Sena gives out mixed signals on Mahayuti

In response to the Centre's move to scrap Article 370, the Sena has called for a MPs delegation to meet the Prime Minister to discuss the situation in Jammu & Kashmir. However, the party also stressed that it would continue to support the Centre in its efforts to resolve the issue. The Sena also highlighted its support for the Centre's decision to implement the National Register of Citizens (NRC).

The Sena has been working on a number of issues with the Centre, including the implementation of the NRC, the appointment of a new Governor for Maharashtra, and the construction of a new metro line in Mumbai. The party has also been working on a number of social welfare schemes, including the provision of free medical aid to the poor, and the construction of affordable housing.

The state government, having decided to launch the digital literacy programme "Ghadbo Shakti," an online examination for slum dwellers between 15 to 60 years, is currently being monitored by the state government. Under the digital literacy programme, training is given on operation of computer, mobile, and digital devices. The programme is being implemented through 36 centres across the state.

According to the State Chief Minister's statement, the programme is designed to bridge the digital divide among the urban slum dwellers and facilitate the use of digital devices by the elderly and disabled. The programme aims to provide training on the use of digital equipment, including tablets and smartphones, to enable slum dwellers to access online services and information.

The programme is expected to cover 1.5 million slum dwellers across the state, and it is being implemented in collaboration with the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (MeitY) and the Ministry of Women and Child Development. The programme is expected to have a significant impact on improving the quality of life for the urban poor and provide them with access to essential services and information.

The programme is being implemented in phases, with the first phase focusing on the training of 50,000 slum dwellers in each of the 36 centres. The training will be provided by trained instructors and will cover topics such as internet safety, online banking, and digital transactions. The programme will also provide opportunities for the slum dwellers to develop skills in digital literacy and enable them to participate in the digital economy.

The programme is being supported by the state government, and it is expected to have a significant impact on improving the quality of life for the urban poor and provide them with access to essential services and information.

T he announcement of the Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB) is a shot in the arm for the AAP government. The CPCB has come out strongly against the Delhi government’s stance on air pollution, saying that the new policy of the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) government is merely a publicity stunt. The CPCB’s decision to extend the ban on burning of banquet waste in the national capital has cast a shadow on the AAP’s stance on the issue.

The CPCB had earlier announced that it would conduct a joint monitoring exercise in the national capital to check the level of air pollution. The exercise was aimed at identifying the sources of pollution and taking necessary steps to control it. However, the AAP government has opposed the exercise, saying that it would lead to a rise in the prices of goods and services.

In its announcement, the CPCB said that the ban on burning of banquet waste would not affect the quality of air in the national capital. However, the AAP government has claimed that the ban would have a positive impact on the environment. The government has also claimed that the ban would help in reducing the amount of waste generated in the city.

The CPCB’s decision has come as a relief for the Delhi government, which has been under pressure to take action against the AAP government. The AAP government has been accused of not taking any concrete steps to control the levels of air pollution in the city.

The CPCB’s decision is likely to pave the way for a joint monitoring exercise in the national capital, which would help in identifying the sources of pollution and taking necessary steps to control it. The exercise would also help in assessing the impact of the ban on burning of banquet waste on the quality of air in the city.

In view of the CPCB’s decision, the Delhi government has expressed its commitment to take necessary steps to control the levels of air pollution in the city. The government has also said that it would continue to work towards improving the quality of air in the national capital.

Pakistani commuters celebrate on foot as they carry out the first leg of a protest march to demand the election of a new Senate in Islamabad on October 10, 2019. The march, which is part of a campaign to pressure the government to hold elections for the upper house of parliament, saw large crowds of supporters of the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) party and supporters of former prime minister Imran Khan taking part in the march. Khan, who is currently in power as the prime minister, has called for early elections to be held in the country, and the PTI has been organizing large protests to demand the government’s resignation. In this context, the protest is being seen as a key test for the government’s ability to hold elections and form the next government.

The Pakistani government has been facing pressure from various political parties to hold elections for the Senate, which is the upper house of parliament, after the current term of the Senate is due to expire on October 31. The election of the new Senate is important because it will determine the balance of power in the country, with the Senate having the power to reject legislation passed by the National Assembly. The government has been facing criticism from opposition parties for its failure to hold elections for the Senate, and there have been concerns of potential political instability if the current government is unable to hold the elections.

The protest march on October 10 was expected to be a key event in this context, as it was seen as a show of support for the PTI and Khan, who has been a vocal critic of the current government and has called for early elections. The march was organized by the PTI and its supporters, and it was expected to attract large crowds. The government had announced that it would provide security for the march, but there were concerns of potential violence and unrest.

Gandhi for generations ahead

As we celebrate the 150th birth anniversary of the Mahatma, we will do well to re-think about his values, principles and goals, which have been ignored rather unheathily.

