Unseasonal rain to hit crops: IMD

IMD traces latest western disturbance over Afghanistan

Farmers in northern and northwest India should be wary of possible rainfall for another week, warned the India Meteorological Department (IMD). IMD said western disturbance activity is set to hit northern India next week and may stretch to northwest India and northwest Pakistan, which is expected to bring showers and rainfall.

The last western disturbance hit the Indian subcontinent on Monday, bringing rains to the eastern region, the IMD said. "The next weariness factor is whether it will lead to the formation of an Afghanistan low pressure system," said IMD Director V K Deswal. "If that happens, it will be the first such system in early March since 1956 and will lead to the development of a significant winter storm system in the region," he said.

Deswal said the IMD has traced the last system in early March since 1956 and is expected to bring rainfall over the northeast region of India. "If the low pressure system develops over Afghanistan, it will bring heavy rainfall over the northeast region of India," he said.

The IMD said farmers and the agricultural sector should be prepared as the system is expected to bring rainfall over the region. "The system is expected to bring heavy rainfall over the region," he said.

The IMD issued an orange alert for Uttar Pradesh and Bihar, suggesting farmers should be prepared for heavy rainfall. "The system is expected to bring heavy rainfall over the region," he said.

Deswal said the IMDSs heavy rainfall is expected over the region and that the state government should be prepared for heavy rainfall. "The system is expected to bring heavy rainfall over the region," he said.

The IMD said the heavy rainfall is expected to last until Friday and that the state government should be prepared for heavy rainfall. "The system is expected to bring heavy rainfall over the region," he said.

The IMD warned that the heavy rainfall is expected to cause flooding and landslides in the region. "The system is expected to bring heavy rainfall over the region," he said.

China's tainted corona

While the contagious phase of COVID-19 may ebb and the communist regime may deny the PLA's role in the battle, the world may not see it in the same light as before.

Flight of fancy

Aerial mobility may be a solution to urban overcongestion but we should stop pouting in ill-conceived ideas

While planning for the Allied invasion of Europe in World War II, experts realized they needed more than just good soldiers. They needed a method of moving them and supplies from point A to point B. The result was the formation of strategic air transport units with specially trained personnel and specialized equipment.

The rise of space exploration has been no different. Nations compete for dominance in space, and their efforts are guided by political, economic, and strategic considerations.

In this context, China has become a key player in the international space race. The country has made significant strides in developing its own space program, including manned missions to the moon and the establishment of a permanent space station.

China's continued investment in space exploration is a sign of its growing confidence in its technological capabilities and its desire to assert its influence on the global stage. The country's space program is not only a source of national pride but also a tool for international cooperation and diplomacy.

The future of space exploration is uncertain, but one thing is clear: China's role in shaping the course of the space race is likely to continue to increase.

Soundbite

On the one hand, there is a growing recognition that space exploration can contribute to scientific and technological advancement, fostering innovation and driving economic growth. On the other hand, there are concerns about the potential for militarization and the risk of conflict in space.

The international community is closely watching China's developments, and it will be interesting to see how the country navigates the challenges and opportunities presented by its space program.

Jubel D'Cruz

China's space ambitions

China's space program is not only a symbol of its technological prowess but also a reflection of its growing global influence. The country's achievements in space exploration have raised questions about the impact of its military capabilities and the potential for space-based conflicts.

China's entry into the space race is a significant development in the context of international relations. The country's investments in space technology and infrastructure have the potential to transform its role in the world, not only as a global economic powerhouse but also as a military and political power.

The future of space exploration is uncertain, but one thing is clear: China's role in shaping the course of the space race is likely to continue to increase.

Sir — The Allahabad High Court has done well to alert the Uttar Pradesh Government to the problem of water pollution. It is a good move to take action against polluters and ensure clean water for the people.

However, the government needs to take further steps to address the issue. For instance, it should invest in improving sanitation facilities and setting up wastewater treatment plants. This will help in reducing the amount of waste reaching water bodies and improve the quality of water.

In addition, the government should also encourage the use of clean energy sources to reduce the dependence on fossil fuels. This will not only help in reducing pollution but also save the environment.

A death knell for religious economy

Like all others, the religious tourism industry is also praying for a quick containment and cure for the Coronavirus epidemic.

Michael Singh

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused economies around the world to grapple. The negative impact of the crisis on the tourism industry has been perhaps one of the most profound and immediate. From the global travel ban to the closure of borders, the tourism industry has been hit hard, with many companies forced to cut back on operations or completely suspend their activities. Many companies have reported a drop in bookings and revenue, leading to losses and job losses.

The impact of the pandemic on the tourism industry has been severe, with many countries and organizations launching initiatives to support the sector and help it recover. Governments have implemented measures such as subsidies, tax breaks, and grants to assist tourism businesses. At the same time, tourism organizations and companies have been adapting to the new normal by offering online experiences, virtual tours, and flexible booking options.

