursday it cannot support Boris Johnson's current Brexit plan, dealing a major blow to the British prime minister just hours before a crunch EU summit.

"As things stand, we could not support what is being sug-gested on customs and consent issues, and there is a lack of clarity on VAT (value added tax)," the DUP, which backs Johnson's

"We will continue to work with the government to try and get a sensible deal that works for get a sensible deal that works to Northern Ireland and protects Northern Ireland and protects the economic and constitutional integrity of the United Kingdom. The statement was seen as a major setback for Johnson, who would most likely need the support of his DUP allies in parliament for any deal agreed in Brussels. It came as British and EU negotiators worked late into the night in the hopes of presenting a last-minute Brexit deal to summit.

Both sides said they were close to finding a basis for a treaty to ensure Britain heads for a managed withdrawal from the European bloc it has been part of for nearly half a century.

But officials had to iron out details on how Northern Ireland, which is part of the UK, would remain under the European scheme for sales tax.

The pound fell 0.5 per cent against the dollar and the euro within minutes of the

EU's Juncker says no need for more delay

European Commission chief Jean-Claude Juncker congratulated Prime Minister Boris Johnson on their Brexit withdrawal deal Thursday and said it meant there should be "no further delay". "We have a deal, and this deal means there is no need for any kind of prolongation," juncker told reporters as he welcomed the British leader to EU headquarters ahead of summit talks. British MPs are expected to vote on the deal on Saturday.

Pro-EU parliamentarians hope they can defeat it and Brexit can still be delayed to allow a general election or a new referendum on whether to leave the EU at all.

Envoy key to Ukraine debate is due up in impeachment inquiry

AP ■ WASHINGTON

The US ambassador to the European Union is expected to tell House lawmakers conducting an impeachment inquiry that he was merely repeating President Donald Trump's reassurances when he told another envoy that there was no quid pro quo in the administration's dealings with Ukraine. Gordon Sondland, would be the latest in a series of witnesses to be interviewed behind closed doors by House lawmakers.

witnesses to be interviewed behind closed doors by House lawmakers.
Trump blocked his appearance last week, but Democrats promptly subpoenaed Sondland.
His appearance is especially anticipated since text messages and other witness testimony place him at the center of a foreign policy dialogue with Ukraine that forms the basis of the impeachment inquiry and that officials feared circumvented normal channels.
Part of that effort involved pushing the former Soviet republic to commit to politically charged investigations sought by Trump, including into a gas company connected to the son of Democratic rival Joe Biden.

f late, how often have you seen people wearing masks in metros, local markets and malls? Yes, the trend is corroborated by recent surveys which suggest that as awareness about air pollution is spiking, more people are queuing to buy protective gear. And considering that Diwali is round the corner along with the annual menace of stubble burning, is it even surprising? For it's that time of the year when people retreat to their homes because of the smog that wraps the city like a blanket. Move over gold and electronics, anti-pollution products are emerging as the latest trend in the Diwali must-haves. So private players have stepped in and have on offer equipment that can fight the poisonous air.

Delhi-based environmental activist and entrepreneur Jai Dhar Gupta runs Nirvana Being, an anti-pollution tools company. It manufactures specialised air pollution masks and provides indoor air quality solutions too. Talking about 'Kalyug Ki Khidkir,' a new concept being launched this month, he says, 'We stay in our bedrooms for eight to 10 hours with air conditioners on. This blocks the circulation of fresh air. As the AC takes in the air from a room, cools it and releases it back there is an excess of carbon dioxide. If we inhale it for prolonged periods, it is poisonous. So what is the option that we are left with? This equipment provides a solution to this problem by bringing in filtered outdoor air into your room to maintain the oxygen level. It needs to be installed on a window or wall, which then constantly refreshes incoming air through a hepa-filter."

