Covid, rains dampen I-Day celebrations across state

PNS VIJAYAWADA

For the first time in 73 years, Independence Day was celebrated on a low note across the state due to restrictions imposed following the Covid-19 pandemic.

Very few guests are invited for the State Government's flag hoisting programme held at the IGMC Stadium, Vijayawada. This is a marked departure from previous years, when thousand of schoolchildren used to participate in the celebrations and the political leaders used to conduct numerous flag hoisting programmes at various places across the state.

A bust of Col Santosh Babu was unveiled in Kaikaram village of West Godavari district to coincide with Independence Day on Saturday.

Sculptor Chandrasekhar of CS Silpakala Nilayam at Duvva in Tanuku mandal has sculpted the bust as a mark of tribute to the supreme sacrifice made by Col Santosh Babu

The Colonel laid down his life defending the country's borders in Galwan Valley.

The bust was installed with the financial support from District Arya Vysya Association president Kona Srinivasa Rao. Srinivasa Rao along with his brother Hanuman Babu unveiled the statue.

The village already has statues of Mahatma Gandhi, Alluri Sitaramaraju, Potti Sriramulu and Sir Arthur Cotton.

CM chants decentralisation mantra

Jagan hopes to start work on Executive Capital soon, optimistic on SCS

PNS VIJAYAWADA

Asserting that his government firmly believed that decentralisation of administration was the right policy to heal the wounds inflicted upon Andhra Pradesh by bifurcation, Chief Minister YS Jaganmohan Reddy on Saturday said that soon, the foundation stone would be laid for the Executive Capital at Visakhapatnam, and for the Judicial Capital at Kurnool. "To ensure that we do not suffer more such wounds and that the three regions of the state flourish equally, we enacted the three capitals legislation. We will soon lay the foundation stone for the Executive Capital at Visakhapatnam and Judicial Capital in Kurnool, Jagan

The Chief Minister also tried to balance pragmatism and hope by saying that he does not foresee the Centre according Special Category Status (SCS) to Andhra Pradesh in the near future as it "is now not dependent on other parties", even as he hoped that the Central Government would have a change of heart if not today, in the future, and accord SCS to the state in accordance with the promise made in Parliament.

Addressing the ceremonial Independence Day function after unfurling the Tricolour at the IGMC Stadium in Vijayawada, the Chief Minister said his government was determined to achieve SCS for the

The government at the Centre is now not dependent on other parties (for support), so we don't see it granting SCS now. "By introducing the Village Secretariat system, which is a new chapter in decentralisation of administration, we have ensured Grama Swaraj as listed in the Directive Principles," the Chief Minister added. He noted that the government doled out Rs 59,000 crore in the last 14 months to various sections under different welfare schemes. As part of the measures to eliminate corruption, new initiatives like reverse tendering and judicial preview were launched while a review of the previous government's decisions resulted in an overall saving of Rs 4,000 crore to the exchequer, he added.

Union Minister for Jal Sakti Gajendra Singh Shekhawat has directed officials of his department to make arrangements for the Apex Council meeting on August 25, if the date was agreeable to the Chief Ministers of Andhra Pradesh and Telangana to find a solution to water sharing disputes between the Telugu states.

While the Jal Sakti Minister is the ex-officio chairman of the Apex Council, which owed its existence to the AP Reorganisation Act, the Chief Ministers of both the Telugu states are its members.

After holding the maiden meeting in 2016, the Apex Council has not met again.

The forthcoming meeting was earlier scheduled to be held on August 5, but Telangana Chief Minister K Chandrasekhar Rao found the date inconvenient and asked the authorities to convene the meeting after August 20.

Talks are the only key to resolving TS-AP disputes

t is difficult to imagine that just one year ago, Chief Minister of Telangana K. Chandrashekhar Rao and his Andhra counterpart Y. S. Jagan Mohan Reddy were singing paeans for each other. They had raised hopes of ending the bitterness and opening a new chapter in relations between the two States. This conclusion has turned out to be hasty as Telangana and Andhra are back at their old game of squabbling over their share of river waters and other resources.

An impression gained ground after the bonhomie they displayed in the wake of KCR's re-election and Jagan's maiden victory in May 2019 that they had decided to bury the past and amicably settle disputes between the two neighbours that share the same language and culture. They had inherited a legacy of disputes ranging from AP's claims of Rs. 70,000 crore towards settlement of fixed assets to intractable differences over sharing Krishna and Godavari

This feeling was reinforced by Jagan's description of KCR as 'a good man'. It was a surmoment when Chandrashekhar Rao hugged the young Jagan, son of late Y. S. Rajasekhara Reddy, who had done everything within his means to thwart creation of Telangana.Jagan too bent backwards to please KCR by handing over all the buildings All these elements are missing. KCR and Jagan are back to their pre-May 2019 positions, warring over water and power. They even skipped the Apex Council meetingconvened by the Centre on August 5 as if to avoid a direct encounter under AP's control in Hyderabad to Telangana.

After the failure of two formal meetings, the leaders have emphatically proved that personal chemistry matters only to a limited extent. Resolving river water disputes requires vision besides consensus among political parties in each State. All these elements are missing. KCR and Jagan are back to their pre-May 2019 positions, warring over water and power. They even skipped the Apex Council meetingconvened by the Centre on August 5 as if to avoid a direct encounter.

The Centre was alarmed by the flurry of mutual complaints. The trigger was the complaint that the Andhra Government had issued orders on May 5 to divert 10 tmcft of water daily from the Krishna river to Ravalaseema through a lift irrigation project and for expansion of the Pothireddypadu head regulator. Telangana complained that the RLIP would affect several lift irrigation projects besides drinking water supply to Hyderabad and many other districts.

AP's complaints were no less grave. They ranged from

S NAGESH KUMAR Former Resident Editor, The Hindu

Telangana changing the scope of the Kaleswaram lift irrigation project, taking up five new projects using 15.53 tmcft of water from Krishna, enhancing the capacity of existing projects, and generating power from Srisailam in violation of the agreement to share the benefit in 50:50 ratio.

The crib list is illustrative. It cannot be comprehensive in a short piece because of the long history of acrimony over division of Krishna water amongst the three regions Andhra, Rayalaseema and Telangana and with neighbouring Karnataka. The Bachawat Tribunal's award allocating 811 out of 2,060 tmcft failed to satisfy AP and the Brijesh Kumar Tribunalrefused to take a relook at allocation with other States.

Tribunal awards have left matters unresolved while the River Management Boards have become toothless wonders or just complaint boxes. Even the Apex Council comprising the two Chief Ministers and chaired by the Union Minister is unable to forge a compromise. Uma Bharati as

but it ended without result.

Many thought that withKCR and Jagan striking all the right chords, a solution to the vexatious river water disputes was round the corner. But theyhave escalated matters. Lessons have to be drawn from the past. Telugu Ganga, a project steered by N. T. Rama Rao, was severely castigated by YSR and other Congress leaders for carrying 15 tmcft of water to Chennai fulfilling without Rayalaseema's needs. It was extensively discussed within and outside the Assemblyand NTR vilified before implementation. So was the construction of the controversial Pothireddypadu head regulator on the Srisailam project.

