Monsoon mess on streets as drains remain choked

PINS IN JAMSHEDPUR

With Monsoon in full swing, the city is facing a threat of choking drains which are overflowing due to insufficient and overflowing drains are a common sight these days. And the situation is made worse as the city faces a waterlogging problem.

“The situation in our area is particularly bad because the clearing work has been done only on the roads and not in the drains. There are garbage that have not been cleared and clogging of drains against which complaints are pending. Apart from this, the sudden increase in the number of hospitals is also adding to the waterlogging issue. We need to understand that the city is not able to deal with the waterlogging situation,” said a local resident.

The JMM has also added that the situation is particularly bad in the areas like Chabua, Chakharpati, Morabadi, and SP Chowk. “We have been demanding for the last few years for the cleaning of these drains, but the government has not taken any action,” said a JMM leader.

The situation is further worsened by the fact that the government has not declared any Containment Zones in the city, which has led to an increase in the number of COVID-19 cases. “The government should declare Containment Zones in the areas where the situation is worst so that the spread of the disease can be checked,” said a JMM leader.

Crying shame

The brutal custodial death of two men in Tamil Nadu has given us our ‘fifth-wave moment. Book erant, now.

The ugly tale of police brutality and the killing by the Tamil Nadu police (for a visual, India Today is reporting that the police have stopped using the word ‘custody’ and are using the term ‘surveillance’ instead) will not end when we are shown videos allegedly proving our innocence or in our own backyards, namely Tamil Nadu. A day after two men in Tuticorin, who were booked for running their shop 15 minutes beyond closure hours, were taken into custody — a violation by the law enforcement — ended up dead after the local police subjected them to a long, brutal and sustained interrogation of the sexual and sexual abuse by the police. Five men, nine-year-old Fajah Sayyid and his son, 31-year-old Fajah Sayyid, were booked under Section 361 (Disobeying the time restriction ordered by a public servant). Section 361 (Extradition by threat) and Section 308 (Crimes of intimidation). However, disobeying Section 361 is not a punishable question and hence there is no cause to seek their custody. Apart from that, there were no witnesses to back up the need for the police to act. If the police had not already gone overboard, the 500 metres away from the police station, where the two men were held, hear their screams and cries for help through the night. The next day, when the men were released, they were found hanging and they were reported to be fully dead from their private parts. Yet, they were given a clean bill of health by the doctor. A bare bone cooky to stop the wrath of the all-powerful inspector. And then they died in the hours for lack of critical care. However, believing that this has happened for the first time is ignoring the years of abuse and custodial deaths that common citizens have been facing. And this is justifiable. Particularly in the last few years at the levels of administration, the policing system has internalized the right to be the judge, jury and executioner. The disappearing trends prevailing around the globe confirm denaturing police brutality, it is high time, too. India, too, upsets the routine, raises its voice against violations and makes a common cause of the family of Jyoti and other loyal. So too, the shameful, the protest of victims and keep running. Despite the lockdown necessitated by the pandemic, incidents of excessive use of force by the police have been reported from across the country. The police’s actions are now a common news. Calls for accountability have been louder. The political pressure has been determined, warrant demanded and nickels plucked brutally. Migrant workers on long treks have not been spared the humiliation and injury either. Anyone without the power to defend or stand up for themselves is the pov of the police. Wani is a small township in the Chhattisgarh district of Maharashtra. After a meeting with the people of the area for something I had met in 2018 when he approached us, my first meeting with the valley of Wani. A large number of villagers from various villages in the area visited us. I am sure that this village was one of the fewest in India, and the locals were mostly farmers. They were also self-employed. The local economy was based on agriculture, and there was little manufacturing or industrial activity in the area.

According to the 2011 Census of India, Wani had a population of 3,100. The male population was 1,550, and the female population was 1,550. The literacy rate of the town was 75%, with 45% of the population being literate males and 30% being literate females. The town had a total of 600 households, with an average household size of 5.5 people.

The main occupations of the people in the area were farming, fishing, and small-scale industries. The main crops grown in the area were rice, wheat, and maize. The town was also home to a small fish market where fish from the nearby rivers was sold.

During my visit, I was impressed by the local people's hospitality and their willingness to share their stories and experiences with me. I was also impressed by their resilience and ability to adapt to their surroundings. The people of Wani were very proud of their heritage and culture, and they were determined to preserve it for future generations.

In conclusion, my visit to Wani was a memorable experience. I was impressed by the local people's hard work and determination, and I was reminded of the importance of understanding and appreciating different cultures and ways of life.