Other private companies are com-

Other private companies are coming up with innovative equipment. Rohit Bansal, founder of AQI India & Purelogic Labs India Private Limited, says that now more efforts are being made by citizens to set up air quality monitors. "So we have come up with a Prana air motion mask, which not only protects a user from more than 99 per cent of the pollutants but also monitors the air. With that, they will know when to protect themselves. This year we have also launched a junior mask for children and teenagers, specially designed keeping their sensitivity in mind," he adds.

As per the recent statistics, released on October 16, the Air Quality Index (AQI) has crossed 300. Vikas Bagaria, founder of Pee Safe, says, "Poor air quality has been a consistent public health concern in Delhi for the past few years. To fight this issue, we have launched modern-style anti-pollution does not disrupt people's lifestyles. These are capable of filtering out 95 per cent of the toxins present in the air and have the perfect facial fit with earlobes and valves that facilitate easy breathing, alongside reducing build-up of heat or humdity. They filter out dust, microbes, and also help to combat serious respiratory problems like asthma."

Amway has gone a step further through its recently-launched atmosphere mini air purifier. Says CEO Anshu Budhraja, "Air Pollution is a serious issue in India where majority of people are breathing air which is 10 times or more over the WHO-safe limit. Therefore, there is a growing need for air purification solution to breathe better and stay healthy. Ours is a next-generation air purifier equipped with better membranes than the HEPA grade filter that removes particles as small as 0.0024 microns with a single pass efficiency of 99.99 per cent and comes with allergy UK seal of approval."

Among other things, organisations are also making efforts to first research and understand the problem at the grassroot level. Airok Technologies Private limited CEO Deekshith Vara Prasad says that they first analysed the data before moving on with launching the equipment. She adds, 'The dirty air with particulate matter, which is pretty large, can be trapped with HEPA filters. However, pollutants stick on their surface, creating a perfect environment for microbial growth to feed and multiply. Studies show that in the indoor environment, HEPA filters can become a breeding surface for pathogens, in as environment, HEPA filters can become a breeding surface for pathogens, in as little as six days. So the air becomes unhealthy when it is contaminated with viruses and bacteria. To fight this, there is the EGAPA (Effective Granular Particulate Arrester) solution that controls all these parameters along with PM 2.5 (particulate matter), which can be integrated into any building to create a clean air zone throughout the year."

Though the equipment claim a marginal improvement in the air quality, a lot of effort has to be put in to combat pollution. Gupta says, "The real problem lies at the roots. So we need to cut the pollution level at the source. There should also be a regulation on the emissions from vehicles."

Strive for better'

Actor DARSHEEL SAFARY talks about his forthcoming play, Kaise Karenge?, which depicts a conflict between ambition and family duty. By CHAHAK MITTAL duty, Excerpts:

How did you land this role?

I was watching TV at home when Abhishek contacted me and wanted to meet me. Though I was feeling lazy but since the place was nearby, I went. I had no idea that I was going for a meeting that would be about working in theatre. And then when I met them, they narrated me the script. It sounded funny, But I thought that I should be a part of it because it will be a new experience. I thought for a while and agreed on the spot.

duty. Excerpts:

experience. I mought for a while and agreed on the spot.

How has the experience of performing live for theatre been?

Honestly, it has been a transitional experience, because it's the first time I was learning about theatre and its technicalities. I adapted to the situations and and as soon as I got the hang of it, I started discovering its multiple facets. For instance, in theatre, when the audience is in front of you, their reactions are visible. I enjoyed that feeling. Incidentally, we were doing comedy, so watching people laugh, enjoy and connect with us felt so good. My co-actor Abhishe keeps describing this. He says, Ti's like a high that you get when you perform for an audience and entertain them thoroughly. I think that's one of the many learnings I have had. It has made me a better actor, a more confident person and has showed me a very different way of approaching a role. People ask me, For how long will you do theatre?. When are you getting back to films? Now, even if I get back to films or whatever I do in the future, I will continue doing theatre because it makes you a consistent learner.

What was the research work.

What was the research work involved to get into the skin of your character? How did you understand the problems and nuances of a person with nul-tiple identity disorder?

