With the Covid-19 pandemic driving around 640-700 bars and eateries in the capital in December, the Osibori film industry and 101 license holders of the State are requesting the State Government to help out the entrepreneurs with provision of online and offline cinema halls.

The Osibori film industry, whose licence holders have been running the cinema halls in this area of the capital city, is in dire need of help to save themselves from closure.

Meaning of Congress

There is no denying the fact that the Congress has always been a powerful political party in India. Its significant contribution to the Indian political scenario, its commitment to social welfare, and its efforts towards the overall development of the country have been acknowledged by many.

However, the recent election results have shown a worrying trend for the party. In the 2021 elections, the Congress party has seen a significant decline in its vote share, losing a considerable number of seats in various states.

The party's performance in elections has been concerning, with its candidates facing defeat in a number of crucial constituencies. The Congress party's failure to connect with voters has been a major concern, with many attributing it to the party's inability to provide effective governance and address the needs of the people.

Moreover, internal divisions within the party have also contributed to its decline. Leadership changes and factionalism have weakened the party's_position, making it difficult to present a united front.

The Congress party needs to reassess its strategies and prioritize the welfare of people to regain its lost ground. It is essential for the party to focus on building a strong organization, providing good governance, and winning the trust of the people to re-establish its position in Indian politics.

Remote work culture

The pandemic has forced many companies to adopt remote work as a permanent solution. This has led to a rise in the number of people working from home, which has both positive and negative implications.

On one hand, remote work has made it possible for people to work from anywhere, which has led to increased productivity and work-life balance. It has also allowed people with disabilities to work comfortably.

On the other hand, remote work has led to a loss of social interaction and a decrease in the generation of ideas. It has also led to a decrease in the level of physical activity and health among employees.

The remote work culture has also led to an increase in the use of digital platforms and online tools for communication, which has led to increased data security and cyber threats.

The remote work culture has also led to increased productivity and work-life balance, which has led to increased productivity and work-life balance.

The curious case of sharing spectrum

The SC can decide the legality of the AGB issue but the executive power lies with the Govt. Outstanding decisions are akin to policy paralysis

The Supreme Court (SC) is hearing a case on the legality of the All India Grasim Agreements (AGB) in the telecommunications sector. On August 20, the apex court heard the argument for the respondents in the case. The petition was filed by the All India Grasim Agreements, which seeks to strike down the AGBs on various grounds. The petition challenges the legality of the AGBs, which the respondents contend are arbitrary, illegal, and unconstitutional.

The SC decision, whatever it may be, will have far-reaching implications on the telecom sector and will determine the future trajectory of the industry. The SC’s verdict will not only impact the AGBs but also set a precedent for other similar agreements in the telecom sector.

The case involves several respondents, including the Department of Telecommunications (DoT), the Ministry of Communications, and various telecom operators. The DoT has been directed to file its response to the petition by the next hearing date.

The SC has not made any decision so far, and the case is set to continue on other dates. The outcome of this case is likely to shape the future of the telecom industry in India, and it will be closely watched by stakeholders, including telecom operators, regulatory bodies, and consumers.

The curious case of sharing spectrum is a classic example of how regulatory decisions can impact the telecom sector. The SC’s verdict will not only determine the legality of the AGBs but also set a precedent for similar agreements in the telecom sector. The outcome will have far-reaching implications on the industry and will be closely watched by stakeholders.

CHANGE BEGINS AT HOME

ART VERSUS CANVAS

Arushi Anusumana

In this age of digital overload, we often forget to look at art — a medium that has the power to speak to us and make us think. But in the hands of a true artist, it can be transformative. For Arushi Anusumana, who is in her early 20s, art is a medium to express her views on gender equality. Her paintings are a reflection of her belief that people should be treated equally, regardless of their gender. It is a way for her to challenge the patriarchal norms that still exist in society.

One of the artists, Anchithra Gudigunta, says: “Art is a medium that can express our thoughts and feelings. It is a way to communicate with the world.”

Arushi’s work is deeply rooted in her personal experiences. “I come from a family where gender equality is a priority. My parents have always encouraged me to pursue my dreams, and I think that has had a significant impact on my art. I want to use my work to raise awareness about the importance of gender equality.”

Her paintings depict women in various roles — as mothers, sisters, daughters, and friends. They are depicted in different situations — at work, in school, and in their personal lives. The paintings are a reflection of the artist’s belief that women can do anything they set their minds to.

Arushi’s work is not just about women — it is also about men. “I believe that we should be treating everyone equally, regardless of their gender. I want to use my work to challenge the idea that men are better than women.”

Arushi’s work is a call to action. “We need to work towards gender equality. It is a journey that we all need to take together.”

Arushi believes that art can be a powerful tool in the fight for gender equality. “Art has the power to change people’s minds. It is a way to challenge the status quo.”

Arushi is also a member of the Zee Youths, a group of young people who are working towards gender equality. “We believe that art can be a powerful tool in the fight for gender equality. We are working to create awareness about the importance of gender equality and to challenge the patriarchal norms that still exist in society.”

Arushi’s work is a reflection of her commitment to gender equality. “I want to use my work to make a difference in the world.”

World No 1 Novak Djokovic was his 20th straight match of 2019 with a hard-fought 6-2, 6-4 victory over Tennessee Williams before former No 1 Rafael Nadal as Serena Williams bowed out of the Western & Southern Open in Cincinnati. Williams did not have a good day at the office as her penalty points catch up with her in the hardcourt tournament. The US Open tennis championships, which are her favorite, are to begin in less than a month, and there is no guarantee that she will play in the US Open before injury takes its toll on her. "I’ve had a bit of practice and better than playing at a very high level," said Djokovic. "I felt better and played better than last year for sure, a bit of tension in agreater pressure." American Madison Keys, who ranked 10th in the world, lost her 20th straight game in the third set, dropping a straight set loss to the second seed Djokovic, in the quarter-finals of the Western & Southern Open.

The big-serving Maks Milos ended former No 1 Roger Federer's hopes of winning his 22nd Grand Slam title in the initial round of the Western & Southern Open. Federer, the Swiss Open champion, was defeated by Milos in the quarter-finals, 6-4, 6-2.

The top seed Serena Williams has been knocked out of the Western & Southern Open, which is an annual event held in Cincinnati, Ohio. Williams, 39, lost to 30-year-old Italian professional Tereza Martincova in a three-set match, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1. Williams, who has won 23 Grand Slam singles titles, is the oldest player in the WTA rankings and has not won a Grand Slam since the 2017 Australian Open. She has struggled with a series of physical injuries in recent years and has not played at her best in recent tournaments. Martincova, who is ranked 49th in the world, defeated Williams in straight sets to reach the quarter-finals.

Williams' loss means that she will miss the US Open, which starts in late August, and could see her ranking slip outside the top 100 if she does not perform well in the upcoming tournaments. Williams has won 23 Grand Slam singles titles and is the most successful female singles player in history. She has been a dominant force in women's tennis for over two decades, but has struggled with injuries and has not won a major title since 2016.

Martincova has been in impressive form in recent months, having reached the quarter-finals of the Cincinnati Masters last week. She will next face either Johanna Konta or Victoria Azarenka in the quarter-finals.
