India-China military commanders hold talks in Galwan area

The commanders of China's People's Liberation Army (PLA) and India's Armed Forces held their fourth round of talks on Monday in a Galwan area in eastern Ladakh.

Army Chief General M M Naravane had earlier visited the Galwan area on June 8 to meet his Chinese counterpart General Yang Songliang, the commander of the Chinese People's Armed Police Force's (CPPAF) Western Theater Command.

According to the Indian Army, the talks were held in a "fraternal and friendly atmosphere" and both sides agreed to continue cooperation to ensure peace and tranquility in the border areas.

China and India remain in a stand-off situation in the Galwan valley area, where the Chinese PLA has placed troops on the bank of Pangong Tso after the June 15 confrontation between Indian and Chinese soldiers.

On June 15, six Indian soldiers, including a captain, were killed and over a dozen others were injured in an unusual clash in the Galwan valley area. China has allowed only 20 Indian soldiers to survive after the clash, according to an anonymous source of a local newspaper.

Despite their differences, the two sides have agreed to continue cooperation to ensure peace and tranquility in the border areas.

Nepal's map war

The undeclared war in passing a resolution on reclaiming old territories shows that China has it in its iron grip

J ust when there are optics of both India and China moving away from the grave violence in South Asia, a new movement has erupted yet another Himalayan border dispute by proposing a joint resolution in the Nepalese parliament. Nepal has proposed a resolution in the parliament demanding China to return all territories that China has occupied, having joined hands with India, and pushing it through both Houses of Parliament. It is known that China doesn't miss an opportunity to take advantage whenever there is a vacuum. This is the case whenever Nepal occupies any part of Tibet, which is still left and is屠 is growing full weight behind Nepal. It all began with the meeting of the Indian and Nepalese prime ministers in March 2022, which has triggered a chain of events that have led to this situation.

China's claims over the Arun river basin are clear, and the two countries have been engaged in border disputes for several decades. However, the proposal of the resolution has sparked a debate on the severity and urgency of the situation. The proposal was passed by a vote of 141 to 0 in the Nepalese parliament, with 20 members abstaining. This has raised concerns about the impact on regional stability and international relations.

The resolution demands the return of all territories that China has occupied, including the areas of Arun river basin, which is of vital economic and strategic importance to Nepal. The resolution also calls for the establishment of a joint commission to resolve the border disputes and ensure peace and stability in the region.

China has been quick to respond to the resolution, calling it a provocation and a violation of international law. China has always maintained that it has the right to defend its national sovereignty and territorial integrity. The Chinese foreign ministry has expressed its determination to resolve the border disputes through talks and negotiations.

The proposal has also drawn criticism from some quarters, who argue that it could escalate tensions and lead to a military confrontation. The proposal could also have implications for regional stability, with other countries in the region likely to take a stand.

The resolution has been passed despite the backing of China's ally, India, who has been supportive of such resolutions in the past. This has raised concerns about the possibility of a regional conflict.

The proposal is a reflection of Nepal's desire to reclaim its lost territories and assert its sovereignty. The country has been carrying out a series of moves in recent years to assert its rights, including the establishment of the Himalayan University and the construction of the Land's End Monument.

The proposal has also drawn parallels with the Indian government's move to change the status of Jammu and Kashmir by applying Article 370.

The proposal is likely to set off a series of reactions from other countries in the region, with some likely to support it and others to oppose it. The situation is expected to remain tense in the coming days, with both countries likely to engage in a tit-for-tat diplomatic and military response.

It is important for the countries to engage in dialogue and negotiations to resolve these disputes, as military手段 could lead to an escalation of tensions and an increase in casualties.

The proposal is a reflection of Nepal's desire to reclaim its lost territories and assert its sovereignty. The country has been carrying out a series of moves in recent years to assert its rights, including the establishment of the Himalayan University and the construction of the Land's End Monument.

The proposal has also drawn parallels with the Indian government's move to change the status of Jammu and Kashmir by applying Article 370.

The proposal is likely to set off a series of reactions from other countries in the region, with some likely to support it and others to oppose it. The situation is expected to remain tense in the coming days, with both countries likely to engage in a tit-for-tat diplomatic and military response.

It is important for the countries to engage in dialogue and negotiations to resolve these disputes, as military手段 could lead to an escalation of tensions and an increase in casualties.

The proposal has also drawn criticism from some quarters, who argue that it could escalate tensions and lead to a military confrontation. The proposal could also have implications for regional stability, with other countries in the region likely to take a stand.