US case numbers top 2.5m, reopenings paused

As cases surge, rural areas seeing increases as well

Washington: For many states and cities in the US, the dark days of April and May have given way to a cautious optimism as coronavirus cases begin to level off and the number of deaths also decreases. But as states and cities plan to reopen, officials are now seeing an increase in cases in rural areas. The new surge is leading some state and local leaders to reconsider their reopening plans.

A new surge in virus cases is occurring in rural and outlying areas, in states and cities with lower case loads. The outbreak is spreading from urban areas to rural and suburban communities, where officials are concerned that the virus could spread quickly due to lower levels of testing and public awareness. In some cases, the virus is spreading among agricultural workers, students, and other groups that have not been heavily tested.

The surge is not just happening in rural areas. In cities and towns across the US, officials are seeing an increase in cases among young people, who are often asymptomatic and do not seek medical care. The increase in cases is also affecting nursing homes and other long-term care facilities.

China reviews heavily criticised Hong Kong national security bill

Critics of Hong Kong's legal status already accorded for 20 years have determined to use the law to bring Hong Kong under the full control of Beijing. But also would set up a new security council, which would come under the control of the People's Liberation Army, to deal effectively with the situation.

The government had originally proposed the new security council to deal with the situation in Hong Kong, but after a series of violent protests, Beijing decided to take matters into its own hands. Under the new council, Beijing would have the power to appoint and remove the city's leader, as well as to vet the appointments of all officers and businesses in Hong Kong. The council would also have the power to impose sanctions on businesses and individuals who support pro-independence groups in Hong Kong.

The bill has been widely seen as a violation of international treaty. The measure has also been criticized for its potential to undermine Hong Kong’s autonomy and its democratic institutions. Critics say the law would undermine the relative independence it enjoys as a special administrative region (SAR) within China.

The Senate bill targets the new council, which is expected to pass the House and Senate by the end of the week. The measure would also give the council the power to impose sanctions on the United States and its citizens.

The bill has been strongly condemned by human rights organizations and other groups, who say it would violate the rights of Hong Kong residents and undermine the city’s autonomy. They say it would also threaten the rule of law and stability in the city.

Lanka lift virus curfew

The Sri Lankan government announced a lift of its virus curfew to allow essential businesses to reopen after two months in the country. The curfew had been in place since the start of the pandemic in March. The country has recorded more than 3,000 cases of coronavirus, including 60 people who have died.

The government said the curfew would be lifted in stages, with the first phase allowing businesses to reopen and the second phase allowing all businesses to operate.

The curfew was put in place to stop the spread of the virus, but it had also had a severe economic impact, with many businesses forced to close down.

Tainan holds Pride parade despite virus

Taipei: The Tainan capital held its annual Pride parade on Sunday, making it one of the few places in the country to do so. The event was held in the face of the coronavirus pandemic.

The parade in Tainan was attended by thousands of people in the past, but this year the event was scaled back due to the virus. The parade was held in a more open-air setting, with fewer people in attendance.

Some businesses and public transport were allowed to operate, but the city’s mask mandate remained in place. The parade was held in the city’s central district, where a large crowd of people had gathered to celebrate the event.

The parade was a symbol of the city’s pride and its commitment to supporting its lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) community.

Limerick: Ireland’s Indian-origin Prime Minister, Leo Varadkar, has been appointed Deputy PM in a historic Irish coalition pact.

The appointment is seen as a recognition of the growing influence of Irish and Indian communities in the country.

The new coalition, which includes the Fine Gael party and the Labour party, is the result of a deal between the two parties to form a government.

The appointment is seen as a symbol of the growing influence of Indian communities in the country, with many Irish people of Indian origin holding prominent positions in politics and business.

The appointment is also seen as a recognition of the growing influence of the Indian economy in Ireland, with many Irish companies having a strong presence in the country.

Are you sleeping right?

Our sleep patterns have been compromised by lockdown-induced anxieties. Experts advise we follow a good day and routine, exercise adequately and avoid excess coffee and alcohol.

Sleep duration: Time period when the person is actually sleeping (in N1, N2, N3, N2 stage of sleep). Sleep duration during lockdown didn’t deviate much from the usual deep sleep (N3 to N4 stages) for people between 20-34 years, although the time duration was 28 minutes and five minutes was particularly found in short sleepers.

Wake time: Wake up time has increased by 30 minutes across all age groups of the age of the wake up time has increased by 80 minutes (from 7:30 am to 8:45 am). A study shows that people who woke up later than usual had a higher chance of increased testosterone which grows the hormone cycle in our body. Once this cycle is off, we are at a higher risk of lifestyle disorders like obesity, diabetes, hypercholesterolemia, cardiovascular diseases and mental health conditions.

