The government on Monday banned flights from the UK till December 31 amid a surge in Covid cases in the country, with the new mutant variant having an unusually large reproduction number.

The ban, effective from midnight, comes after reports of a new variant strain which was first detected in southeast England in late December and is quickly becoming the dominant strain in that region and in Europe. Britain expects it to spread in the coming weeks.

The government had earlier banned air travel from Britain with effect from December 22, and the aviation ministry had issued a notification for a complete ban on December 23.

Police were on alert at airport terminals as flights were to be sent to a remote place for decontamination.

The government also banned the entry of British nationals in the country with effect from January 4, 2021. The ban extends to those who arrived in the country on or after December 22.

Noting the sudden rise in Covid cases, KCR government, especially the health department, has now realised that it's not possible to take up recruitment drives.

According to the annual report released by Telangana's health department, the government has now realised that it's not possible to take up recruitment drives.

As a result, the process would get delayed due to complications in the number of traffic violators, KCR government, especially the health department.

Chandrababu has been scheduled to hold a review meeting on December 19 to decide whether to file an appeal against the High Court order calling the meeting was cancelled. The government had filed a review petition against the High Court order calling last week which had asked the state government to complete the road works being done in the urban area of Mahabubnagar and Mandagopal to avoid the construction of the project.

The Central and State governments, launching the schemes for the benefit of the people, have been raking in large amounts of money that benefit the people in the state. They have been criticized for not reaching the people in need.

The government had promised to ensure that the new system will ensure transparency and no discretion will be exercised in the process. The court made it clear that the state government cannot adopt any course of action that is contrary to the law.

The new system, introduced to replace the old one, is expected to prevent corruption and ensure that the money received is used for the intended purpose.

Nepal on the boil

As Oli dissolves House, losing the majority to challengers, it’s time for India to manoeuvre the crisis to its advantage

The situation in Nepal is fast developing, and it seems that India may have to step up its diplomatic efforts to ensure that the crisis does not spiral out of control. Nepal’s prime minister, Oli, has dissolved the parliament and called for early elections, which has set off a political crisis in the country. The move has been met with mixed reactions, with some calling it a step towards democracy and others viewing it as a planned move to stay in power.

India, being a close neighbour of Nepal, has a vested interest in ensuring that the political crisis in Nepal does not spill over to its borders. The country has a significant Nepali population, and any unrest in Nepal could have implications for India’s internal security. India has been diplomatic in its approach, urging all parties to engage in a dialogue to resolve the crisis peacefully.

On the other hand, Nepal’s move to dissolve the parliament and call for elections is likely to be viewed with scepticism by some in India, who may see it as a tactic to stay in power. The move comes at a time when India is already dealing with a range of internal challenges, including the COVID-19 pandemic, and any unrest in Nepal could divert resources and attention from India’s own issues.

India has a long history of cooperation with Nepal, and it is likely to continue to play a role in ensuring that the political crisis in Nepal does not escalate. The country has a significant investment in Nepal’s stability, and any unrest in Nepal could have implications for India’s own security.

The new year 2020 started off with a bang, as it was a year of unprecedented challenges and changes. The pandemic, which began in December 2019, spread rapidly across the globe, leading to the closure of schools, businesses, and travel restrictions. The pandemic forced people to adapt to new ways of living, working, and socializing. The world was in a state of shock and uncertainty, as the virus continued to spread with no clear end in sight.

The pandemic not only affected the health of people but also had a significant impact on the economy. Jobs were lost, businesses closed, and many people struggled to make ends meet. The pandemic also highlighted the importance of healthcare, as the world came to realize how much we rely on healthcare professionals to keep us safe.

The pandemic also had a significant impact on the media. The media played a crucial role in keeping people informed about the pandemic, but it also had to adapt to new ways of working, as journalists had to find ways to continue reporting while adhering to social distancing rules.

The pandemic also affected the entertainment industry, as movie theaters and music venues were closed, and many events were canceled. However, the industry found ways to adapt, with many artists performing online and new forms of entertainment, such as streaming services, becoming more popular.

The pandemic also had a significant impact on the environment, as people began to realize the importance of reducing their carbon footprint and taking care of the planet. The pandemic also highlighted the importance of mental health, as people struggled to cope with the stress and uncertainty of the situation.

While the pandemic was a challenging time for everyone, it also brought people closer together, as people worked together to find solutions and support those in need. The pandemic also showed the importance of resilience and adaptability, as people found ways to overcome the challenges of the situation.

The pandemic also highlighted the importance of the media in reporting the news and providing information to help people navigate the situation. The media played a crucial role in keeping people informed and in providing support and resources to those in need.