Stoutly opposing it, P. Janardhan Reddy, Congress MLA, fought so hard against the Chief Minister of his own party, YSR, that the matter reached the Congress high command.A joke used to do the rounds that Congress president Sonia Gandhi even asked who is this Pothireddy".

When Gujarat was separated from the bilingual Bombay State, it was not without bitterness and bloodshed. Sixty years later, both States are good neighbours, prosperous, and compete for investment in an atmosphere of cooperative federalism.

Andhra and Telangana would do well to emulate this spirit of healthy competition. They can begin by initiating meaningful dialogues, rather than allowing old disputes to fester. As it is, they are frittering away too much time and energy on building new capitals and Secretariat offices.

Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal on Saturday said that the Delhi government will not open schools unless it is "fully convinced" about the improved COVID-19 situation in the city.

Delivering his Independence Day speech at Delhi Secretariat, Kejriwal said the COVID-19 situation in the national capital is under control as compared to what it was two months back and thanked all the stakeholders, including the central government, 'corona warriors' and different organisations.

The chief minister said the safety and the health of school children are very important to the AAP government.

"I meet people and get messages from them asking not to open schools. I want to assure them that we care about their children as much as they do. Unless fully convinced, we are not going to open the schools,"

Kejriwal said Delhi "gave the model" of home isolation and plasma therapy concept to the country in the fight against the virus. He said that efforts are being made to bring Delhi's economy back on track

Sports Minister Kiren Rijiju on the occasion of the 74th Independence Day launched the Fit India Youth Ćlub, an initiative to promote fitness across the country. The Fit India Youth Club, a part of the Fit India Movement envisioned by PM Narndra, endeavours to harness the power of youth to create mass awareness about the importance of fitness, across the country.

The Fit India Youth Clubs bring together fitness and voluntarism in a unique way in which 75 lakh volunteers of Nehru Yuva Kendra Sangathan and National Service Scheme, along with Scouts and Guides, NCC and other youth organisations will come together to register in every block in the country.

According to a Sports Authority of India (SAI) media release, under the aegis of a district unit, each member of the club will motivate people from the community to take up fitness activities of 30 to 60 minutes in his or her daily routine. Additionally, the clubs will organise and encourage schools and local bodies to organise one community fitness programme every quarter.

Speaking about the initiative, Rijiju said, "Only a fit citizen can contribute adequately to his or her country and help fellow citizens in their times of need.

On this Independence Day, every Indian, especially the youth, must resolve to be at the forefront to fight attempts by forces that try to create dissensions among the people, Vice President M Venkaiah Naidu said on Saturday.

In a Facebook post to mark the 74th Independence Day, he said for India to achieve new heights of development and prosperity, every citizen, including people in public life, must perform their duty.

"As we approach the 75th anniversary of Independence, it is time for an objective introspection. At this juncture, we must ask ourselves what we aspire to achieve as a nation by 2022," Naidu observed.

"By 2022, India must be aatmanirbhar (self-reliant) in every sense of the word. We all must work with renewed vigour and determination to eradicate poverty, end social and gender discrimination and eliminate corruption," he said.

The vice president said India needs a cultural renaissance and a refreshing flowering of literature and artistic expression in its national languages.

"As the country moves forward with renewed determination and the tremendous energy of 130 crore people to transform and build a 'new India', we are confident of regaining our past glory and becoming an ideal parliamentary democracy," he said.

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Prime Minister Narendra Modi and his Nepalese counterpart K P Sharma Oli held a telephonic conversation on Saturday during which the two leaders expressed "mutual solidarity" amid efforts being made to minimise the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic in the two countries.

Oli called up the Indian prime minister to greet his government and the people of India on the country's 74th Independence Day, and also offered congratulations on its recent election as a non-permanent member of the UN Security Council, an official statement said.

Modi offered India's continued support to Nepal in its fight against the pandemic and recalled the civilisational and cultural links that the two countries share, it said.

"The leaders expressed mutu-and said every Congress worker and every Indian is proud of the armed forces. Talking to reporters after Prime Minister Narendra Modi's address, Congress' chief spokesperson Surjewala also said all Indians should ask the government this Independence Day what it was doing to protect the country and push China back.

In his speech from the ramparts of the Red Fort, the prime minister said India's soldiers had given a fitting reply to those who had challenged the country's sovereignty, from "LoC to LAC". Modi, who did not name China, added that the whole country is united in protecting the sovereignty of the country.

"Each and every Congress worker and all 130 crore Indians

At a time when China has entered Indian territory, every Indian needs to ask the government what it is doing to push China back and protect the country. On this Independence Day they should ask this. That is the true sense of democracy," the Congress leader added. He said it is important to question the government on whether it believes in the mandate of the people and if there

PNS NEW DELHI

A panel of state finance ministers on Friday veered around a proposal to levy 3 per cent GST on sale of old gold and jewellery to check tax evasion, Kerala Finance Minister Thomas Isaac said.

The Group of Ministers (GoM) also decided to implement e-way bill for trans-portation of gold within the states, but implementing it for inter-state movement was not considered feasible.

The panel also decided to make it mandatory for gold and jewellery shops to generate e-invoice for every purchase and sale transaction.

Bihar Deputy Chief Minister Sushil Modi said the GoM reached a consensus on letting states decide whether to have e-way bill for intra-state movement of gold. "It was decided that if any state wants to implement eway bill for gold, they can do so for intra- or within the state transportation," he told PTI.

Modi, who also holds the finance portfolio, said while Kerala and Karnataka wanted

The country's second largest private sector lender ICICI Bank on Saturday said it has completed the allotment of equity shares under its qualified institutional placement (QIP) and raised approximately Rs 15,000 crore to fund its business growth and meet regulatory capital requirement.

Investors were allocated 41.89 crore shares at an issue price of Rs 358 per equity, the lender said in a statement.

"The issue price represents a 1.9 per cent premium to the floor price determined based on the pricing formula as prescribed under Regulation 176(1) of the SEBI ICDR Regulations and a discount of 1.5 per cent to the closing price of the bank's equity shares on the BŠE/NSE prior to the launch of the issue," it said.

"Pursuant to the allotment shares the paid-up ty share capital of the bank stands increased from Rs 12,952,832,416 consisting of 6,476,416,208 equity shares of face value Rs 2 each to Rs 13,790,821,242 consisting of 6,895,410,621 equity shares of face value Rs 2 each,

Infosys fines independent director for 'inadvertent trade'

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Infosys on Friday said there had been an "inadvertent trade" by the portfolio management services of Bela Parikh, spouse of the company's independent director Bobby Parikh. Following this, a penalty of Rs 2 lakh has been imposed on Bobby Parikh, Infosys said in a regulatory filing.

Detailing out the inadvertent trade by a designated person, Infosys said the portfolio management services of Bela Parikh had bought 2,754 shares during the open trading window period "without the knowledge of Bobby Parikh and without obtaining pre-clearance of trade". Bobby Parikh is the joint holder of that account.

