E-commerce to rescue

With deliveries getting going once again, but now supported by physical states, is the Way forward shaping up to change?

There will be several societal and behavioral changes. For example, WHO has said that if people maintain a 6-foot distance from each other, they will be able to absorb the impact of the Coronavirus pandemic. The phenomenon of wearing masks might take off, especially in far Eastern Asia where it has normalised after the SARS pandemic. Personal hygiene changes will almost certainly become a norm. Hence, there are behavioral reasons to carry a small personal hand-sanitizer or a hand-spray. With major e-commerce players, traditional retail has taken a hit across the world, one, which coupled with the rise of online commerce, will make the future more uncertain. The outcome of the change in online commerce, especially in India, is not certain. One is not sure if it is a trend. Hence, the future might be uncertain. Economic changes will also happen. Some low-income groups are making a small percentage of e-commerce operators, and others are getting a bit more money as they are working from home. People are reacting to the same. Hence, it is very tough to maintain the same.

White fields are serving as a backdrop to the current situation in the country. E-commerce has not been affected in the same.

Covid-19: Nasscom seeks govt help for BPM, GCCs

Nasscom said BPM, GCC and parts of IT industry are operating at maximum 70 per cent capacity utilisation.

"This (present scenario) is like the establishments that have agreed to keep only 100 employees and IT workers of 90 per cent. Many, especially the smaller ones, are breathing in an atmosphere like that of an empty room," said Anand Rathi, A Bank of America Securities analyst.

"Investors, however, are concerned that the impact on BPM/GCC community has been ignored by the government. The industry has also seen some improvement as the sector is still providing service to many businesses. However, this is a very sensitive time for the industry, so it is important to have government support," he added.

Blue Dart cuts retail tariff rates by 25 per cent

Apparel retailers are expected to offer large discounts and cash back offers to sail consumer sentiments once the lockdown is lifted according to industry players. A delay in the lifting of the lockdown has significantly impacted the retail fashion retail sector in India. The government has already allowed the operations of retail stores and e-commerce businesses under the guidelines of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry and the Department of Investment and Company Affairs (Department of Investment and Company Affairs).

"The industry body suggests the government to allow businesses for a time-bound period to reduce the costs, without affecting their revenue presently. The govt, however, will need to grant lower sales tax for employees as payables are difficult to track and employee welfare has come," said Aparna Khilnani, Managing Director of StewART India.

"It is also asked to the government to implement schemes for bearing employee and employer cost. This will provide a fillip to the employees in the sector," she added.

Chhabria further said, “We implicate the lockdown would have a direct impact on the retail ecosystem, and that’s the time when the government should have provided liquidity support as well as a scheme with the same principle as the Lockdown Relief Fund.”

"Further, during this period, the government decided to provide 25 per cent wage to the employees of the companies without salaries. The employees on bench are being used as a fulcrum at their doorstep. It was already a low-priced salary, and now the government would consider the same as free," he said.

Further, the government has also provided an option to employees to take furlough, which will further impact the retail ecosystem.

Ready to fight invisible, invasive Covid-19

"This is the establishment that has agreed to follow the regulations and keep only 100 employees and 90 per cent operating cost. Many, especially the smaller ones, are breathing in an atmosphere like that of a room. We have to ensure that we keep all establishments open with the consumers, but we are not seeing even 25 per cent utilisation," said Sanjay Vakharia, a senior partner at the Economic Intelligence Unit (Economist Intelligence Unit) in a statement.

"The companies are now coming up with buyback of unsold BS-IV inventories related to the day are affected," he said.

For vets India’s pet owners have been.

The spread of Coronavirus has been an unrelenting shock wave. As lockdown is now in full swing, any hope of going out for a walk is out of the question. Several owners are now having to take their pets for a walk, enough to just meet the minimum daily exercise requirements.

Animals, both the ones in the home and stray, need mental and physical stimulation. Lockdown periods can be tough for animals who are used to being able to run and explore.

According to veterinary experts, during the lockdown period, it is important to keep the pets’ mental stimulation active.

Tips from Chandrasekhar Rao’s pets.

The pandemic has turned many human lives upside down and the same can be said for pets. The spread of Coronavirus means that pets are no longer able to explore or socialise.

While some pets are content to stay at home, others may get bored or restless. To keep your pets entertained, here are some tips from Chandrasekhar Rao’s pets.

1. Keep two metres distance while taking them for a walk.

   While there is nothing much that you can do to prevent your pet from catching the virus, you can still keep them safe by maintaining a safe distance from other pets. This will also help to stop the spread of the virus.

2. Keep your pet’s diet healthy.

   While your pet may not be able to go out for a walk, you can still keep them healthy by ensuring they have a balanced diet. You can also offer them some treats to keep them occupied.

3. Keep your pet’s grooming routine regular.

   Keeping your pet’s grooming routine regular is important to keep them healthy and happy. You can also use this time to give your pet a good hair cut.

4. Keep your pet’s exercise routine regular.

   While you may not be able to take your pet for a walk, you can still keep them active by giving them some exercise. You can also use this time to teach them some new tricks.

Avondale, 18, is a second-year wicket-keeper/batsman who has played for the Australian under-19 team. He has been named in the squad for the West Indies tour. His father, former Australia bowler Merv Hughes, will be in the touring party as a batting coach. "Avondale is a really exciting young talent," Hughes said. "He's had a lot of success at domestic level and I think he's ready for the challenge of Test cricket at this stage."

He will join Tim Paine, David Warner and Adam Zampa in the Australian squad for the upcoming series in the West Indies. The tour will consist of three Tests, three ODIs and three T20Is. The first Test will be played at the Sir Viv Richards Stadium in Antigua from July 9 to 13, followed by the second Test at the Sir Viv Richards Stadium in Antigua from July 17 to 21, and the third Test at the Queen's Park Oval in Trinidad from July 25 to 28.

The announcement comes after Avondale's performances in the recent domestic season saw him selected for the Australian under-19 team and subsequently promoted to the Australia A side. He has impressed with both bat and ball, scoring 650 runs at an average of 50.76 and taking 17 wickets at an average of 24.05.

Avondale's selection comes as a boost for the Australian cricket team, which is looking to strengthen its batting and keepers. His selection also marks a move towards the future, with the team looking to groom young talent for the upcoming Ashes series against England.
