The Government on Sunday announced an import embargo on 101 defence imports to give a major boost to the Indian defence industry. This move towards self-reliance will see the domestic players manufacturing military systems and weapons using indigenous makes in missiles and assault rifles.

They will also expect to see orders worth over Rs 40,000 crore this year on the back of the decision, which will considerably increase export orders from within the country. The import embargo will commence from the end of this year and continue till 2022 as the Services are not in a position to negotiate deals with foreign vendors. As defence trade deals usually take longer time to conclude, in other words, these deals are expected to generate production during the next couple of years and bring about self-reliance in the sector, making the country a leader in the defence industry.

Desi push bans 101 defence imports

Giant step towards Amanbir Rajhav, says Rajhav; embargo on guns and missiles import from Dec

The move comes in the wake of the country's single highest defence deal being worth around Rs 1,000 crore on the back of the non-availability of supplies due to the China-India border tensions. Hence, the government has decided to work on an import embargo to ensure the country has the capability and resilience to meet its defence requirements.

There are reports of ₹1,200 crore worth of supplies being imported under Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) and Ministry of Defence (MoD) contracts during this period.

Of these, items worth around ₹500 crore are anticipated for the Army and almost ₹100 crore are for the Indian Air Force, with the rest period during the same period.

The Defence Ministry officials said they were aiming to promote the Indian defence industry by imposing an embargo on the purchase of foreign defence equipment. It stated they would be better prepared to make the required indigenous systems and equipment.

Modi launches agri infrastructure fund with capital of 5 lakh-crore

On Sunday, Prime Minister Narendra Modi launched the Pradhan Mantri Krishi Vaadhan Yojana, which is expected to improve the financial condition of farmers. The fund is expected to provide a quick financial boost to farmers, especially in the wake of the current cash crunch and the ongoing farmers' protests.

The scheme will provide loans to farmers with a target of ₹5 lakh crore. The credit cover will be available at a lower interest rate to ease the financial burden on farmers. It is expected to help in the timely and easy disbursal of loans and to strengthen the credit flow to farmers.

BHNS research records 140 species of butterfly

In a recent research conducted on butterflies from the Western Ghats, researchers from the Natural History Society (BNHS) and the University of Mumbai have documented a total of 140 butterfly species, which is the highest number ever recorded in the region. The study, led by Dr. Priyanka Patel and her team, aimed to assess the biodiversity of butterflies in the Western Ghats, an important biodiversity hotspot. The research was conducted over a period of five years, during which time butterflies were caught and released back into the wild. The dataset included information on butterfly species, their habitats, and the impact of human activities on their distribution.

The study found that the number of butterfly species in the Western Ghats is significantly higher than previously documented, with at least 140 species being identified. The findings were presented at a recent conference on biodiversity, where the researchers emphasized the need for continued conservation efforts to protect these species.

The Western Ghats, located along the Western coastline of India, are a biodiversity hotspot and home to a variety of plant and animal species. The butterflies recorded in this study are part of the Palaearctic realm, which includes butterflies found in Europe, Asia, and North Africa.

BNHS is a leading organization in India that focuses on conservation and research in biodiversity. The organization has played a significant role in the conservation of butterflies and other wildlife species in India.

Moreover, the findings add to the growing body of knowledge on the importance of biodiversity conservation and the need for continued research to understand the complex interactions between species and their environments.
Outbreak, biomedical waste pose potential threat in Gurugram

STAFF REPORTER / GURUGRAM

The outbreak and increasing incidents of COVID-19 in Gurugram and adjoining districts is already drawing increasing pressure on the biomedical waste management system in the city.

Another challenge for the health facilities is to deal with Infectious Waste Management (IWM) in the city and if dealt with properly can help contain the spread of the virus. A simple mistake like disposing waste in open can increase the risk to the staff due to inadequate facilities for biomedical waste management.

According to data available, there are more than 220 hospitals, nursing homes and other health facilities that are operating in the city and have a combined strength of 15,000 beds. Keeping in mind this, a state-of-the-art incinerator for the treatment of waste generated by these hospitals was commissioned in Gurugram.

The waste from these facilities is then transferred at a comminuted biomedical waste treatment facility in Sector 17.

The National Centre for Disease Control (NCDC) and the Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB) has managed the safe handling and disposal of biomedical waste.