"Mr Parikh has confirmed that he was not in possession of any Unpublished Price Sensitive Information (UPSI). The Audit Committee of the company was notified of this matter," it added.

Based on Bobby Parikh's

Committee has concluded that this was an inadvertent trade made without intent to violate the company's insider trading policy or the Sebi's Prohibition of Insider Trading Regulations, 2015 (PIT Regulations), the filing said. "However, the Audit Committee has determined that there was a violation of the company's Policy and PIT Regulations and has therefore imposed on Mr Parikh, a penalty of Rs 2,00,000 which amount shall be remitted to Investor Protection Education Fund (IPEF) in line with the PIT Regulations," it said.

Stocks drift on Wall Street following latest run at record

PNS NEW DELHI

Wall Street is drifting on Friday after a report showed that sales for US retailers strengthened again last month, but by less than economists expected.

The S&P 500 was virtually unchanged in afternoon trading after earlier flipping between small gains and losses. The market is taking a pause after nearly erasing the last of the steep losses caused by the coronavirus pandemic. In each of the last two days, the index made a brief run above its record closing high, which was set in February, only to fade in the afternoon. It's now 0.3 per cent below the record. The Dow Jones Industrial Average was up 41 points, or 0.1 per cent, at 27,937, as of 12:27 pm Eastern time, while the Nasdaq composite dipped 0.3 per cent. Consumer spending is the main locomotive for the US economy, and Friday's report on trends for U.S. retailers showed some more improvement, though with caveats.

PNS NEW DELHI Reliance Jio's four-year-old telecom spectrum sharing deal Reliance Communications (RCom) is not connected with the latter's past statutory dues that pertain to the period prior to 2016 when Jio wasn't even in operation, sources close to the company said. A Supreme Court bench had on Friday sought to know why Reliance Jio Infocomm Ltd (RJIL) must not pay adjusted gross revenue (AGR) dues of Reliance Communications since it has been using the lat-

The shared spectrum was limited to the 800 MHz band and was strictly in accordance with the Department of Telecom's (DoT) spectrum sharing guidelines. RCom's 2G, 3G and 4G spectrum in 1,800 MHz band are not being shared. The AGR dues of RCom and RTL are in no manner connected with this shared spectrum, the source said, adding that the AGR has been paid by both RCom/RTL and RJIL on the revenue generated from the shared spectrum.

The source said the quantum of spectrum used by RJIL is around 38 per cent of the total spectrum currently held by RCom. RCom continues to hold spectrum in 900 MHz band, 1,800 MHz band, and

When death is work

Their work is anything but ordinary, ensuring that man is sent on his final journey with dignity and respect. But COVID-19 changed all this and while the rest of the world is scared of this virus, these men continue to work for long hours risking themselves. SHALINI SAKSENA catches up with some of the warriors who face death every day

Mohammad Shamim and his co-worker prepare to lower the body at the Jadid Qabrastan Ahle Islam, ITO as family members wearing PPE kits look on; Pappu and Harendra incinerate a COVID-19 body at the electronic crematorium at Nigambodh Ghat, New Delhi

Staring at mortality everyday

ear is a state of mind that can be overcome, say the two staffers Harendra and Pappu at the Nigambodh electric crematorium in New Delhi. For the duo, while the last four months have been tough given the risk they take every day when it comes to handling the bodies of the COVID-19 patients that come to the ghat but the dead need a proper send off even if the bags in which they come wrapped in can't be opened as per the Government guidelines.

"How will we do our work if we get scared and fear the virus? We stare at death all the time. Yes, the Coronavirus has put fear in the minds of the people but not in mine. I was a bit apprehensive but then I had to move past that fast. I got rid of it by burning it with the COVId-19 bodies. The dead coming to the ghat needed a proper send-off. How would that have got that if we shirked our work or decided not to do it?" 55-year-old Harendra asks who hails from Balia, in Uttar Pradesh.

He had come to the Capital in 1990 on the behest of his father-in-law with a promise of a job. For many years he worked making calenders with God and Goddess. But the work took toll on his health and decided to work elsewhere. This is when his brother-in-law told him about working at the crematorium.

"I took this job because it was safer. At the calender making, I was ending up inhaling fumes and it affected my health. I have two sons and had to think about them decided to work elsewhere. That is how I ended up here. I like this job. Yes, some people give us strange looks and think that what we do is weird, but each person on earth has been chosen to do certain kind of work. This is what I have been chosen to do," Harendra says who stays with his family in Rohini and commutes on his bike.

He gets ₹16,000 as salary.

"Besides this, sometimes people give us ₹100 or ₹200. But sometimes, there are people who are so poor that they can't afford a proper cremation for their loved one. In that case, a few of us at the crematorium pitch and do the needful. Just because a person is poor doesn't mean that their dead need to be discarded," Harendra tells you.

For a long time, the duo continued to work without PPE kits. "We protected ourselves with what we had — a mask. There are some days when we end up with no PPEs. But I don't let that scare. I am doing God's work and I believe that He will protect me. Death is the only thing that is certain when we are born. Why should one fear it? We are born, we will all die. That is the truth," Harendra says.

For thirty-nine-year-old Pappu, fear was very real. "I was scared and didn't want to touch the COVID-19 bodies that came initially. The scare was what if I spread the disease to my family. I have a mother, wife and three small children. What will happen to them if I test positive or if they test positive? But humans are resilient. We have learnt to live with the virus and the fear that comes with it. I have done the same," Pappu says who is paid ₹12,000 as salary.

There is a silver lining that involves his work, he says. Last week he had got to know that his name had been nominated for an honour for this service during the lockdown period. However, he tells you that he has not got any letter stating the same. "It is good enough for me to know at least my name was nominated," he says, who has kept soap and an antiseptic solution at the ghat. I take a bath here before I leave for home. Once I reach home, I take a bath once again," Pappu says.

"Yes, the work that I do is risky, but how many people are honoured for their work by the President himself? I am lucky that I have been chosen for this honour," Pappu says.

'I had to quarantine myself to protect my family'

e used to drive a taxi in the Capital. However, a few years back, he had to take a tough call when his father who used to be the caretaker at the Jadid Qabrastan Ahle Islam in ITO, could no longer carry out his duties due to old age — whether he wanted to step into his fathers shoes. Meet Mohammad Shamim, the present caretaker who has till now buried over 550 people in the 50-acres of the graveyard since the outbreak of COVID-19.

His wife was not happy with his decision and did try to persuade him otherwise given that they have four school-going daughters. But Shamim was adamant. "I just felt that this was the right thing to do. We are third generation caretakers. Mere dada karte thhe, phir mere valid aur ab main. When my father became too old to do the work himself I had a choice. But I felt it was my calling. Not everyone gets the opportunity to ensure that man on his final journey is sent with dignity and respect that he deserves. I like the work that I do. It brings me peace. Every person deserves a send-off; I am just glad that I have been chosen to do so," Shamim

He tells you that the qabrastan where he works belongs to a private committee and he is paid ₹100 for each body that he helps bury. But for the COVID-19 bodies, he is paid ₹1000 per day. Though the amount his not much, he says but he gets by since there is other work that he does at the graveyard.

