A new strain, termed as Delta, has been found in the UK which is fuelling a surge in Covid-19 cases across the country. It has been identified as the cause of a rising tide of infections and hospitalisations and could be a major threat to the vaccination programme. The government has already announced plans to accelerate the rollout of booster doses in response to the growing concern about the Delta variant.

The Delta variant is characterized by a mutation known as E484Q, which allows the virus to bind to the human ACE2 receptor more efficiently. This mutation is a hallmark of the Delta variant and has been found in samples from people with COVID-19 in the UK, India, and other countries.

The government has also introduced a new requirement for all visitors arriving from India to undergo a pre-departure COVID-19 test within 72 hours of travel. This measure is being implemented to prevent the spread of the Delta variant, which is known to be more transmissible and associated with higher rates of hospitalisation and severe illness.

In addition to the pre-departure test, all passengers arriving from India will also be required to undergo a 10-day quarantine period in a government-designated facility, with a negative COVID-19 test result before being allowed to leave isolation. The government has also advised against all non-essential travel to India to help contain the spread of the virus.
Picnickers to undergo Covid tests during New Year

Introduction: To ensure effective social distancing and to contain the spread of COVID-19, the administration has decided to conduct random Covid tests on picnickers on New Year's Day. The drive will start on January 15. Though COVID-19 cases are on the decline, the administration is not willing to take any chances.

The drive will be conducted at the entry points of popular picnic spots. Several random tests will be conducted on the occasion.

On Tuesday, a drive was conducted by the City SP Subhash Chandra Jat along with the sub inspector of City SP at some picnic spots. Several random tests were conducted on the occasion. The sub inspector has directed the police to conduct random tests.

The city administration has also directed the police to conduct random tests on the occasion. The police have been directed to conduct random tests on the occasion.

AMU represents India's rich culture, says Modi

With the help of national laboratories, AMU is preparing for the IISF-2020

New Delhi: Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Tuesday asserted that AMU campus, which was originally established by the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College to the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental University (AMU), has been a 'contribution of India's rich culture' to the world.

"AMU has been a contribution of India's rich culture to the world," said Modi during his discussions with the AMU president and vice-chancellor. "AMU was established in the year 1888, and it has been a centre of learning, research, and innovation."

Modi also stressed that AMU has been a "true theatre of ideas" and "a place of intellectual freedom". He added that the university's "uncompromising stance on academic freedom and intellectual diversity" has been an "inspiration to the world".

In his address, the Prime Minister pointed to the university's contributions to the development of the national economy, particularly in the fields of science and technology. He said that AMU has been a "catalyst" for innovation and development in the country, and has "played a key role in contributing to India's rich cultural heritage and diversity".

"The University has been a true theatre of ideas and a place of intellectual freedom," said Modi. "It has played a key role in contributing to India's rich cultural heritage and diversity."

One of the highlights of the Prime Minister's visit was his interaction with students and faculty members. He said that AMU has a "tradition of excellence" in education and research, and praised the university's "innovative and multidisciplinary approach".

"AMU has a tradition of excellence in education and research," said Modi. "It has an innovative and multidisciplinary approach, which is unique in India."
After 28 years, court convicts, nun

KUMAR CHAKRABARTY IN KOCHI

Nearly 28 years after she was found dead in mysterious circumstances in Thrissur in 1993, Sister Chinmayi, a nun of the Trivandrum diocese, was convicted by the Crime Branch here for the murder of her superior, Fr. Thaddeus Kuttichan (52), who was gunned down on March 17, 1993.

Sister Chinmayi, who hails from Thrissur, was accused of killing the priest on a charge sheet prepared by the Crime Branch here in 2008. The trial court, during the trial, recorded the evidence of 44 witnesses.

The nun, 70, was brought to the Thrissur jail on Monday, 7 years after her conviction was confirmed by the High Court. She was granted a bail of Rs. 1 lakh and was asked to be present at the trial court every Wednesday.