Sleep levels: Autonomous nervous system activity measured through heart rate variability. There’s a significant change in the stress levels of people who were involved in lockdown. As there is so much happening in the world, people are at a higher risk of lifestyle disorders such as obesity, diabetes, hypertension, and mental health conditions. Sleep plays a crucial role in maintaining healthy body functions and managing stress levels. It helps in maintaining good mental health and overall well-being.

Stress levels have increased during the lockdown, and the stress levels during the first week of May have been reduced across all age groups. Time taken to fall asleep has gradually increased during the lockdown and has decreased during the first week of May. It has been retained across all age groups. Time taken to fall asleep is shorter, indicating that people are feeling more relaxed and comfortable.

Naps: Initially, the number of naps increased for the first few days of lockdown, but then it decreased. This can be attributed to the fact that people have become more relaxed and comfortable during the first few days of lockdown.

Salman Khan praises Aarya

The latest show, Aarya, directed by Imtiaz Ali, has successfully managed to win over the audience. The show’s lead, Sushmita Sen, has taken to social media to express her gratitude to the audience. Sushmita Sen and Prince Narula also participated in the Roop pyathakshya challenge. The ‘Horizon Special’ web series is an adaptation of the show P很多玩家, which revolves around Aarya Sonar (played by Sushmita Sen), who takes up her past to get to the bottom of the truth and to protect her family. Aarya is a story of a woman who wants to know the whole truth. It is a perfect blend of drama and mystery. The series explores a range of questions — Who has murdered her husband and why? How far will Aarya go to survive and protect her family? Praising the show in the clip, Salman Khan, 53, said on Twitter: “More than a classy dialogue-bash and a dose of karanvy, Aarya has a lot to throw around. Saving husband-kill had the maid? Was she a part of the family or was she just a helper? Aarya Sonar (played by Sushmita Sen) is a woman who has a mind of her own. And she is not afraid to use it. As there is so much happening in the world, people are at a higher risk of lifestyle disorders such as obesity, diabetes, hypertension, and mental health conditions. Sleep plays a crucial role in maintaining healthy body functions and managing stress levels. It helps in maintaining good mental health and overall well-being.
To kids calms, it is important for parents to understand their psychological levels and channelize their energy in the right direction. PANKAJ KUMAR SINGH shares some tips on how to handle this during the pandemic.

They need to prepare a routine for Monday-Friday and weekend should be kept free.

To begin with, the day should start with some morning work or your regular work. If you are doing your work from home, it is important to understand that you are locked down at your own home. Your daily work should be completed without leaving the house and only use the internet for online education. Once education is completed, you can do some physical exercises in the morning or evening to keep yourself fit.

To keep your child engaged, you can also take part in some creative activities like drawing, painting, writing, etc. These activities can help them develop new skills in different fields.

It is important for parents to take some time out to check about their child’s physical and mental health. They should also make sure that their child is not addicted to the screen and phone.

As parents, we need to be an example for our children. This means that we should also take care of our own physical and mental health.

In conclusion, it is important for parents to understand their child’s needs and channelize their energy in the right direction. By doing so, we can help our children to grow up happily and successfully.
Lazio comeback to keep races alive

A penalty from Ciro Immobile was enough to rescue Lazio from an encouraging start as they came back to secure a 2-1 win over Genoa in Serie A on Sunday.

The defeat threatens to end a streak of six consecutive wins for Genoa, who were aiming to move within two points of fourth place. While Lazio remain fifth, the result means that they are still 13 points behind leaders Juventus, who have a game in hand.

The match was notable for two reasons. First, it was the first Serie A game played behind closed doors due to the coronavirus pandemic, and second, it was the first top-flight fixture to be played in the Stadio Olimpico since 29 March.

In the second half, Lazio were awarded a penalty after Diego Farias fouled Ciro Immobile. The Italian forward stepped up to convert from the spot, sending goalkeeper Emiliano Marchesin the wrong way.

Lazio had taken the lead just before halftime when Simone Inzaghi's side held their nerve from a corner, with Francesco Acerbis saving the shot from Ciro Immobile.

The result means that Lazio are now in a strong position to secure European football next season. They are just two points behind AC Milan, who are in fourth place, and have played one less game.

Despite the setback for Genoa, they remain in a good position to secure a European place. They are currently seventh, just three points behind Atalanta, who are in fifth place and have played one less game.

Lazio manager Simone Inzaghi said: "It was a difficult match, we had a lot of chances to score in the second half, but we were able to hold on for the victory."

Genoa coach Fabio Girelli added: "We didn't deserve the defeat. We had some good opportunities in the first half, but we couldn't make the most of them."