While his committee doesn't provide PPE kits, it was much later that some journalists, some hospitals and even actor Vidya Balan after coming to know that Shamim was burying the dead with no PPE kit provided him with the necessary cover. But he tells you that it is not easy to wear the kit from 9 am in the morning till late

"The doctors and staff working in the hospital have better, they work in an air-conditioned environment. My work entails me to be out the whole day in the blazing sun. It is not easy to wear the kit, the two masks, gloves and a face shield and dig a grave when the temperatures are touching 46° Celsius. First, it is extremely uncomfortable. Second, one can't breath properly. It was very tough. But I had to get used to it," he tells you.

When he didn't have the kit, he had to ensure that he kept his family safe. So he quarantined himself from his family in the house they live given to them by the committee. He shifted in a room that was a few yards away. His meals would be delivered to him and kept outside the room.

"With no protection, I had to ensure that my family was safe. I was a bit apprehensive to being with but someone has to do this job and that too with dignity and respect for the dead. I did what I had to do for my family and did my work. I ensured that the grave was dug to specification of three feet. I ensured that the body was lowered according to the specifications; I would then place a stone on the body and then the soil to finally cover the grave properly. Sometimes, there are people who don't want to touch the body and don't know what to do. In that case, I do the work for them while the maulvi reads the ," the 38-year old says.

For the COVID-19 bodies, he tells you there is a different protocol altogether. One can't remove the bag in which they come in, nor can one clothe them or wash them before burying. "In such a scenario, we have to ensure that the other rituals are followed to a T," Shamim tells you.

Though, it has been tough going but now that the deaths have reduced, he is thankful to God for his mercy. But he is unhappy with the way the administration has treated him. "We are a private committee. When I was told that I would be getting bodies from Government hospital, I told them I needed extra benefit. But they declined and said it was the Government's decision. The least they could have done was provide us with health insurance. But no, there is nothing for us. Here we are risking our lives; we are warriors too. Has anyone besides a half a dozen people done anything for those who are giving the dead their due? No. But it will not stop me from doing my work. Now, I just pray to God that I never get to see what I have seen in the last four months ever in my life again,"

Risky & tough, but work has to be done

While many of us are still staying indoors in order to protect ourselves from the pandemic that has claimed 6.98 lakh lives globally, there are some people who are putting their lives and theirs families at risk as they ferry COVID-19 patients to hospitals or the dead from the mortuary to the cremation grounds or graveyards. Mohammad Shamim, Harendra and Pappu are not the only ones who are putting their lives at risk.

Abhishek Sharma and his driver partner Anmol Sharma, the two ambulance and hearse drivers have been working for long hours as well hours as well.

Abhishek who has been driving the ambulance for the last two years tells you that unlike those working at the crematoriums and graveyards, who didn't have PPEs to begin with, they had it a bit better and were provided the kits by their employers.

DO? BUT NOW, WE

THE FEAR. I HAVE

DONE THE SAME

HAVE LEARNT TO LIVE

WITH THE VIRUS AND

provided the kits by their employers.

"There was no way that we would have been able to do our job properly and not succumb to the virus if we were not wearing the PPEs. Our employer, Rana Ambulance Services, gives this to us. The only problem is that we have to wear it from the time our duty starts till it ends. Sometimes, we get a breather for an hour or so, and we take it off,"

Like Shamim, he too, has quarantined himself from his family. I have a one-year-old can't risk my family. Once I am home, I retire into one room, away from my family. I don't want to give up my job even though their risks involved. It gives me a sense of pride that I am doing what others may consider too risky. For this I am willing to pay price — staying away from my baby and my friends keeping their distance due to the nature of my work — is a very small price that I am willing to pay," the 27-year-old who gets ₹15,000 as salary tells you.

His work, he tells you depends on the calls he gets from his employer who has tied-up with various hospitals in Delhi-NCR. "Sometimes, we drive the ambulance, sometimes the hearse. It also, depends on our duty and shift. Our partners keep changing. Most days it is Anmol, Deepak and me. Sometimes, the duty changes," the Class

XII pass out says.

Anmol Sharma, a Class XII pass out as well, came to know about this job from a friend who is also an ambulance driver and liked the job profile and applied for the same. He has now been with the company for a year-and-a-half. While, he has not quarantined himself, he ensures that he takes bath before he meets anyone. He even washes his clothes himself.

"I don't want anyone in my family to wash my clothes. What if I was carrying the virus? I drive COVID-19 positive people and dead bodies of people with the disease. I like my job and don't want to give it up. But that doesn't mean that I won't protect my family, Sharma says.

Unlike Abhishek, his friends have not given up on him and don't have a problem with the work that he does. "My friends and family are fine with my job. They probably feel and think the way I do. This work brings me a sense of peace and joy. I like doing what I do. Yes, the work is tough and there are risks involved. But somebody has to get it done. Imagine what will happen if we refuse to do what we do? What will the families of the dead or the patients do?," Sharma asks.

"This is where I come in," he says.

address them through fresh educative inputs. Also identify our indwelling potential, hone it and then make the most

Many a times, we remain unaware of our inlaid potential, and so it remains untapped. A couple of years back a young lad came seeking guidance on his career prospects. He was advised to take up media related work as his strength point was communicative abilities and flair for language. He immediately retorted: "Sir, you have read me wrong. My language skill is not good and I wish to go for a managerial assignment. So, I am trying to get into a business school to acquire the necessary skill set required." I could make out that his preconditioned mind is not able to digest my advice. I then suggested: "Well, it is your prerogative what profession to opt for. But in any discipline, you will need language skill to conduct well. Together with your preparations for next entrance test for admission into a business school, why not work on your language skills also." That got registered in his mind. He immediately joined a media organisation as an intern, with the intent to improve his language skill. Within three months, the young man realised that he could write well, and soon after got into journalism.

A couple of years back, a gentleman in his early forties came seeking guidance on two issues: "Sir, my domestic atmosphere is not good. Suggest me some puja so that our family life improves. What is my growth potential in the present job?"

In so far as your wish to improve domestic atmosphere is concerned, you need to work upon your attitude, playing spoil sport with you so far. Pujas conducted by pundits can't bring about any change. "Is it possible to change my inborn nature?" He asked. "Remember, human beings enjoy the exclusive privilege to guide their actions by choice and discrimination. Your discriminatory ability helps you identify and acknowledge inherent infirmities. Following which, you can make a conscientious choice to bring about the desired change through fresh educative inputs." I responded.