I was told that in the play, I will be playing a role that I have never played before, that is, the role of a genius. It was not easy because I was struggling to add my own flavour. But that's how you become more comfortable with your character. Our direc-tor Suketu was very open to us with your character. Our director Suketu was very open to us changing, improvising and adding our own flavour to roles. Even Abhishek was very supportive of this. So it's like a mix and that way you get the best of all the worlds. And probably that's how we locked up Saurav's character.

Since you have been a part of both theatre and cinema, how do you think that cinema is different from theatre? What do you find more challenging?

I think theatre is definitely more challenging. You have to really live the character and make it believable. So if you are not really crying on the stage, you are not feeling it. Even the audience worl feel it. Film mein kar sakte ho as there are all sorts of tricks and techniques there to make it look natural or believable. You have a lot of support when you are doing films. But in theatre, the support vanishes. That is why people say that theatre is the best art form. Not denying the fact that films are challenging too. But in a differ-ent way. So for me, here you the-to make things believable and if you got those aspects in films as well, it automatically elevates your performance. It helps both ways.

I started in 2006 when I followed everything I was told to do. Sometimes they would ask me to enjoy myself and they would ask me to enjoy myself and they would ask me that would you do in this situation, and what would come out organically was what I would do. Throughout the years, I worked with different people and I grasped as much as I could. But there were certain limitations, which got changed in every step that I took. For instance, when I did TV for the first time (reality TV show Mhalak Dikhla Jaa)—I learnt something new and very different. Post that, I joined the acte, which changed my perception towards acting even more. I w: I started in 2006 when I folusually marked my performances on a scale of up to 10 — 8/10, 9/10, etc. — but theatre dissolved that scale for me store that scale for me store doesn't exist because it's like a never-ending ladder for me. That's what the main concept of theatre is — you learn everything from every play that you do. That way when my though process changed. Also, I learnt the fact that every day is a learning opportunity. You cannot stop learning, especially when doing proportunity. You cannot stop learning, especially when doing theatre. I never think of the medium or the fact that whether I have to act in films or TV or do theatre. I just keep the story as my priority. Earlier, for me, anyone would decide how big my character is or how long the role is. Now, I just decide that the story is good and I can be a part of it. And it automatically becomes something nice. Now, I just want to act more. One of my other perceptions that has changed is that the line between theatre, films and TV has just blurred for me. I only want to act and enjoy myself. It increases my love for acting as well.

Twelve years down and people still remember you as 'Ishaan Awasthi: Do you think that the role had been the most iconic one in your acting career?
 If people still remember me as Ishaan Awasthi, it just shows the impact and the value of that performance. I am very thankful. It's something that happens once in a lifetime. I don't really remember real acting. It was, in a way, me only. I remember that there was no stress or tension. I was just in your properties of the strength of the remember that there was no stress or tension. I was just inney ears old and busy enjoying was no stress or tension. I was just nine years old and busy enjoying myself. It's a memorable one for sure. People can remember me as Ishaan for a slong as they can. I love it. It motivates me to do more works like Ishaan, performing in that way and strive for better. This is what such roles motivate us to do.

There's a huge similarity between your roles in TZP and Kaise Karenge? In both, you deal with a certain psychological disorder. What is your take on mental health and the changing scenario of people accepting such people?

I personally feel that acting is also very psychological. You are re-channelling your emotions and a certain thought process. In a way, actors have the edge over other people. They have better control on their emotions. And people doing method acting, they have the ability to step into a different character allogether, although it's by choice. I feel that because of this, I have learnt the fact that communication is very important while facing any kind of mental or psychological problem. The more you communicate it out, the more for uniformity of the facing any kind of mental or psychological problem. The more you communicate it out, the more that I play suffers from inferiority complex. Even the teacher, who teaches him suffers from inferiority complex. Even the teacher, who teaches him suffers from a certain type of inferiority complex, and both of them communicate it to each other in the most hilarious of ways and very genuinely too. And gradually, the audience watches them becoming more confident as they have understood how to react to society.