Indira’s financial capital Mumbai has been listed as one of the major cities of the world that will go on warming by 2050. The New York Times reports: "The most researched indicators of ocean warming by 2050 will be milder winters and harsher summers, such as the recent warming by 2050. The New York Times reports: "This is a cause for grave concern. Climate changes are manifesting with such rapidity that we would lose our collectivity to anticipate the timeline when mankind will be able to face the consequences of its collective inaction on the environment. Other cities which are likely to go by 2030 are Ho Chi Minh, Shanghai and Buenos Aires. Mumbai is already below sea level. It is prone to floods and goes under every monsoon partly due to the lack of a system of drainage. The current system of rainwater harvesting could only enhance his varied experiences, each one of which offered him numerous insights. He had begun internalising the essence of these could only enhance his varied experiences, each one of which offered him numerous insights. He had begun internalising the essence of: J&K humanitarian crisis is Govt’s own making

With the UP government doing nothing after its promise to build a new town, and J&K having made no progress in the rehabilitation of the flood victims, the smooth running of the J&K government is at stake. The government needs to take urgent steps to address the plight of the people in the affected areas.

Harsh penalty

Sir – The International Cricket Council (ICC) has banned Harbhajan Singh for ten matches and fined him a sum of Rs 1.2 million for making an obscene gesture during an interview with a television channel last year. The ban will come into effect immediately. The ICC has also deducted 20% of his future match fees as a penalty.

Changed preferences

Sir – This refers to the edition “Wake up, wake up” in your email dated 20th October. It is surprising that the results of the Lok Sabha elections and the Assembly elections in Arunachal Pradesh and Haryana are paryat, especially because the two sets of seats were held by the same party during the previous elections.

The BSP was expected to win the polls in both states but after the elections, it seems that the voters have changed their preferences. The BSP has traditionally been a regional party and has a strong base in these states. However, this time it seems that the voters preferred another party, possibly the Congress or the BJP, which had a better performance in the elections.

The results of these elections will have a significant impact on the political landscape of the region. It will be interesting to see how the parties react to these results and how they will strategise for future elections.

The results also indicate a shift in the voters’ preferences, which could be due to a variety of reasons such as the candidates’ performance, the policies and the issues that were highlighted during the campaign.

NCP, Cong will go in Upp: Jayant Patil

Mumbai: Former Maharashtra Deputy Chief Minister Ajit Pawar, who recently resigned from the NCP, on Wednesday said the Opposition party would enter into a power-sharing package with the Congress in the state.

Pawar, who is also a member of the NCP, said that the Opposition was ready to join hands with the Congress, but the question of deciding on a leader would be taken up later.

Pawar said that he was open to enter into a power-sharing arrangement with the Congress, but the party needed to decide on a leader before entering into any kind of package with the NCP.

Pawar added that the Opposition would decide on a leader later and then enter into a power-sharing arrangement with the Congress.

India, Saudi ink Strategic Partnership Council pact

Riyadh: In a significant boost to the strategic ties between India and Saudi Arabia, the two countries signed a Strategic Partnership Council pact on the sidelines of the first India-Saudi Arabia Strategic Partnership Council meeting held in New Delhi.

The Indian government has been looking to enhance its strategic and commercial ties with Saudi Arabia, which is one of the key partners in its ‘Act East’ policy.

Saudi Arabia’s Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman and Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi were present for the signing of the agreement. The Strategic Partnership Council is set to meet every two years.

“This is one of the most important bilateral relations in our extended relations with Saudi Arabia,” Indian Prime Minister’s Office Spokesperson Ravi Shankar Prasad said.

He added, “We have been working on this agreement for two years. It is a significant milestone in our relations.”

The agreement includes a number of aspects, including trade and investment, security and counter-terrorism, energy cooperation, and cultural exchanges.

Prasad said, “We have also agreed on the establishment of an investment fund to promote bilateral investment. This fund will help in boosting the economic ties between the two countries.”

Fognini’s chances of qualifying for ATP Tour Finals almost gone

Marino's chances of entering the top eight in the ATP Rankings are almost gone. The Italian star has been struggling to find form this season and is currently ranked 39th.

Fognini has been in a rut recently after losing to Borna Coric in the final of the Rolex Paris Masters last month, and is now facing the prospect of missing out on qualifying for the ATP Tour Finals for the first time since 2019.

Fognini had a strong start to the season, reaching the final of the Dubai Duty Free Tennis Championship and winning the Winston-Salem Open. However, he has since struggled to maintain his form, and has not won a match since losing to Rafael Nadal in the quarter-finals of the US Open.

Despite his recent struggles, Fognini remains confident that he can still make the cut for the ATP Tour Finals.

“I think I have a chance to make it,” he said. “It’s not impossible, but it’s not easy.”

Fognini said that he will continue to work hard in the coming weeks to try and clinch a spot in the top eight.
