India's worst-hit states, including Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu, Telangana, and Kerala, have reported over 5,400 cases of Covid-19 each. The number of infections has been on the rise for the past two weeks, with daily new cases exceeding 30,000 for the first time since the outbreak began.

The health ministry on Sunday said it was monitoring the situation closely and had directed states to take all necessary steps to prevent the spread of the virus. It also urged people to continue following social distancing norms and other preventive measures.

Maharashtra, the state with the highest number of cases, has been particularly hard hit, with over 140,000 infections and more than 2,000 deaths. The state government has announced a series of lockdowns and restrictions to control the spread of the virus.

India has reported over 80,000 cases of Covid-19, making it the second-worst affected country after the United States.

ALIMS, RML, LNJP, Safdarjung served notices for delays in COVID death reports

A team of investigators has served show-cause notices to doctors and administrators of three prominent Delhi hospitals — AIIMS, RML and LNJP — for lack of timely action in a report that found 201 COVID deaths had been delayed.

The report, released by the Delhi Disaster Management Authority (DDMA), found that the three hospitals, along with Safdarjung Hospital and JIPMER, had not provided a report within the stipulated time frame.

A senior official said a copy of the report had been sent to the DDMA, which would take necessary action.

The report also found that the hospitals had not provided a complete list of COVID patients who had died, including those who died at home or in other hospitals.

The hospitals have been directed to provide the list of patients who died within 48 hours of being admitted or within 24 hours of their death.

A senior official said the hospitals had been given time to provide the list and that the DDMA would take action if they failed to do so.

The hospitals had been given a deadline of September 22 to provide the list.

President Trump today advised the US public to avoid large gatherings over the next 14 days— to help control the coronavirus. The move came as the number of coronavirus cases in the US topped 1,000. The president said the measures were needed to "flatten the curve" and prevent hospitals from becoming overwhelmed. He also called for a 14-day quarantine for people arriving from Europe, excluding the UK. The US is currently coping with a rising number of cases, with over 300 confirmed cases in 14 states. The president’s announcement follows similar steps taken by other countries around the world. In Italy, Spain, and the UK, lockdowns have been implemented to stem the spread of the virus. In the US, the president emphasized the importance of social distancing and urged Americans to stay home if possible. He also called for increased testing and resources for healthcare workers on the front lines of the pandemic. The president’s actions are part of a broader strategy to slow the spread of the virus and mitigate its impact on the economy. The US has already taken steps to close borders with Canada and Mexico and to restrict travel from Europe. These measures have been criticized by some as insufficient, but the president has defended them as necessary to protect public health. The situation remains fluid, and further actions may be taken as the pandemic evolves. Overall, the president’s announcement reflects a growing awareness of the seriousness of the situation and a commitment to taking decisive steps to combat the spread of the virus.

As an effusion of the real and the virtual, an effusion of the meaningful and the unmeaningful, dance is an art form that involves movement, the body, and the emotions. In the time of the pandemic, this art form has had to adapt and change in order to continue to thrive and be enjoyed by audiences.

One of the challenges that dancers have faced during the pandemic is the inability to perform in front of a live audience. Many dancers have had to turn to online performances or recordings in order to continue to practice and perform. This has led to the development of new techniques and approaches to dance, as well as new forms of engagement with audiences.

In addition to the challenges of performing, dancers have also had to adapt to the changing circumstances of the world. This has led to a greater emphasis on the importance of social justice and awareness of the social issues that are affecting people today.

Despite these challenges, dancers and other practitioners of the arts have continued to push forward and create new forms of art that are relevant to the current moment. In this way, dance has become a powerful tool for promoting understanding and empathy, and for encouraging communities to come together and work towards a better future.

In conclusion, the pandemic has had a profound impact on the world of dance, and has led to new ways of thinking about and engaging with this art form. As we move forward, it will be important to continue to support and promote dance as a powerful and vital art form.