About your career prospect, I see a change coming around 2019-20 under unforeseen circumstances. Better be on the lookout for alternative options available so that you land up in the right place. Otherwise, you may have to leave your job in a state of desperation. He again countered: "I am very comfortable in my present organisation. My seniors appreciate my work, and I have been growing. Why should I think of moving away from such a comfortable work atmosphere?" "Well, time ahead will prove. The problem with you is your stubbornness and the wish to live on own exclusive terms. But the world doesn't always move to anybody's asking." I responded. No wonder, during the ongoing pandemic, his company became bankrupt, and he is without job. Having thus been proven right, he has again sought guidance.

Let us now look at the man's astrological pointers to his personality trends. Both the luminaries the Sun and Moon are in fixed signs making him stubborn. Mars in the 4th house conjunct Moon makes him irritable, in fact, 'My way or high way' is his attitude. Mercury placed adverse to Neptune holds the key to his insensible judgment. The result is there to see. The man's indwelling potential too is immense. It is still not late to address his inherent infirmities. Following which, his life may turn into a pleasant experience.

The COVID-19 pandemic has completely transformed how businesses carry out their day-to-day tasks, writes DINESH SHARMA, as he explains how digital transformation in corporate firms can support the work culture and team collaboration during this period everyone had exciting plans for their personal and professional endeavour. Came March 2020, Covid-19 changed life for everyone starting with a sudden complete lockdown forcing everyone stay at home but ensuring that they work from home and deliver the best despite pandemic and challenges of operating from home.

While every business had a "so called" Business Continuity or Disaster Recovery plan in place but Covid-19 lockdown was the father of all. A situation never happened, never thought about in 100 years. Everyone was sitting at home trying to figure out how to maintain sanity of working while at home connecting with colleagues, vendors, suppliers, employees, manager etc.

In the current pandemic scenario, it means every business process of an organisation requires immediate conversion to digital mode to stay in business. Say for example, if banking transaction were done through visiting banks, in Covid-19 situation banking transactions needs to be done using net-banking. Or if the business was preparing invoices physically and sending it by courier to clients, during covid lockdown all invoices required to be prepared using digital solution, digital signature and sending it through emails. Take another example, if business meetings with clients, vendors, internal team which were happening physically, come pandemic, physical meetings are no more an option, so use of digital meeting options is only way out.

HOW TO GO ABOUT DIGITISATION

That's an interesting topic. Struggling with lockdown, the CEO gives target to all business heads and CIO to digitise everything. That can be really disastrous. I would also like to caution here that digitisation has to be done in very systematic and gradual way. It is just not possible to digitise everything by approving a financial budget and giving mandate to all functions. Many companies burn their fingers losing lot of money, efforts and drive due to failed digitisation attempts. One must start with non-critical processes, function and implementation also to be done only for one or two division to start with instead of going across. Companies also make the mistake of building software inhouse. Now, that's a terrible mistake. Now-a-days there are many good Enterprise Product SaaS companies having products very much in line of specific business need which comes at almost at 5% of cost of building in-house. In addition, Enterprise Product companies are very focussed and come with best practices, innovative solutions, state-of-art technology, seamless product support and feature upgrades which is not possible for in building in-house or making tailor made product. It's important to be very careful while selecting technology partner so one can do a reference check from existing client and ensure security certification (like ISO). It definitely helps in building trust.

While it is always good to subscribe to readily available SaaS solutions in the market, however, just to test the waters, there are free tools available for basic digital solutions which allow users to get a feel of the solution and whether it would really solve the problem. Many a times, a lot of businesses purchase a technology solution or build solutions, however, they end up not using the solution been able to spend enough time in scoping the technology solution or clear intent issue which means resistance to change.

WHY TECHNOLOGY FAILS

Some businesses use technology firms to build customised solutions like Invoicing Solution, CRM Solutions, Contract Management Solution which comes with its own perils like you end up spending 20 times money and ultimately realising the product which got build has taken into consideration an idealistic scenario with advance level of digitisation. Life does not really move that way. It is critical that a strategic initiative group should be formed for digitisation purposes with clear agenda, roadmap and responsibilities fixed. At times it happens that Strategy and Innovation along with CIO decides on one technology for a business function which do not take into account real life situation resulting in complete waste of money

MANAGING STAKEHOLDERS INTERNALLY

Digitisation & Technology deployment in business can not be done by one person. Taking all stakeholders on-board and ensuring the product meets expectation makes a lot of difference. In any business, normally CIO, CFO, Business Head and Strategy & Innovation Head are relevant stakeholders for a high level decision making process. Once the business decides to go for technology solution, the real stakeholders are business users, technology team to ensure that the product is in line with business expectation and it gets installed within the organisation without any major change management. The whole process has to be coordinated and require acceptance from all stakeholder.

Another important thing is digitisation should also be done based on level of readiness. Say for example, if you plan for digitisation of invoicing function, it's ideal and simple to remove print, sign and despatch steps. So you can make invoice as per normal process, use any of digital signing functionality using Digital Signature (Dongle) or Aadhar Sign feature to sign and email the Invoice from your official email ID. This is very basic process but will help the organisation reduce at least five days of time and cost of despatch and invoice printing to zero and improve collection time.

GLOBAL TRENDS

Globally, digitisation and using technology solution has been a way of life. For example, while in India many businesses still do not use technology for invoicing, contract management, CRM and business operations work-flow, in countries like US, UK, Europe and Australia, the level of digitisation has been very high. The reason for this is high cost labour, availability of term business vision. Globally, businesses go for ready SaaS products for CRM, Contract Management Software, HRM Software and ERP unless the business is fairly big and has complex processes, which require specialised technology solution. Even for those companies, they first start with basic level of technology solution and gradually move to moderate and advance level

COVID PANDEMIC ACCELERATED THE DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION JOURNEY

The COVID-19 pandemic has completely transformed how businesses carry out their dayto-day tasks. Every aspect of business is getting digitised and digital channels have become the sole media of communication for some. Every business was seemingly forced to accelerate itself as the digital strategy was still a part of the corporate world that had the potential to become a primary in the future. Businesses that were already thriving seemed to have seamlessly converted their channels of communication online after a point of time, yet most businesses are still struggling to keep up with the pace. Digital workplace has become the new normal.

This digital transformation in the coronial era caused businesses in almost all industries to leap over several hurdles in a short time. It demanded business owners familiarise themselves with the digital world as quickly as possible and forced them and their employees to learn new skills on an alien medium. This ongoing process has led to several changes in the work culture and team collaboration of busi-

QUICK DIGITISATION FOR MAXIMUM INSTANT GAINS

It is important for businesses to make sure that the working of the business can continue smoothly. So certain ready solution which are useful for key business function and easy to deploy can work really wonders. For example, board meeting management software having video-conference facility in-built, provide several benefits to the company and help it to flawlessly communicating amongst one another. Using these services could prove useful to companies in these uncertain times and can also allow people to support other upcoming businesses. Same solution can be used to conduct senior management meeting or collaborative meeting with stakeholders from multiple businesses across geographies. These solutions can be customised according to the company's specific needs, which can further improve the efficiency of the business.

Similarly, concerning the issue of physical documents and digital documents, digitising the paperwork is unavoidable. Replacing physical documents has been an issue for a while now, to shift to electronic documents. Using digital documents also help reduce the spread of covid and ensure a safer working environment.