Same goes with Kaise Karenge? Once you are aware about whats happening, because you an never know how people may react, you should take them on the side and have a gemuinely now that the problems they are withing bett friend, parts and problem, who have been the problem, the best will conversation about the best will conversation about the sharing is key. If you faha a problem, the best will conversation about the best will conversation about the saving and get yourself out of this. Keeping yourself in a better mindset is available, when you are facing any issue, just believe in this saving and get yourself out of this. Keeping yourself in a better mindset is always important. These are the few elements that I have understood because all of our synchological problem at some point in our leves.

Poonle have seen very less of your films post 2012, do you plan to do more films and roles in future again? Any other forthcoming projects?

Of course, I am open to doing films as long as the story is great, there talks in the pipe line, so you'll be seeing me soon. Also like I said, Tilb ed oling films and theatre side-by-side. But nothing as of now. (Out of the Box Production's eighth, the play will be staged on October 20 at 6.30 pm at Kamani Auditorium.)

Despite some misses. Wok in the Clouds makes for a comfy place for light bites, says CHAHAK MITTAL

Tucked in one of the many busy and bustling blocks of Connaught Place, Wok in the Clouds instantly took me back to the Keanu Keeves-starrer, A Walk in the Clouds. I wondered whether it was one of those high-concept bars based on a blockbuster. As I entered the place, I realised that it was inspired only by the film's name. Its vibe was about chic contemporaneity. The heart-shaped mirrors, graffiti and trendy posters about drinking and dining at the entrance were a quirky wast owelcome the guests. As I sat on the high-pitched chaise-lounge at the table adjacent to the bar, I observed artifactics and show-pieces which intrigued me. Why would a fine dine-in restaurant-cum-bar have three tiny statues of soldiers holding a rope in different positions — climbing up, crawling dorn and an arging? However, the content of the con could certainly make that one come true.

As impressed as I was by MTIC's aesthetics, I wondered whether what it served me would match up to the ambience. Scrolling through the menu, I first ordered the puree of wild mushroom soup. The process, and the served mushrooms infused off-white creamy soup had a delicate texture. I never had thought that mushrooms could be so distinctly flavourful. Talking of spices, the soup tasted of black pepper that blended perfectly with a variety of bland but fresh mushrooms. The soup was served with two cigar rolls and a chilli oregano dip, which complemented the soup's comforting taste.

It was time for the Minestrone. The broth filled with finely-chopped bits of tomatoes and vegetables, kidney beans, dry spaghetti, rye bread and garlie butter had the right amount of tanginess which made the right impact.

CLOUD OF

Next up was the Aloo chakna chaat. As eager as I was for this dish to arrive on my table, my interest fell flat as I bit into it. With wheat crisps (sev) and pomegranate sprin-kled on top, the chopped potatoes dipped in sweety-spicy tamarind sauce and tasted exactly the way it was described, nothing less or more. I wished there was extra zing to the dish. After all, why would I pay ₹225 for an Aloo chaat that I could relish at just ₹40 at the street side? Also, the latter would have been aptly spicy.

The Rawa dal tikki folspicy. Rawas dal tikki followed. I chose to order the dish as the thought of a tikki being served with Matar ka hummus, rather than the conventional mint chutney or meethi saunth, instantly drew me towards it. Well, it didn't disappoint me. But the problem lay at the heart as the tikki, due to its blandness and dry texture, failed to make an everlasting impression.

Next in line were the crunchy dahi sticks, or the Dahi kebabs. The previous two dishes were responsible for a taste graph that was sliding down fast. However, it's giftyl said, good things come to you when you least expect them. The kebabs, wrapped around wooden ice cream sticks, were presented in four vodka shot glasses. Its appearance had made a mark. Now was the time for the more was the time for the more important test — taste — and it passed with flying colours. It instantly melted in my mouth which was soon awash with the creamiest filling. Served with a mint chutney, the kebabs were made with lavash which is a soft, thin unleavened flatbread cooked in tandoor. Most food experts say that giving a shape to dalhi kebabs is the toughest part while preparing them. However, here, even the shape was 10 on 10. Certainly, the

and salty dishes that I was have and salty dishes that I was having, I ordered the scented black currant sherbet which had kokum, black currant, cumin in sparkling water. It sulked at the thought that I sulked at the thought that I could have ordered it earlier. Its juicy, spicy and tangy texture made me forget all my woes of tasting imperfect dishes on an evening when I craved for some lasting delicacies.