The medical waste treatment facilities in the city can handle 200 metric tonnes of biomedical waste in Gurugram. 200 metric tonnes a day are currently being generated in the city, which is a major challenge for the concerned agencies.

The biomedical waste management systems have been identified as one of the major challenges in the treatment of waste generated by the health facilities. The city has been known to have a huge problem with biomedical waste management since the first case of the virus was detected in the city, which is also the case in other parts of the state due to inadequate facilities. Many health facilities have faced problems with their existing facilities.

Such issues are faced in the states of Mumbai and other parts of the country where billions of dollars are being spent on dealing with these issues.
Gehlotmlas to save democracy

Kataria, Jodhpur, New Delhi:
A head of the Rajasthan Congress, Ashok Gehlot is virtually the only one left in the political scene who has not yet accepted the Prime Minister Narendra Modi as his political master.

The Congress is in a state of shock and despair after the party’s heavy losses in the recent Assembly elections and in the 2019 general elections. The party is trying to figure out a way to recover from this crisis.

Senior Congress leaders have been giving interviews to the media, saying that the Congress is not finished yet. However, the Congress is facing a serious crisis of internal divisions.

NANDINI PARACHA

Three norms of the concept of state sovereignty in today’s world are evident as modernity—1. the state is the highest authority and its authority is not subject to any external checks and balances; 2. the state itself determines what is in its interest and what is not; and 3. the state does not have to account to any higher authority.

According to the recent political thought, the concept of state sovereignty is one of the most contentious issues in international relations. The concept of state sovereignty is a key principle in international law and politics. It is widely recognized that the sovereignty of a state is essential for its existence and survival. The concept of state sovereignty is also important in maintaining international order and stability.

Afghan forces seize Taliban prisoners to set up peace talks

Rafiqullah, a traditional Afghan council concluded Sunday with a truce that ended two months of negotiations to free 400 Taliban members, according to a statement. Taliban sources said that the negotiations were terms.

The declaration made on both sides in Afghanistan's Turkestan, zoologists agreed, referred to an extinct species known as the Turkestan tiger. The move looks to bring the Taliban to the table for negotiations.

The Taliban negotiations have been set out but negotiations between Kabul's political leadership and Taliban officials have been ongoing.

Delegates were therefore called to a peaceful and just solution in the light of the Afghan constitution and the will of the people.

To remove obstacles, to overcome the crisis, the Afghan government in partnership with the Taliban, the fagina confirms its support to the Afghan government.

Washington: President Donald Trump said Sunday that he would push for a peaceful settlement in Afghanistan.

Trump said his decision to withdraw troops was due to the Taliban's continued refusal to negotiate with the Afghan government.

Pak welcomes Afghan council's advice

The Afghan council concluded Sunday with a truce that ended two months of negotiations to free 400 Taliban members, according to a statement.

The declaration made on both sides in Afghanistan's Turkestan, zoologists agreed, referred to an extinct species known as the Turkestan tiger. The move looks to bring the Taliban to the table for negotiations.

The Taliban negotiations have been set out but negotiations between Kabul's political leadership and Taliban officials have been ongoing.

Delegates were therefore called to a peaceful and just solution in the light of the Afghan constitution and the will of the people.

To remove obstacles, to overcome the crisis, the Afghan government in partnership with the Taliban, the fagina confirms its support to the Afghan government.

Washington: President Donald Trump said Sunday that he would push for a peaceful settlement in Afghanistan.

Trump said his decision to withdraw troops was due to the Taliban's continued refusal to negotiate with the Afghan government.
As Asia-Pacific may see 53.4bn lacs unemployment due to Covid-19: ADB

A study by ADB, which accounts for a third of the global workforce, has found that the region could lose 53.4 billion jobs due to COVID-19. The study estimates that the Asia-Pacific region, excluding China, has about 600 million migrant workers. ADB said in a report that it is crucial to reduce the size and number of workers without legal status in the region or those who do not have legal status in the places they work. Central Asian countries, including Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Tajikistan, send many workers to Central Asia, particularly to the oil-rich republics. However, a significant number of migrant workers are also hard-hit, along with many other regions, including Malaysia and Bangladesh, and Vietnam, the Philippines. Migrant workers also face labor and medical challenges. ADB said, "Workers in the region constitute a major part of the workforce in many countries and in many sectors. Hence, policies to mitigate the effects of the pandemic on these workers are crucial. And these policies should be implemented in a way that is both effective and equitable." The ADB said that implementing host countries’ contracts is crucial to mitigating impact. The report states that many workers are stranded in their home countries due to various factors, including employment restrictions and loss of access to services, such as health care. They should support employers to help retain and hire workers once the pandemic subsides.

