Indian Cobra with 19 genes is noxious predator: Scientists

ARCOPAJP | 30 NOV 2021

Indian Cobra (Naja naja) has been found to have 19 venomous 'deadly' genes which globally makes it the most venomous snake species, revealed a recent study. The study was conducted by the researchers at the Centre for Systematic Biology and Computational Biology (CSBC) and the Department of Biological Sciences, Banaras Hindu University (BHU), Varanasi.

“The venom of the Indian cobra contains a number of toxic enzymes that can cause serious illness and even death if not treated properly,” said Prof. Dr. Santosh Singh, a scientist at CSBC.

PNS IN NEW DELHI

As many as 19 genes have been identified in the Indian cobra, the researchers revealed. The study, published in the latest issue of the Journal of Heredity, describes the biochemical and molecular features of the venom proteins encoded by genes that are present in the central nervous system of this venomous snake species. The researchers found that the venoms of this species contain a variety of toxins, several of which are known to be highly toxic to humans.

The Indian cobra's venom is known to be highly toxic and contains a variety of neurotoxins and myotoxins that can cause severe muscle weakness and paralysis. The venom also contains a variety of proteases, which can cause tissue damage and inflammation.

The researchers hope that their findings will help in the development of new antivenom treatments and vaccines for the Indian cobra's venom. They also hope that their work will help in the conservation of this species and its habitat, which is under threat due to habitat loss and fragmentation.

Close fight for Mayoral election in Korba

It is a million dollar question whether Congress can make a clean sweep in local bodies polls. Pollsters have predicted that at least 10 Mayor posts across the state will be bagged by the Congress. While the ruling party is said to be the favourite to win the municipal polls, where all 300 seats in the State will be contested, the BJP, which has not been backing the party, is expected to make a comeback.

None of the political parties have been in a position to make a clean sweep in the last two local body elections. The Congress and the BJP are contesting the elections in two of the 300 seats in the state, and there are no chances of running any candidate in the remaining 298 seats.

The elections are to be held on May 30 and the state election results will be announced on June 2.

All eyes on Delhi durbar

Will BJP be able to retain its novelty factor? Does the BJP need to reinvent its campaign pitch?

It has been announced that the Delhi elections will be held on February 11, 2020. The announcement comes at a time when the electorate of India is gearing up for the not-so-distant general elections. The Delhi elections are seen as a bellwether for the general elections and will set the tone for the voters.

The BJP, which has been in power in Delhi for the past 3 consecutive terms, is expected to face a tough challenge from the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) and the Congress. The AAP has been performing well in local elections and has been able to attract a significant number of voters. The Congress, on the other hand, has been struggling to gain traction in the state.

The Delhi elections are also significant as they will be a test for the leadership of Prime Minister Narendra Modi. The BJP’s performance in the state will be a critical indicator of the party’s national strength.

The elections are expected to be a battle of wits between the AAP, which has been in power for the past 2 terms, and the BJP, which is hoping to retain power in the state. The Congress, which has been struggling to gain traction, is also set to participate in the elections.

The Delhi elections are also expected to be a battle of ideas, with the AAP promising to focus on issues such as education, health, and water supply, while the BJP is expected to focus on national security and economic issues.

There’s nothing anti-Hindi in it

The hooligans who vandalised JNU must be arrested. This might give some kind of closure to aggrieved students. But we need to rekindle the culture of debate and dialogue.

Prime Minister Modi should not only mobilise the support of other political parties but also of the chief ministers. If India wants to be a superpower, then the population explosion must be checked.

Addressing the issue for the first time in 2015, as prime minister, Modi expressed concern over the country’s population growth and said that the Centre and the states should look at measures to deal with it. “We have to come some time soon with an electoral formula, which is different from the present system,” he said.

Currently, the population of India is estimated to be around 1.3 billion, making it the second most populous country in the world after China.

Prime Minister Modi’s government has taken several steps to control population growth, including introducing the National Population Policy in 2016, which aimed to check the population growth at 3% by 2031.

In 2018, the Modi government introduced the National Population Register (NPR), which is a database of all Indian citizens, to track the population growth and monitor the demographic trends.

The NPR is being compiled as part of the government’s efforts to control population growth, and it is considered to be a significant step in checking the population explosion in the country.

Sitharaman tells traders GST will be ‘simpler, faster’

Govt taking steps to simplify taxation, curb harassment of honest taxpayers: FM

Prima facie, it appears that the Finance Minister is promising traders that the government will introduce measures to simplify taxation. This is likely to be a welcome move for traders who have been facing considerable regulatory burden in recent times. However, the exact nature of the steps is not clear from the statement and will need to be clarified.

Addressing an event of the National Trade Facilitation and Government Procurement Council, Sitharaman said various announcements on tax simplification for traders will be made in the days to come.

The Finance Ministry is in the process of formulating a trade facilitation policy which will focus on streamlining processes and reducing time and cost for traders. The policy will also aim at improving the ease of doing business for traders.

The minister also highlighted the need to reduce the cost of doing business and improve the overall business environment in the country. She said that the government is working on various initiatives to make the tax system simpler and more transparent.

Negotiations have been initiated with various countries, including the United States, European Union, and members of the WTO, to explore the possibility of a multilateral agreement on digital services tax.

She also expressed her views on the need for a comprehensive digital services tax, which can be applied to the profit margins of digital services.

The minister further added that the government is also working on developing a comprehensive digital services tax framework which would be applicable to all countries.

Sitharaman said that the government is committed to implementing the digital services tax as soon as possible, and has already made some progress in this direction.

The minister also acknowledged the need for a comprehensive digital services tax framework that can be applied to the profit margins of digital services.

Williams off to ‘solid’ start

Serena Williams ended her 18-month absence from competition with a straight-sets victory over Misaki Doi in the first round of the ASB Classic in Auckland.

Back in action

Williams, who was playing her first match since having a baby last September, was ‘solid’ rather than sensational.

‘It’s been a long time off from tournament play, much play, so I don’t think it’s pretty good. It’s a great start to the year,’ she said after her 6-2, 6-2 victory with her eighth win in nine matches

‘It’s really good that I still have some shots coming out of my racket,’ Williams said after her preparation had been hampered by the birth of her daughter.

Williams said her preparation hasn’t been as good as expected:

‘I’ve had to adjust to the physical challenges in this one, not as much as I would have liked.

‘I saw them react when they lost a 5-2 lead. They didn’t respect what he had said, ‘he added.

Rohit up for NZ challenge

NEW DELHI

A lethal bowling attack, a strong bowling unit and a batsman who is ready to play the all-conquering four-down-the-track shot, are the ingredients that make an ideal formula for a World Cup title. And India's Rohit Sharma, who is an integral part of this quartet, seems to be on the right path.

The 29-year-old Sharma, who is in a good form in the Ranji Trophy, has been asked to bring his A-game to the World Cup, where he has played in only one tournament so far. Rohit's batting form is likely to be a deciding factor in India's World Cup campaign.

INDIA NEEDS 143 TO WIN

India is on the verge of victory against New Zealand in the World Cup semi-final. The team needs just 143 runs to win. Rohit Sharma, who is in a good form, is likely to be the key batsman for India.
