Taking a closer look at the farmers’ agitation

B eing neither a farmer, trader, economist (or sac rificing his country’s anniversary), I will make a few limited guesses of any ideology, and attempt to make sense of the ongoing agitation by farmers. The farmers are central to India’s agricultural sector, and the politics around agriculture in general, and the farmers in particular. Thus, the ongoing agitation by the farmers is of utmost importance. Why is agitation by the farmers important? The main reason is that agrarian policies have to maintain a balance between two contrasting objectives – the need to feed the growing population on one hand, and the need to make farmers productive and manageable on the other.

The farmers are important to continue farming activities as agriculture is the mainstay for more than half the population of the country. To feed the population, the prices of agricultural produce must be kept low, which becomes a challenge for the agricultural sector. Also, ensuring food security and affordability of food is a necessity.

A delicate balance between agricultural production and processing, marketing, and distribution is required. The government has been making efforts to achieve this balance through a policy framework, which includes policies for farmers directly (Agriculture, Land Reforms, Food, and Consumer Policies), and for consumers indirectly (Trade, Industry, and Consumer Policies). To achieve this balance, various states have implemented policies that are designed to improve access to markets.

Thus, agriculture market in India is multi-dimensional in nature, and is matters for achieving economies of scale and other optimum outcomes. Unfortunately, this regulated structure prevents development of integrated national or regional markets for agricultural products. This restricts access to various regions of the country, which is unavoidable when produce is transported and processed.

Therefore, the farmers are entitled to the fruits of their labours in terms of remuneration and profit, which is essential to sustain the agricultural sector. The government needs to ensure that farmers are provided with fair compensation for their produce. This includes the implementation of assured Minimum Support Price (MSP) for farm produce, which is one of the most important measures to support the farmers. The MSP is a critical tool to ensure that farmers receive a fair price for their produce. This also includes the creation of marketing institutions for various regions of the country, which are improved through the Interstate Creditors and Intermediate Creditors Act.

The government also needs to work towards the reformation of the Indian Agriculture Produce (Marketing) and Employment Act, 1961, and the Indian Agriculture Produce (Marketing) and Employment (Amendment) Act, 2020, to address the concerns of the farmers.

The month of May saw a massive farmers’ protest in the National Capital Region, which saw nearly 80 percent of the farmers gathering in the protest. The farmers were, however, not allowed to access the national capital. Therefore, they opted to stay at their respective villages.

This was followed by the Supreme Court’s order to hold a meeting with the farmers in the upcoming days. The farmers have also been regularly informed by the government about the steps taken to address their concerns.

Overflocking, overflocking cause main of frequent road accidents across state

KTH HYDERABAD

One man thinks that the pandemic and work from home had led to lesser vehicles on the roads and in turn, lesser road accidents, because the number has in fact gone up! Divvy for die was his reaction to at least 17 road accidents.

Police confirmed that traffic accidents had decreased significantly since the government imposed the lockdown on the roads in the area. However, with the government having lifted lockdown restrictions, road accidents have increased.

After the lockdown restrictions were lifted, there were many who preferred to use the public transport instead of personal vehicles. However, fixing these restrictions were the social distance, volume limits, heading to congestion conditions.

According to the officials concerned, responsibility in the number one cause for accidents, followed by reckless driving, which was mainly due to non-compliance by some of the vehicle drivers.

Though the department confirmed that the number of road accidents in state, the department was being observed non-compliance by some of the drivers. Many drivers were observed speeding and traffic violations.

It may be recalled that the lockdown continued to be enforced of the Covid-19 pandemic from March 26 onwards, with the road traffic decreased. The lockdown was declared in lockdown down during which period people were confined mostly in households only but now after the relaxation of lockdown there has been a rise.

The lockdown along with the driving violations were reduced by 75 per cent including road accidents, fits and accidents. However, the lockdown continued to be enforced in the twin cities of Hyderabad, Secunderabad and Gachibowli till June 30, 2020.

In another incident, seven persons including a family member and four others sustained serious injuries where they were travelling in a head-on collision with a lorry after the driver attempted to overtake another vehicle. The accident occurred near the Mehdipatnam police station. The driver of the lorry has been arrested.

According to the officials, the Greater Hyderabad Metropolitan Authority (GHMC) as of March 20 has reported 313 road accidents involving 2,836 road users. The overall number of road accidents has increased by 16 per cent since the lockdown.

It is worth noting that during the lockdown, there were only 125 road accidents reported in the twin cities. However, the number of road accidents has increased by 150 per cent compared to the number of days.

There are several factors that have contributed to the rise in road accidents.

One of the main factors is the increase in the number of vehicles on the roads, leading to a higher number of accidents. Another factor is the relaxation of lockdown restrictions, which has led to an increase in the number of people on the roads.

Traffic police have also noted an increase in the number of accidents involving pedestrians, which is a concern due to the potential for severe injuries in such cases.

A 100-year-old mystery of how malaria affects brain decoded

The study used cutting-edge imaging techniques to compare the brains of survivors with those who died from the disease across different age groups.

The study found that brains of survivors with various clinical syndromes (malaria, meningitis, and encephalitis) were not significantly different from the controls, but those that survived with severe malaria had significantly smaller brain volumes than the controls. This finding was consistent across different age groups, suggesting that malaria may have a long-lasting impact on brain development.

The researchers suggest that the results have implications for understanding the long-term effects of malaria on brain development. They also suggest that these findings may help in identifying individuals at risk of developing neurological disorders in the future.

T he US President has shown that when it comes to shaping up the institution of his own terms for a second term, there are systemic changes in his own terms.

President Donald Trump's chief of staff, Mark Meadows, made it clear to the media that the administration was planning a new campaign strategy to challenge the results of the election. The move was seen as an attempt to undermine the legitimacy of the election and to create doubt about the validity of the vote.

The move came amid growing concerns about the security of the election process, with some experts expressing concern that the administration might use the election results to justify a coup or other actions.

Research and development in India requires greater attention in the critical areas of climate change mitigation and adaptation.

HYDERABAD | THURSDAY | DECEMBER 17, 2020

KARIM JAFNI

On November 27, through a gesture indicative of the Union Ministry of Environment, Climate and Forests (MoEFCC), the government of India released the revised National Action Plan for Prevention of Climate Change (NAPCC). The aim of the action plan is to contribute, along with other countries, to the global efforts to mitigate climate change. The plan includes the implementation of several measures to reduce the country’s carbon footprint, improve energy efficiency, and promote clean energy.

The government has identified several key areas for action, including the development of renewable energy sources, the promotion of energy efficiency in buildings and transport, and the reduction of methane emissions. The plan also emphasizes the importance of international cooperation in addressing climate change.

The NAPCC highlights the government’s commitment to reducing its carbon footprint and combating climate change. The implementation of the plan will require significant investment and cooperation from all stakeholders, including the government, private sector, and civil society.

The revised NAPCC is an important step in India’s efforts to address climate change. However, much more needs to be done to achieve the goals outlined in the plan. The government will need to work closely with other countries and international organizations to ensure the success of the action plan.

This initiative is part of the government’s broader efforts to promote sustainability and reduce the country’s carbon footprint. The government has set a target of achieving net-zero emissions by 2050, and the NAPCC is a crucial component of this strategy.