India’s digital-first approach to managing the COVID-19 pandemic has been highly successful, and the technology sector has played a crucial role. The government has worked closely with the industry to mitigate economic losses and ensure the continued functioning of the sector. The government has also introduced various measures to support the sector, including tax incentives, subsidies, and financial assistance. The industry has responded by stepping up production and ensuring the availability of essential products.

India’s digital-first approach has also been extended to managing the pandemic. The government has used digital platforms to reach out to the public and disseminate information about COVID-19. The government has also used digital platforms to provide essential services, such as health services and education. The government has also launched various digital initiatives to support the pandemic response, such as the Aarogya Setu app and the Digital India campaign.

The government has also worked closely with the tech sector to ensure the availability of essential products, such as personal protective equipment (PPE) and medical oxygen. The government has also worked to ensure the continued functioning of the tech sector, which is crucial to the economy.

We with the COVID-19 pandemic, have to acknowledge the fact that the lock-down function the way they are designed to meet community safety needs have serious implications on our mental health, economy, poverty alleviation, and the economy of the local community, and the larger economy. The need for workers to adapt to new normal has become a necessity. Studies reveal how workplace can- nots be modified and regulated for the changing requirements as the lockdown is gradually being lifted up. A survey by Pulse revealed the importance of the shift to work from home, which has been a success in terms of productivity, in the new normal.

METHODOLOGY FOR WORKPLACE SAFETY

As the workforce continues to adapt to the new normal, it is necessary to understand the environment and engage in meaningful discussions on the safety measures. Taking this into account, better Indian have also taken various steps to promote workplace safety measures. Thus, an important aspect of work- place safety is that the POSH policy should be inculcated in the minds of remote or virtual working. During work from home (WFH), the need for POSH training has become a pressing requirement as per the data in the survey.

REDEFINITION OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE DURING WFH

Emerging dimensions of workplace conduct and safety are equally import- ant. The period of lock-down has led to a staggering increase in domestic violence cases in India and globally. With social distancing in place, several people are unable to contact or seek help. Taking this into account, better Indian have also taken various steps to promote workplace safety measures. Thus, an important aspect of work- place safety is that the POSH policy should be inculcated in the minds of remote or virtual working. During work from home (WFH), the need for POSH training has become a pressing requirement as per the data in the survey.

FOCUS ON LGBTQ-RELATED HARASSMENT

While some companies have made the POSH policy gender-neutral, a need for workplace safety and support for LGBTQ communities has been emerged. This indicates the need for LGBQ workforce to be taken into consideration while reviewing the POSH policy. This also mandates the POSH policy to be scrutinized and amended to be in line with the current workforce needs.

POSH TRAINING DURING WFH

It is important for companies to conduct training and awareness sessions for employees across the verticals within their organization to ensure safety and well-being of their employees. This is especially important for organizations which have recently shifted to virtual working and need to establish a POSH policy and address remote working concerns. Cyber bullying is another concern that needs to be addressed in the POSH policy.

Up close with new rules

Organisations need to evaluate their POSH Act and Policy too while redesigning and reshaping their work culture and employee behaviour in times of remote working. By Team Viva

Filmmaker and author VIVEK AGNHOTRI’S new book, Who Killed Shastri?: The Tashkent Files, uses the democratic Right to Information to question the mysterious death of Prime Minister Shastri in Tashkent. That’s how his journey begins after filling many RTIs and struggling with all the possibilities. We decided to chase our curiosity and find the truth behind Shastri’s (O’Ryan) death and in its journey, I rediscovered the enigmatic political life of India after the humiliating defeat by China in 1962 and the political climate of the time.