. Then came the spicy gold-Then came the spicy goldenpaneer fingers in two ways—peri peri and pesto. Now as we know, the mere mention of paneer excites a vegetarian. However, to my surprise, the long cottage cheese fingers didn't arrive in 'two ways,' rather came with two flavoured dips—creamy green pesto and peri peri sauce. Well, one bite into the dish and there occurred an epiphany—there's nothing worse than sitting down at a cafe, ordering a dish, pining for it and being miserably disappointed. The dish was bland and even the dips didn'th help.

nelp. As full as I was, I didn't want As full as I was, I didn't want to miss the desserts. I ordered two out of the four in the menu — Apple pie and Sizzling Drownie. While the latter amazed me with its remarkable presentation and taste, the latter did a great job at fullfilling my cravings. Just a few words for both the desserts—taste it yourself and fed lise extraordinariness. Though the place had its misses, a certain joy remains preserved there. It has a quiet, a strangely social vibe, making it ideal to catch up with a friend after years. Another thing that can be said in favour of the place was the service which was impeccable.

Score heavy in 1st innings: Faf tells SA batsmen

RANCHI: Having already lost the three-match series, South Africa skipper Faf du Plessis has called on his players to come out with an improved performance, especially with the bat when they face India in the final Test beginning Saturday in Ranchi.

The Proteas have not been able barring the Vizag Test where they managed to score 431 in reply to India's 502. India, on the other hand, have dominated by getting big runs in their first innings. In the first Test, the hosts scored 502 runs while they put on 601 runs in Pune.

And, du Plessis wants his batsmen to learn from the Indian batters and make most of their first innings in the final Test.

"We need to put big runs on the board in the first innings," said du Plessis while addressing a press conference on Thursday.

Indian pace attack reminds Lara of old Windies

West Indian batting great Brian Lara on Thursday praised the current Indian pace attack, which reminded him of the deady West Indian attacks of your The Indian pace trio of Jasprit Burmah, Ishant Sharma and Mohammed Shami, in 2018, picked the record 142 wickets among them in Test matches.

The Indian pace trio of Jasprit Burmah, Ishant Sharma and Mohammed Shami, in 2018, picked the record 142 wickets among them in Test matches.

When you look at the quality — (Jasprit) Burmah, (Mohammed) Shami, (Iumels) Isdaw — all these guys, and the guys on the sidelines, like Bituvi (Bhuvneshwar Kumar) are unbelievable. Treminds me a little bit these guys, and the guys on the sidelines, like Bituvi (Bhuvneshwar Kumar) are unbelievable. Treminds me a little bit of the (pace bowling) strength that the West Indies had in the 80s and 90s. The reserve strength is very important in assessing a team's ability. In means that your attack has quality. Lara added.

Lara, who had scored 11,953 Test runs, was also lavish in his praise for Virat Kohli, whom he termed the 'Ultimate Captain.'

— "He's (Kohli) the ultimate captain. In terms of his performances, he leads by example. And I mean that in all facets of the game, and off the field too. He is came off very well in the background of MS Dhoni, who laid the foundation, and did things in a different way.

So, I thin Indian crick, as we all know, is headed in the right direction. It's influenced by some of the best people, and is reaping the benefits of it', Lara told reporters here.

Lara also seemed happy that a player of Rohit Sharma's califore is set to play regularly across formats.

Think that Rohit is an awesome player in all formats of the game. Obviously, in the limited overs game, he's been very successful. I don't see any reason why he should not be in Test crickel. It seems that he has the passion to play and wants to prove himself on that stage (Test cricket) as well.

To exclude a player like that (from the Test team) will be very difficult, with the talent that 1 see. So,