The Crime Branch had been investigating the case for nearly 28 years. The trial court, in its judgment, had held that the murder was committed against the wishes of the nun, who was a prominent figure in the Catholic Church in Kerala.

The Crime Branch had earlier filed a charge sheet in the case, accusing Sister Chinmayi of murder, conspiracy, criminal intimidation and criminal prosecution.

Algarh—26-year-old Qurban Ansari and his wife Subhanam in Nizamabad in Jangalpur bypass of Nizamabad, a small town in Algarh district of Uttar Pradesh, converted to Islam, changing their ancestral religion in the wake of the religious friction and communal violence that has dogged the area.

Qurban, who is a member of the Ansari family, said that he and his wife had been in love for four years and had even been married to each other.

The couple, who live in the small town of Algarh, had been planning to convert to Islam for the past two years. They had been living in the town for the past four years and had been in love for the last two years.

Qurban said that his idea of converting to Islam was to show that religion is not a barrier and that love can overcome any obstacle.

Simultaneous polls

The EC claims that it is ready for ‘one nation, one poll’ once the laws are amended, & the Govt’s agenda is clear.

In the debate on “one nation, one poll” has been ongoing and one looks like the Narendra Modi government is going to push the bill to the lawmaking bodies. Soon after the Prime Minister expressed his views on the subject and made a stark case for a simultaneous election, the political parties took a stand. Election Commission (EC) Sunil Arora told the Rajya Sabha that if the political parties give real-time consent, then electoral reforms would be substantial to the electoral process which is already very popular in the country. Besides, it would rid the country from being in a continuous political turmoil for the most important decision of the Westminister system which we have adopted, that questions arise whether about a united nation system works best for our federal structure. And in the current political climate, it threatens the very idea of regionalism is considered something in that a single election, national issues tend to take at centre stage and brought out at least one or two important issues. The regional parties are usually better in communicating their political relevance and bargaining chips on.

Although many argue that the voter is enough made to distinguish between the larger national interest and those of his heritage, there is always a danger that the voter may better off doing away with his personal vote in India’s federal structure going to poll at varied points of time within the Central Government’s mandated period of governance. Therefore, it is about time the political parties give real-time consent, if the electoral reforms would be substantial to the electoral process which is already very popular in the country. FINDING A MIDDLE PATH

It is in our national interest to resolve this stand off between the farmers and the Centre in a graceful manner through the process of dialogue.

Dr. Paswan,

The farmer movement is not a new phenomenon. It had its genesis in the 18th century when farmers demanded equitable prices for their produce. Over the years, it evolved into a powerful voice that sought the welfare and development of farmers. The recent farmers’ protest is in fact part of this tradition.

The protest has brought to the fore the issue of farmers’ rights and the need for a just and equitable policy framework. The government has already taken some steps to address the farmers’ concerns, but more needs to be done. The government should listen to the farmers’ voices and work towards a solution that is acceptable to all. Only then can we move forward towards a brighter future.

Dr. Shukla,

The recent farmers’ protest has highlighted the need for a just and equitable policy framework. The government has already taken some steps to address the farmers’ concerns, but more needs to be done. The government should listen to the farmers’ voices and work towards a solution that is acceptable to all.

The protest has brought to the fore the issue of farmers’ rights and the need for a just and equitable policy framework. The government has already taken some steps to address the farmers’ concerns, but more needs to be done. The government should listen to the farmers’ voices and work towards a solution that is acceptable to all. Only then can we move forward towards a brighter future.

British Prime Minister Boris Johnson said on Monday it was “highly likely” that the new virus strain would spread in the UK, and the government had suspended travel to and from the UK.

Johnson, whose administration has been drawn more and more into the talks and has been accused of threatening the bloc, said the chance Britain might insist on doing it without formal talks had “dwindled to just a few days to 10 days.”

“I find that a reason for concern,” Johnson said. “I wouldn’t say that I / we have made up our minds as yet, but it is still on the table.”