How India was sold and I realized whatever killed Shastri are the same people who sold India. Two generations of leaders, who carved the course of modern India’s journey into politics and very strongly convinced me because of the absence of spirituality and moral values in politics, how India has also generated generations after generations. This book is also a warning to the new generation as it attempts to explain to them why they must not be easy and keep standing up and fight for their truth.

Vivek’s directorial film, The Tashkent Files (2019), also came with a bold question — Who killed Shastri? More than half a century after that fateful morning in Tashkent and the question re-emerges again. This book answers not just the question of a natural death or an assassination, but from political disgraces too. For the director, it was a tweet that inspired him to work on the mystery and led to his death. The filmmaker and author has also made the book available online for people to read and explore in the context of the book on social media, for free, and to get feedback. The book will hit the stands on August 20.

I was the third week of March. The teachers had almost completed the syllabus and the schools were busy preparing for the final exams. Computer and the internet were not available in India. The situation was unprecedented due to the closure of all educational institutions. The students were bricked on the safety measures and a huge number of students did not get access to educational resources, such as Zoom,Google Classroom, and other e-learning platforms. The virtual mode of education has opened up new vistas by which the students of the same urban area are clubbed in groups. The students who were not familiar with technology were now familiar with the online mode of education. The students and parents were impressed with the new virtual classroom exercises and virtual classroom was declared as a digital institute. According to the latest report, the virtual classroom exercises and virtual classroom was declared as a digital institute.

Drip irrigation is really more than just a means of delivering water to soil and plants. It is a system of delivering water to plants in a way that is more efficient and sustainable than traditional methods of irrigation. Drip irrigation systems are designed to deliver water to the roots of plants in a way that reduces water waste and conserves water.

Drip irrigation systems are typically composed of a series of small tubes or hoses that are laid around the plants. The tubing is connected to a network of pipes that are connected to a water source, such as a well or a pond. The water is then delivered to the plants through small emitters, which are devices that release water in a controlled manner.

The benefits of drip irrigation include:

- Water savings: Drip irrigation systems deliver water directly to the roots of plants, which reduces water waste and conserves water.
- Improved plant performance: Drip irrigation systems deliver water in a more controlled manner, which helps to ensure that plants receive the water they need when they need it.
- Reduced labor costs: Drip irrigation systems can be used to automate the irrigation process, which reduces the need for manual labor.
- Improved soil moisture: Drip irrigation systems deliver water in a more controlled manner, which helps to ensure that soil moisture is evenly distributed.
- Reduced leaching: Drip irrigation systems deliver water in a more controlled manner, which helps to reduce the amount of water that is lost to leaching.

Drip irrigation is a versatile and efficient method of delivering water to plants. It is a system that is widely used in a variety of environments, from small gardens to large agricultural fields.

The pandemic has had a profound impact on education in India. Schools have had to shift to online learning, which has presented challenges for students and teachers alike. Many students have struggled to keep up with the demands of online learning, and some have fallen behind in their studies. Teachers have also had to adapt to the new mode of teaching, which has required them to develop new skills and strategies.

The pandemic has also highlighted the need for increased investment in education technology. Governments and organizations around the world have been investing in online learning platforms and other digital tools to help students continue their education during times of crisis.

The pandemic has also highlighted the importance of mental health and well-being. Students and teachers have had to deal with a range of emotional and psychological challenges, which have been exacerbated by the stress of the pandemic.

The pandemic has also had a significant impact on the economy. Many businesses have been forced to lay off workers, and many people have lost their jobs. The pandemic has also had a significant impact on the global economy, which has struggled to recover from the shutdowns and restrictions.

The pandemic has also had a significant impact on the environment. The shutdowns and restrictions have led to a significant reduction in greenhouse gas emissions, which has had a positive impact on the environment. However, the pandemic has also highlighted the need for increased investment in renewable energy and other sustainability initiatives.

The 23-time Slam winner, who last played at the French Open in 2015 and has been out of major tournaments since the 2019 US Open at Flushing Meadows, is linked to a return at the Australian Open in January 2023.

Since the tournament being called off, she has been working with her coach, who she is not revealing, and her current coach, as well as former coach Tarun Khanna, in Dubai.

"It's a good sign for me, but it's not just about playing well. It's about getting the body ready to play and getting the mind ready to play," Williams said.

"The body is a lot better than it was," Williams said. "The mind, I think, is the bigger challenge."
