India jumps to top 3rd global defence spender

With $71.1 billion spent in 2019, country follows US, China

The SIPRI, nevertheless, noted that while the global procurement of major arms was down, the rapid growth of state-owned arms producers and local defense industry worldwide would continue to present a future military spending challenge.

The SIPRI noted that the breakdown of global military expenditure for 2019 shows that 61 countries have increased their military spending in recent years, including China and India.

The SIPRI report, which is based on data from official government sources and excludes spending on internal security, is considered one of the most authoritative sources for international military spending data.

India, which has been ranked third as per the latest report by the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) on Monday

According to the report, India's military expenditure reached $71.1 billion in 2019, making it the third-largest spender in the world, behind the US and China. This is a significant increase from the previous year's total of $55 billion.

The report also noted that India's military spending is expected to continue to rise in the coming years, driven by the modernization of its armed forces and the need to strengthen its position in the region.

The SIPRI noted that the government has implemented several initiatives to boost the Indian defense industry and has also taken steps to attract foreign investment.

However, the report highlighted that India still faces significant challenges in terms of technology, production capacity, and training of its military personnel.

As we set out to deal with a post-Corona world, we could potentially face an unprecedented downturn in the Indian Economy that will require some hard economic decisions. There is little doubt that the Indian economy is on the back foot, and this is something that is inevitable as we deal with the situation.

The pandemic has brought to the fore the importance of health and hygiene, and we have all seen the impact it has had on our daily lives. The new-normal lifestyle has been adopted by people across the globe, and it is here to stay.

In this situation, the Indian IT industry is facing a unique challenge. They have to deal with a situation where the demand for their services has dropped dramatically, and they have to find a way to keep their employees engaged and productive.

The Indian IT industry is working hard to keep business continuity to global clients and meeting demands of the nation. They are doing their best to ensure that the services they provide are not disrupted, and they are working to keep their employees engaged.

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) on Monday opened a special liquidity facility (SLF) for mutual funds (MFs) to ease their liquidity woes. The scheme has been announced to help mutual funds tide over the exigencies of mutual fund investors. "The SLF-MF is on-tap and on-call liquidity facility of up to Rs 25,000 crore for mutual funds," the RBI said. The facility will provide collateral funded liquidity to mutual funds to help them address the cash drain. The RBI also said that it will review the timeline and amount, depending upon market conditions.

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) has announced a special liquidity facility of up to Rs 50,000 crore for mutual funds (MFs) to help them address the cash drain. This comes against the backdrop of the financial market volatility and the ongoing coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic. The facility will provide collateral funded liquidity to MFs to help them address the cash drain.

The RBI’s announcement comes amid concerns about the liquidity position of mutual funds as a result of the market volatility and the ongoing coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic. The scheme will provide liquidity to MFs in the form of a one-year tenor at the fixed repo rate. The facility will be available for up to 90 days, with the facility amount being revised every 90 days.

The RBI has also announced that it will review the timeline and amount, depending upon market conditions. The facility will be available to mutual funds for up to 90 days, with the facility amount being revised every 90 days. The facility will be available to all MFs, subject to the conditions specified.

The scheme is a significant move by the RBI to address the liquidity concerns of mutual funds, which have been hit by the recent market volatility and the ongoing coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic. The scheme is expected to provide a much-needed boost to the mutual fund industry and help it stay afloat in these challenging times.

Experts: RBI’s liquidity window to improve investor confidence, calm down corporate debt market

With the COVID-19 pandemic continuing to disrupt the global economy, the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) has announced a special liquidity facility (SLF) for mutual funds (MFs) to ease their liquidity woes. The facility, which was announced on Monday, will provide a much-needed injection of liquidity to the mutual fund industry.

According to the RBI, the SLF will provide funds to MFs at a concessional rate of interest, which will help them meet the redemptions of investors who have withdrawn their funds. The facility will be available for up to 90 days, with the facility amount being revised every 90 days.

The scheme is expected to provide a much-needed boost to the mutual fund industry and help it stay afloat in these challenging times. The RBI has taken this step to address the liquidity concerns of MFs, which have been hit by the recent market volatility and the ongoing coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic.

When the whole country has gone into lockdown due to the coronavirus outbreak, we all have some or the other issues. During this very tough time, we are not only concerned about our own health but also about our loved ones. The safety and health of our skin and hair is just as important.

If you are currently working from home or doing some work at home, you still need to wear sunscreen: Don’t stay inside all day long just because you've been in lockdown due to the coronavirus outbreak. Even if you stay indoors, you may still be exposed to the sun, as urban Indians, particularly those who stand to reason that building our immunity will help us in preventing the spread of corona virus, there is a major role that each one of us has in fighting this epidemic. IMA has advised all the doctors to wear sun screen and hair screen. However, in some cases, the doctors are not able to wear sun screen due to the face mask. Hence, IMA has advised that doctors can wear UV protective lens like Blumax. This will make your lips ultra-smooth by exfoliating and giving a natural shade. Take one egg and pour it into a bowl and add two spoons of honey. Mix the egg and honey well and then apply the mixture on your hair for 15-20 minutes. This will give you a natural hair growth.

Rejuvenation naturally: To help rejuvenate your skin and hair, you can use some home remedies which will give you good results. For skin, you can use some orange juice with the addition of olive oil. It will give you a good result in a week. For hair, you can use some dry fruits like almonds, dates, and dates. This will give you good results in a week.
