Turkey ‘heading in wrong direction’ over Syria: US

Trump lifts sanctions on Turkey after it declares permanent ceasefire in Syria

President Donald Trump on Thursday appeared to lift sanctions on Turkey after it declared a permanent ceasefire in Syria, saying the US “has no reason to keep it imposed”.

The departure of US sanctions could be a significant development for Turkey, which is struggling with its economy and has been facing pressure from an international coalition to withdraw its forces from Syria. The sanctions were imposed in November as part of the US effort to pressure Turkey to stop its military operation in Syria.

Trump’s decision to lift the sanctions was announced on Twitter, where he said: “Turkey has taken a significant step toward ending its military operations in Syria, which is a positive development. We are working closely with our partners in order to ensure that Turkey’s actions are consistent with our shared goals in the region.”

The ceasefire in Syria was declared by Turkey on Thursday, following several days of renewed fighting between Turkish-backed forces and Kurdish militiamen. The US had previously called on Turkey to halt its military operations and withdraw its forces from Syria.

Mertes, Mertens & Haaland set goals records

Referee Mario Casper confirmed that Haaland's goal was valid and that the Swiss forward had completed an historic treble in the study.

Haaland's first goal came just after the interval, as he latched onto a cross from a team-mate to nod home. His second goal followed a trademark run and shot from deep in midfield, finding the back of the net from a tight angle.

His third and final goal of the night was scored with a powerful header following a cross from a team-mate, sending it past the goalkeeper and into the top corner of the net.

Haaland's hat-trick on Tuesday night gives him 14 goals in 14 appearances for club and country so far this season, putting him at the top of the goalscoring charts in Europe.

The 20-year-old Norwegian has now scored 14 goals in all competitions this season, coming off the bench in Europa League, Champions League and domestic games.

Haaland's performance has been so outstanding that he has been linked with some of the biggest clubs in Europe, including Manchester United, Real Madrid and Barcelona.

Despite his young age, Haaland's success has earned him admiration from fans and media alike, and many are predicting a bright future for the forward.

However, Haaland has been cautious in recent interviews, saying he is focused on improving himself and not looking too far ahead.

"I want to keep improving every day and work hard to keep my form," he said.

Haaland's goals have helped Borussia Dortmund climb to the top of the Bundesliga table, and he is set to play in the Champions League quarter-finals against Manchester City in March.

Despite his success, Haaland remains humble and has credited his team-mates and coaches for his success.

"Without the support of my team-mates and my coach, I couldn't be here," he said.