The tourism industry is expected to take several months or even years to recover fully from the pandemic's impact. However, with the development of a vaccine and the easing of travel restrictions, there is hope for a gradual recovery. The industry will need to be resilient and adaptable to emerge stronger from the crisis.

Uddhav doing a tightrope walk

The three partners – Sena, NCP and the Congress – should keep their positions for public consumption and Uddhav should keep harping on his Hindutva ideology. This is the only way the coalition can continue.

Kavindra Shyam

The Dr. Tathagat Ghosh faction of the JD(U) is trying to do a tightrope walk on the issue of the Chief Minister’s posts for the state in the run-up to the Assembly elections. It is trying to retain its hold on the key role of the chief minister and its influence on political parties in the state.

Reportedly, the JD(U) is considering the possibility of a coalition government with the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) in the state, which would give it a strong position in the political landscape of Jharkhand.

The JD(U) has been facing internal and external pressure to form a coalition government with the BJP in the state. The party is also under pressure from its allies, the Rashtriya Jana Morcha (RJM) and the Jan Adhikar Party (JAP), to form a government with the BJP.

The JD(U) is likely to make a decision on forming a coalition government with the BJP in the near future. The party is expected to announce its decision soon.

Saudia Arabia to boost oil output capacity by 1 barrel per day: Aramco

AP / BLOOMBERG

Energy giant Saudi Aramco is planning to add 1 barrel of oil production capacity per day, starting in February, in a step that will increase production by less than 1 per cent of the kingdom’s total output following years of slow growth.

The kingdom’s oil ministry said in a statement late on Monday that the plan would allow it to meet demand from all customers and ensure annual growth of 1.5 per cent.

It said the upgrade would include a change to the capacity of a single well at the company’s Al-Hilal field in the Eastern Province, where output is controlled via a closed system of wells.

The ministry added that this increase would not affect the company’s total output, which it put at 12 million barrels per day in 2021.

Saudi Arabia has been a key player in OPEC+ efforts to control global oil prices by limiting production since the group was formed in 2016.

In recent years, the OPEC+ alliance and other major producing countries have swung production to meet market demand, but a surge in oil prices has prompted a reassessment of the need for further cuts.

Aramco, the world’s biggest oil company, had said in December that it expected to hit a production peak of 12.5 million barrels per day by 2025, driven by growth in domestic demand and the expansion of exports.

Saudi Arabia’s oil industry has been in a period of expansion following a string of investments, including the acquisition of US shale producer Anadarko Petroleum for $32 billion last year.

The government has outlined plans to diversify the economy away from oil, with the goal of achieving a 20% oil output capacity in 2030.

India cuts interest rates on savings accounts to 3%

No minimum balance required

PTI / NEW DELHI

The Reserve Bank of India cut interest rates on savings accounts to 3% effective from January 4, 2023, in a surprise move that had been anticipated by few economists.

The central bank reduced the rate on deposits in savings accounts from 4% to 3%, citing lower inflation and improving fiscal and external balances.

In addition, it also reduced the rate on fixed deposits with a maturity of over one year to 5%, from 6%.

The cut in savings account rates is the first since 2011, when the central bank had reduced the rate from 5.5% to 4%

The move comes as the Indian economy is expected to grow at a rate of 6.5% this year, the fastest in three years, according to the International Monetary Fund.

The government has been trying to stimulate the economy, which contracted by 8% in 2020-21, the worst in three decades, due to the COVID-19 pandemic

Some economists had anticipated a cut in the savings account rate, but had expected it to be delayed until later in the year.

The central bank has made several interest rate cuts since the pandemic began, as it sought to support the economy and address the effects of the virus.

It had earlier cut the rate on deposits in savings accounts to 3.5% in June and then to 4% in December 2021.

The central bank had also reduced the rate on fixed deposits with a maturity of over one year to 5%, from 6%.

The move is expected to benefit savers, who have been hit by inflation and a decline in the value of their savings.

It will also ease the burden on banks, which have been affected by a decline in interest rates and a rise in loan defaults.

Teach the difference between right and wrong. Kids are not born with an inbuilt moral compass and it becomes very difficult for them when they get punished for doing wrong things unknowingly. For example, your five-year-old may have to lie to save his skin not knowing that lying is ethically unacceptable. Instead of punishment, sit down with your kids and make them understand the moral differentiation between right action and wrong, writes TEAM VIVA.

Punishment like corporal punishment, verbal abuse should strictly be avoided as children as a house is a place where they should feel loved, secure and happy. Child counselors say that when a loving relationship exists between parents and children, a single look of disapproval or non communication is enough to convey to children, that what they have done is wrong. Here is what you could do to avoid punishing your kids.

Judge the Age Appropriateness of Punishment. Literally ask yourself the question “is the behavior exhibited by my kid age appropriate?” It is not only that punishment must be reserved for special occasions, but punishment also give rise to other negative intentions.