To improve efficiency in this aspect as well, companies can use solutions such as Contract Lifecycle Management (CLM) as they can be customised to fit the business and can greatly improve the working of the business by alerting the business for any risks in the contract. A CLM software allows an organisation to manage all its contracts on cloud and easily communicate with all its stakeholders in one place. Such software are not only necessary in this coronial era, but can improve productivity and profitability of a business. Digitisation of businesses has significant positive outcomes for businesses. Digital businesses empower employees through transparency, learning opportunities, and open communication. If the communication channels are well organised and are familiarised with the workforce, it can allow everyone involved in the company to be informed about the decision with just one click.

Unlike the usage of emails as we did precorona, a communication channel allow information to be without any disruption. Employees can be anywhere in terms of location but they can collaborate and discuss using meeting tools like Zoom, Microsoft Team or Google Meet. The concept of office is slowly fading away. The cost elements have changed and spending is more into digital assets like software solution for business function, cloud storage, cyber security, data protection insurance cost is being replaced for earlier cost elements such as infrastructure costs, rental, office maintenance cost, travel cost

Usage of the previously mentioned services involving board meeting management can also ensure that all members are kept up to date with the workings of the business. Moreover, to replace the informal interactions that took place in the workplace, workers can virtually talk in the middle of meetings to discuss their achievements and how they have been adjusting to the world after the pandemic. Since they are not in the physical workplace, they can also take breaks to interact with their family, which could ease their mental stress in between meetings.

The whole concept of digitisation has to be imbibed into the DNA of the organisation and should be embraced across. If senior management does not get accustomed to digital platforms and expects the whole organisation to adopt digital platforms to perform office work, it will be highly inefficient and ineffective. If businesses are successfully able to implement these changes and utilise this digital transformation, it can help them improve team collaboration and support the work culture.

MEDITATIVE STILLNESS

We are all spiritual seekers, and we all have our own definition of meditative stillness that resonates with us, writes SUMIRAN ANNAMARIA KASHYAP editation allows us to think of our past with peace, our present with passion, and our future with prayerfulness. It's a daily sanctuary, wherein we can make sincere efforts, to allow the most authentic version of our Self to unravel. It's the authenticity of this Self that makes its strength and ingenuity effortless. Beyond the Self, it's not just about coming home to the Cosmos, the Source, but about making the journey inspirational for others around us,

UNDERSTANDING THE ROLE OF MEDITATIVE STILLNESS

It helps with a significant aspect of daily practice — that of being able to assimilate a thought, idea, and/or memory without an emotional 'charge' attached to it. This is easier said than done. But, it is doable, one step at a time. Then, one day, we find that we're able to adopt meditative stillness as a way of being, when the situation calls for it, quite effortlessly.

PERSPECTIVES ON MEDITATIVE STILLNESS

World Within is a tranquil fountainhead of guided meditation practices entwined with skills-based learning. Founder-enabler Shikha Puri's endeavour is to bring awareness to one's own journey, that one decides to embark upon. She says, "Stillness is a moment that can last a few seconds, minutes or even longer. It's a moment of realisation, and we can call it our oneness with the power of the Universe. It helps us realise that there is so much more than us and there's so much more over us. All of this

- Nature's abundance, and its own powers — humbles us. That way, even in nothingness, there is something."

Shikha describes meditation not as the end, but the journey, the process, leading us. She elaborates: "In a moment, even for a second, when we can feel the oneness with the Source, meditation happens itself and there is

The approach: Assimilating a thought, experience, and/or related memory, without the emotional 'charge,' is not about forceful detachment. Rather, it entails reconciling with the emotional 'charge'. Here's a brief anecdote to explain: I drew Tarot cards for a friend recently. He called me wise for the manner in which I interpreted them. I said, "wisdom comes from having been a fool for a very long time."

It's the same with meditative stillness! Attempting it is easier, when we accept, and embrace, the high-octane able to segregate what we need as a lifelesson, from what we need to let go of, because it may have run its course.

The process at work: As is the case with all authentic forms of spiritual selfwork, we find self-introspection at the heart of meditation, and meditative stillness. The subsequent mental chatter, though potentially excruciating, helps us familiarise ourselves with the potency of the emotional 'charge.' And, while this 'charge' is going through us, it teaches us many things about who we are, who we thought we were, and who we can be. This combination of awareness and remembrance that makes meditation personal, and sacred.

STRIVING TO ATTAIN MEDITATIVE STILLNESS IS ABOUT WORKING TOWARDS AND CREATING A CORRECT INNER ENVIRONMENT, TO ENTER INTERNAL PRACTICES FOR THE MIND (ANTARANGA SADHNA) THAT ARE MORE HELPFUL TO MEDITATION, SO OUR MIND/BODY LENDS ITSELF

The ease or difficulty in arriving at meditative stillness: Żorian Cross (the 'modern Merlin,' as I call him) is a tarot reader, astrologer, numerologist, and psychic channel. He's also a certified ashtanga/vinyasa yoga instructor. Zorian asserts that stillness isn't for the unethical anarchists of chaos, and he further explains union with the Self, through the practice of Asanas and Pranayama: "The body is constantly abuzz with trillions of cells and subatomic particles that are beaming with life, while the mind is bombarded by infinite thoughts on a conscious and subconscious level. Perhaps that's why to achieve stillness, Patanjali laid out the eight limbs — Ashtanga — the first two being Yamas and Niyamas that contain five personal ethics to follow strictly, along with five societal rules to abide by. To get the body to be seated in stillness, a regular Asana practice is a must. Only once that's achieved, can we practice the art of Pranayama to still the mind. Some say that it takes five times longer to still the mind through Pranayama than it takes to still the body with Asana."

Practice that focuses on the power of meditative stillness: Mini Shastri, founder of Om Yoga Shala Delhi, with a teaching experience of over two decades, is also a wellness consultant and columnist. Her teachings are shaped by her vast travel and study with Masters from Kerala, Bengaluru, Mysuru, Chennai, and U.S.A. You can study and teach with Mini on her retreats. The focus is on living techniques — with daily Yoga, Pranayam, Meditation, cleansing Kriyas, along with curated diets.

She explains the daily strength and nourishment we can derive from sincere practice succinctly, and so beautifully. "Your mat, your sadhna, and your tapas will be your guru always," she always reminds, gently.

On the subject of recommended methods she says, "Some easy meditation practices like So Ham breath mantra, Tratak, Om Japa meditation, and Kaya Stairam (cultivating stillness with presence in the body) are a great way to pull in a fragmented mind (vikshepa) or distractions towards meditative stillness."

Mini shares that striving to attain meditative stillness is about working towards and creating a correct inner environment, to enter internal practices for the mind (Antaranga Sadhna) that are more helpful to meditation, so our mind/body lends itself naturally to make meditation more spontaneous and joyous.