SANTANU MERTA

There is anything that people might feel the most regret at, it’s cutting corners and not paying enough attention to their health. Today, however, the underanimations ought for my and my family’s concern and not much about the outcomes of this policy. The Government is looking to the Eroded leather goods. It also banned production of hoods. However, the Government of that time had a 10 per cent levy on chemical and dye chemicals. Plus, the chemical and dye sectors had an 8 per cent subsidy on the chemical and dye goods. The Government took a few additional measures to ensure compliance with the Aarogya Setu app. The Government was gathering acceptance and the police in turn were also appreciating the efforts of the police officers. While trying to follow the rules should be penalised for not following the rules. This not only limits the Chinese “soft power” appeal and gains in the world but also gives a good example of the Chinese political leadership.

In Philadelphia, a group of protesters from Black Lives Matter and other activist organizations walked into the Pennsylvania Convention Center where votes were being counted. The group marched through the streets, threw rocks and gas at police, and burned a Trump flag.

A police officer was injured in the incident, and police said several people were arrested. Police later said they would release the names of those arrested.

In a statement, Pennsylvania Attorney General Josh Shapiro said the police officer was injured when protesters threw rocks and gas at him.

The incident occurred as police were securing the convention center for the final day of the Democratic National Convention. The convention was held in Philadelphia and was the first major national convention to be held in person since the COVID-19 pandemic began.

A police spokesperson said the officer was taken to a hospital for treatment and is expected to recover.

The incident comes as the country continues to grapple with racial injustice and police brutality.

Philadelphia is one of the largest cities in the country and has a long history of racial tension and conflict.

In recent years, there have been several high-profile incidents involving police violence, including the death of George Floyd in Minneapolis in May 2020.

Floyd's death sparked nationwide protests and calls for police reform. The protests have continued for nearly a year, with demonstrators calling for accountability and justice for Floyd and other victims of police violence.

The protests have also highlighted broader issues of systemic racism and inequality.

In Philadelphia, the police department has faced criticism for its handling of protests and its response to incidents of police violence.

The city has implemented some reforms in recent years, including the creation of a civilian oversight board to review police actions.

However, many activists and residents say more needs to be done to address police brutality and systemic racism.

Dia celebrates one year of Kaafir

It’s been a year since action-producer Gauri Khan launched her new platform, Kaafir, aiming to focus on the most challenging roles in the web space. Kaafir believes that the message of humanity is a battle against the conflicts in the societies, but wherever one goes, everything the world is going through is right now.

"It has always found a way to transcend fear and pain. It helps me relate to my heart and emotions. Kaafir can’t allow her to tear out from ourselves and our community. Kaafir is more than the stories it tells. It’s a constant reminder that the silence is limitless and means for everyone. She says.

She played the part of Kamla, a Citron-Pakistani immigrant.

Kumbh Mela

The Kumbh Mela has been a powerful reminder of the need for vaccines and the importance of vaccination. It has been a significant event in India's fight against COVID-19, demonstrating the country's ability to handle large-scale events safely and effectively.
The COVID-19 pandemic has had a significant impact on mental health, with increased stress, isolation, and uncertainty. People have been experiencing anxiety, depression, and insomnia. It is important to recognize the mental health consequences of the pandemic and take steps to manage stress and anxiety.

The Role of Stress in the Pandemic

Stress is a normal response to the events of our lives. It prepares the body for action and helps us deal with challenges. However, prolonged stress can lead to physical and mental health problems. The pandemic has created a unique set of stressors, including fear of infection, economic uncertainty, and social isolation.

Managing Stress

- Exercise: Regular physical activity, such as walking or yoga, can help reduce stress.
- Mindfulness: Techniques like meditation and deep breathing can help calm the mind.
- Social Support: Connecting with friends and family can provide support and reduce feelings of loneliness.
- Healthy Habits: Eating a balanced diet, getting enough sleep, and avoiding tobacco and drugs can help reduce stress.

Common Mental Health Conditions during the Pandemic

- Anxiety: Fear, worry, and unease are common feelings during the pandemic.
- Depression: Feelings of sadness, hopelessness, and worthlessness can be exacerbated by the pandemic.
- Insomnia: Difficulty falling asleep or staying asleep can be common during the pandemic.

Resources for Mental Health Support

- National Suicide Prevention Lifeline: 1-800-273-TALK (8255)
- Mental Health America: Provides information and resources for mental health support.

By taking steps to manage stress and anxiety, we can improve our mental health and overall well-being during the pandemic.
