India has accepted a China-dictated disengagement model: the creation of buffer zones while withdrawing from its own territory and forgoing legitimate rights of patrolling

India and China settled a disengagement model under which both sides agree to withdraw from all posts that were built after May 5, 2020. This is the first time that COVID-19 has forced both sides to agree to a disengagement model, which has been formally accepted by both sides. This is also the first time that the Indian military has formally accepted a disengagement model.

However, there are still many problems. Both sides need to make further efforts to establish a disengagement model. If both sides cannot reach an agreement on the disengagement model, the situation will remain tense.

In my opinion, both sides should make further efforts to establish a disengagement model. If both sides cannot reach an agreement on the disengagement model, the situation will remain tense.

Time to adapt to the new normal

Given the region’s rich tradition of innovation and adaptation, we have immense potential to retool our cities, surroundings and services.

One of the key challenges of the NEP is the way of thinking of all the people in the World Health Organization’s (W.H.O) South-East Asia region – that the apprehension of the left over 390 million people in the region is nearly two billion people will be at risk, whatever the vaccinations. This perception of the region is still not clear. The region must continue to delay and aggressively minimize transmission, improve public health conditions, and reduce the risk of further escalation.

The need for such a leap is the fact that we think reform and our world food is different from the global COVID-19 normal. For example, hand hygiene facilities can be installed at the front door of every house and at transport locations. Handwash stations can increase in numbers, improve ventilation and be easily accessible. People can take part in personal measures to minimize the risk of spreading infection, such as wearing masks, maintaining social distancing, and following good hygiene practices.

The NEP uses two main pillars: clusters of public health, including urban and rural communities, and clusters of social and economic systems.

Malaysia ex-PM Najib Razak given 12 yrs in jail in 1MDB looting case

Kuala Lumpur: A Malaysian ex-Prime Minister Najib Razak was sentenced to 12 years in jail on Thursday after finding guilty of 7 charges of money-laundering and 29 other financial-related offenses in a 5-year-old $4.1 billion loping case against him. The judge said the sentence was “not a punitive sentence” but it was a “punishment” for the “abuse of power” and “lack of integrity” that led to the financial crisis. Najib was also sentenced to 12 years each on 7 other charges, including 2 counts of criminal breach of trust, 1 count of money-laundering and 2 counts of corruption.

The ruling in the first of the two cases, which involves another $1 billion related to 1MDB scandal, is expected to be announced in the next few days. Najib had previously denied all charges against him, saying they were politically motivated.

The government has sought a 12-year sentence for Najib, who has previously been found guilty in a similar case involving the 1MDB state investment fund.

The verdicts came a day after Najib was cleared of all charges in another 1MDB-related case.

Najib was the leader of the long-ruling National Front coalition until 2018, when he was replaced by Anwar Ibrahim. Najib had been in power since 2009, but his government was widely criticized for its corruption and mismanagement.

The government has been accused of using the 1MDB fund to finance lavish parties and personal purchases, including luxury cars and property.

The case against Najib is expected to continue, with the government seeking a 15-year sentence.

India's oil bill may dip 40% in FY21 on Covid, low rates

Hotel industry will collapse without Govt support: HAI

Equities shake as woes ease; bulls return

India has already reduced oil import bill by 60% over past two quarters (April-June) of FY21. In Q2FY21, oil import bill stood at $63.5 billion against $25.4 billion in Q1. While the decline in crude oil prices is pegged at 45-50%, if the Indian rupee (INR) has appreciated against the US dollar, the import bill would still be reduced by 20-25% from Q1FY21 levels. This is because both factors—price and exchange rate—will contribute to the lower import bill. India imports 80% of its oil needs, and crude oil prices are volatile. In Q3FY21, the import bill for India may be around $45 billion. This is because crude oil prices have been generally on the rise since July. The oil import bill now accounts for 20% of India's GDP, and this proportion is set to increase. India has already paid $101.4 billion in import bill this year, compared to $111.9 billion in FY20. The oil import bill is also expected to increase in Q3FY21, as India will meet 86 per cent of its requirements, as against 62 per cent in Q2FY21. The effect of the oil import bill is that its cost remains high.
Critical thinking thinking continues to remain untaught in school curriculum. DR RICA MISHRA tells you why it is important to incorporate the subject in order to make students excellent leaders.

The coronavirus pandemic is the greatest public health crisis the world has faced in the last century. It has forced educators and students to adapt to the rapid changes in teaching spaces. The most prominent aspect of the new normal is the shift from physical classrooms to digital and virtual learning spaces. When it comes to access, we fail to address one of the most inequitable to access to technology across different parts of the world.

The gap needs to be addressed urgently. The world is going to shape the future of our students and the talents and skills they need for things you need. The ability to analyse and evaluate is an essential skill that today’s students may not nurture, as they are taught to make teaching critical thinking their priority.

Unfortunately, critical thinking continues to remain untaught in our school curriculum. Critical thinking is a process of analysing problems that includes identifying the problem, understanding the nature of the problem, understanding the factors that influence the problem, and then deciding how to solve the problem. For instance, astronauts are required to solve complex problems related to mission control in a highly focused and fast-paced environment.

The pandemic and critical thinking

In this pandemic period, we are dealing with unprecedented challenges in all areas of education. Schools are trying to solve distance learning challenges, teachers areCancellation standardised tests for the year, and many schools areConseptual thinking is essential. Even in the pre-pandemic world, students but only a partial portion of them are taught how to think critically. This leaves a void in our education system, where most educators today are trained to teach the students, not to think about the students.

For example, in January, the director of the Program for Education in International Affairs at Columbia University, said that critical thinking is essential. As he pointed out, the pandemic is itself a kind of textbook that the world has moved to through a set of circumstances.

In the world of work, critical thinking is the most important skill that defines the success or failure of an individual. It helps an organisation to foresee the future and manage ambiguity. Courses like MBA and Business Administration are designed to help students learn how to think critically.

The pandemic and critical thinking

Even though technology has made it possible to have all the information at your fingertips, it is not necessarily true that you have the ability to use that information to your advantage. The ability to analyse and evaluate is an essential skill that today’s students may not nurture, as they are taught to make teaching critical thinking their priority.

While the pandemic is changing the way we teach, teaching critical thinking is something that is still essential. Without critical thinking, students will not have the necessary skills to solve complex problems. Critical thinking is the ability to analyse and evaluate, and it is essential for students to learn how to think critically. This leaves a void in our education system, where most educators today are trained to teach the students, not to think about the students.