Choosing a suitable time to practice stillness in meditation: Mini advises, "It's best to take advantage of the shifting qualities of the mornings or sunsets. According to Ayurveda and our body's clock, we need to adjust our actions to counteract the innate qualities of this time. Dawn and dusk are a natural time of change - transformational, with shifting energies, resulting in fruitful meditation. The quiet stability of a meditation practice may also serve to counteract the potentially anxiety-producing aspect of change, of this time of day."

HUMBLE WISH AND PRAYER

We are all spiritual seekers in our own ways, and no doubt, we all have our own definition of meditative stillness that resonates with us. Whatever this definition is, based on my personal experience, I'd like to say: In our spenace of meditative stillness we all reunite with, resurrect, and reinvigorate who we truly are. May our new 'once upon a time,' begin now.

Symbolism of Lord Ram

ord Ram is not only a religious symbol. He today epitomises a cultural renaissance that was long overdue. The ✓ Indian subcontinent, the Aaryavrat, has been one of the most invaded lands in the history of the world. The result was a civilisation battered, a culture desecrated and a psyche bruised. Ancient India was a prosperous society and an acclaimed seat of learning. But the many onslaughts by foreign invaders impoverished the rich Indian land and culture. The continued subjugation of the country at the hands of Mongols and Moguls and subsequently the Europeans, particularly the British ingrained a deep rooted inferiority complex in the Indian minds. Centuries of alien rule destroyed the richness of the civilisation to such an extent that most Indians considered themselves to be a second rate citizenry born only to be ruled. There was a deliberate design in the plundering and destruction of the places of religious worship by the alien Islamic invaders. They wanted to establish the superiority of their own religion over that of the Indians and demoralise the people. The temples of India not only possessed huge wealth, they also stood for the civilisational and cultural pride. The later British conquest of India, the purchase the people of the civilisation of the production though largely for economic and commercial purposes, further accentuated this trend, even if it was perpetrated far more systematically and cleverly. They wanted a thoroughly demoralised India for tightening the British strangle hold and continued hegemony. All these alien rules left a lasting impact on the Indian psyche. For those who have reasons to agree, the elaborate account given by American Historian Will Durant as early as 1930 may suffice. The Case for India is an eye opener in which he describes the cruel and scheming British rule as a conscious and deliberate bleeding of India. Freedom from the colonial yolk did mark the birth of an independent nation but it did not heal the wounded psyche which continued to carry the baggage of centuries old alien rule. Certain sections of the western press were also adding to this psychological loading with their myopic stories. The indelible mark of inferiority in their minds needed a strong cultural symbol to wipe this and boost the morale. After mental struggle of several decades post independence, the Indian pride could find a succor in Lord Ram. Restoring the national pride is what leads to a cultural renaissance and Ram symbolises that. Ram and Ram Temple signify many things today. It is not about a Hindu God, it is a sustaining force, a means to strengthen the Indian psyche that was awaiting a realisation for a long time. However, it is important to understand that Ram stood for universal values that are relevant not only to all generations but also to people across ethnic, social and economic backgrounds. Ram's life was an example of ethics in practice. Truth, compassion and love, and most importantly, values driven leadership. Ram was an embodiment of Rai Dharma, a virtue that is ilmost non existent today. I is important to understand what was Dharma in the eyes of Ram. Succinctly stated in Ram Charit Manas by Goswami Tulsidas, it is — par hit sarasi dharam nahi bhai. Which means the greatest religion is to serve others.

Happiness is a state of mind Classification of pleasures

It is in our mind that we live our lives. A good mind is the only way to a "good life" and this mind needs careful cultivation, says PARTHO DHANG

t is possibly right that "the happiest peo-ple we find today live on Facebook". The pleasure-filled acts, and the smiles on every face, had made this social media plat-form a place to take shelter when every-thing around seems to be crumbling. True or not, humans seek happiness and pursue it all the time. It's a state when one fulfills one's expectations, and craving is satisfied. Humans have linked happiness to pleasure and all efforts are being directed toward deriving pleasure to achieve this elusive

Unfortunately, this happiness never lasts. Probably because "perpetual bliss would completely undermine our will to accomplish anything at all — that's why perfect contentment has probably been evolved out of us". Maybe, we are programmed to be dissatisfied all the time, and this may be true as even after thousands of discourses and hundreds of books with the goal of increasing well-being, we aren't happier.

Does this mean we do not have truly happy people or communities around us? Take the example Amish people. A community living in parts of the United States and Canada and following a traditional Christian church which dictates all aspects of their day-to-day living, including prohibitions or limitations on the use of powerline electricity, television, telephones and automobiles, as well as regulations on clothing. The Amish value rural life, manual labour, and humility, all under the auspices of living what they interpret to be their God's word. This group, by sheer will power, has resisted the global culture. They marry in their own community and continue to have six to seven children. Between 1992 and 2017, the Amish population increased by 149 percent, a figure not recorded in any society in modern history. While the population of indigenous tribes in all continents are on a drastic decline.

Amish children are found to be "obedient, content and remarkably happy", and the reason was solely the way these children were brought up holding on to certain values. It seems simple life cues, just like in the good old days, seemed to work in their communities. They are taught to practice forgiveness by understanding that "making a mistake is not the end of the world", and to use their own creativity to amuse themselves to avoid boredom.

Probably withdrawing membership from the modern world is one good way to open a path toward happiness. Talks on giving it all up and heading to the mountains seem a way out. It is true modernity has sent us into a depressive state, but why blame modernity? In fact, modernity has also opened countless routes to happiness. It has laid more choices in front of us than ever before. Though the drive to attain material wealth and physical pleasure remain a predominant activity for the masses as a way to happiness, a growing list of individuals are giving up their fortune and future to take to alternative living, new careers, and expressing alternative behavior to seek happiness.

Choosing to travel in car pools, living in communes, in remoteness, living as a virtual being, expressing homosexual preferences, accepting a pet as family, using cryp-to-currency, and thinking of life on another planet are a growing trend. Modernity provides such possibilities and opportunities with reversibility, a point toward an alternative way to happiness. In fact, individuals or communities can be happy and free from tussle if they set a boundary to their desires and guard it mindfully. Modernity is never a stumbling block in this.

Our natural state may not be mere seeking of happiness. Our natural state is possibly "being awake, aware, and feeling our feelings in their fullness". To be in this state, it requires the willingness to feel everything, at maximum intensity. This they call it "joy

The writer is a Philippines-based Indian scientist entrepreneur and a writer. He's also the author of the book: Fervor to be Free — a tale of tussle between mind,

Pleasure is defined in several ways, but only one, that is the state of feeling, must be felt by us to be truly happy, writes AJIT KUMAR BISHNOI

Thether we admit or not, we live mainly to get pleasures. Pleasures are classified mainly in two ways. These are in the three modes or beyond and whether gross or subtle or superior. I will begin with the classification according to the three modes. These are: goodness passion and darkness. Examples of pleasures under these modes will clarify their differences and advisability quite adequately. Beginning with the mode of goodness, these are my favourite activities? I love to appreciate others, especially my grandchildren; I look for any good excuse. Eating tasty foods and listening to good music comes next. In these days of forced isolation, I enjoy the rich green the nature has blessed us with due to reduced pollution levels. Playing sports was my favourite activity. I found the experience very satisfying.

The mode of passion allows us some pleasures. Creatively is high on my list. As I spend a lot of time alone with only God for my company, I try to manage my life with small innovations. Reading literature is next on my list. In my case, I love The Gita. Good sleep makes me feel very good. Feeding birds in my balcony by leaving biscuit pieces in an earthen pot makes me feel very good. I enjoy the company of the birds.

The pleasures, which are in the mode of darkness, should be kept away from self; I will not go anywhere near them. Illicit sex destroys families; the momentary pleasure exacts a very heavy price. Eating meats, which is very much in news because of the possibil-ity of some meat being the origin of the Coronavirus pandemic, should be restricted in any case if we wish to save our forests. Growing grains in order to obtain one fifth its weight in meat makes zero sense to me. Gambling is a pleasure best avoided. Are we not trying to grab someone's money? Cruelty is a behaviour not fit for human beings. And the last example is drinking, which ruins family finances and health; covers the conscience temporarily.

Now let me turn to examples of gross and subtle pleasures. Starting with gross ones, preaching to devotees pleases the Lord greatly. (The Gita 18.68-69) Doing 'satsang' in the company of spiritually-minded people is highly beneficial. Lots of what I have learned is in the company of my learned friend Mr. Jha. Making sacrifice like parents do all the time; don't they put the needs of their children about theirs? Similarly, 'paropakar', which is doing good deeds keeps the world going. The last example is personal, that is selling our book in World Book-Fairs. I have picked out five examples of subtle pleasures. These are: the feeling of purity, pride in being dutiful/useful, control over the mind and the senses, love from others and trust of others.

Let me end the article with five examples of beyond the modes or superior pleasures. At the top of the list are responses from God, which devotees receive. It will be almost impossible to go on the 'tapasya' path without adequate encouragement from God. He is extremely kind to me; invariably, I get daily communication from my master. Similar is my Lord's mercy in empowering me to write spiritual texts; I frequently get surprised by what has been written after I finish. Peacefulness must be part of the superior pleasures, because without peace there is no bliss — the ultimate 'sukha' (pleasures). (2.66) The last example is of making progress of the spiritual kind, which continues in future lives. (6.43-45)

I hope this covering of wide spectrum of pleasures will bring clarity about them, and the false nation that sense pleasures are the only ones can be given up. Superior pleasures are available and of many kinds. Then, why seek lower ones, many of them whom bring negative results?

Three days later, he was replaced by another actor. Thalambralu happened right after this film. When I met him on the sets, I asked why he quit the other film. The director and producer of the Tamil film asked Rajasekhar garu how he found me. He said, she is homely and might not suit the character. So the director replaced him instead of me in the film (laughs). Rajasekhar garu and I became good friends during the making of Thalambralu, later our friendship grew and we fell in love.

Living with in-laws before marriage...

We had a lot of issues from Rajasekhar garu's family. His mom didn't approve of our marriage. She agreed to him acting on one condition that he shouldn't get married to an actress. He comes from a wellread family of doctors, lawyers, and engineers at home. Since Rajasekhar garu didn't want to go against his mother, we waited for quite a long time before moment in my life.

Our relationship was the talk of the town...

Our relationship was quite open. It was a shocker for the entire industry back then as we would roam together and I would accompany Rajasekhar garu on all his trips. During interviews when people asked him if he would marry me, he would say that he would marry somebody his parents approved. That shocked everybody. My mother was a little apprehensive then because of Rajasekhar's answers. I convinced my mom that even if I don't my mom that even if I don't marry him, we would end up remaining good friends and I have thought over it and taken the decision. Now, when I think about it, I feel I was quite bold.

I believe in friendly parenting...

I am a very friendly mother. I don't believe in strict parenting. We should compare our mindset with our children used to be the last person to pay my fee in the class. To make some money to help my family, I took up acting. Since I was introduced by T Rajendar, forget about my acting skills, I was signed by other production houses for 10 other films before his movie was even released.

Meeting Rajasekhar garu...

In one of my Tamil films, Rajasekhar garu was one of the heroes. That's when I first saw him. I heard he was a doctor and that naturally carried a kind of respect towards him. We shot for one day and the next day he disappeared.

we tied the knot. He struggled a lot to convince his mother. He even met some other girls as his mother wanted. During such a phase, he met with a major accident during the making of Magadu. His parents were out of town then. I stayed with him in the hospital. By the time his parents got back, the surgery was done. Everything changed within this one month and his parents started liking me. They took me to their house directly from the hospital and I started living with my in-laws even before my marriage. At the same time, I lost my father. After staying with his parents for almost a year, we got married in 1991. My marriage remains the most emotional when you are at their age. Right from education to clothing to food, you have to think about them from their point of view. Unless they experience, they will not learn. Of course there are some things they should not experience. One should build a friendly relationship with one's children to make them understand that some things are wrong and are better avoided. If you build a vacuum where they feel your parents don't understand you, they start hiding stuff from you. I strongly believe we should create a friendly space where they can discuss and share anything and everything with us. I would love to give this advice to all the parents out there.

Debut in Telugu...

After one year or so of my debut in Tamil, I got an offer for Thalambralu in Telugu. MS Reddy After one year or so of my debut in Tamil, I got an offer for Thalambralu in Telugu. MS Reddy garu and Shyam Prasad garu saw my photograph on a magazine cover in Tamil and called me for an audition. MS Reddy garu gave me full-page dialogue and asked me if I can read and write Telugu. He was very happy and excited that I could. He was passionate about the Telugu language. Later, I signed Thalambralu and it was a big hit back then. Many films came my way in Telugu after that one after the other. I worked with Rajasekhar garu in Thalambralu and also in the next 10 to 15 films. Of these, eight movies ran for over 100 days. Two or three years before my wedding in 1991, I stopped acting.

I was a studious child. I was the topper in my school and the head girl as well. I also played cricket and represented my school. I used to participate in everything. I was quite eloquent as well and would give speeches in my school on all occasions. We used to live in a rented house and I and my siblings used to steal mangoes from the tree in fter a very long time, I put on some makeup again for Bathuku Jatka Bandi in Zee Telugu. I did that show for a year and never thought it would gain so much popularity not only in the Telugu states but abroad as well. Even after quitting the show, I got a lot of calls from viewers seeking my counsel. When we went to the US while I was doing the show, I had people telling me to do the show there. Also, I took up this show as a challenge to share with at least a fraction of the people what life is. Of late, trolling has increased for these shows after similar shows started on other channels. It became a big joke then and that's one of the reasons I quit. I read a lot of comments where people call the show fake or we are paying people to sit and share a scripted story. NO! That's not true. Whosoever is passing such comments, through this medium, I request them all to come to the shoot, watch the entire episode to understand that it is real. I'm ready to face any challenge to prove what we are doing is right and there is nothing called fake or a created story.
