Let’s think afresh

Given a rise in gig economy, the time is ripe to ensure that the next revolution in the labour force is one that allows for growth and prosper, ethically and responsibly.

O nly a few years ago, it was not possible to think of the gig economy as a significant opportunity to thrive in the Indian economy. However, with the rise of platforms like Uber, Ola, and others, the gig economy has emerged as a viable option for many workers. But while this has brought benefits to some, it has also raised concerns about the ethical and responsible approach to its development.

The gig economy has the potential to alter the way labour is used and remunerated, but it is important that we approach this development with care and responsibility. The next revolution in the labour force should be one that allows for growth and prosperity, ethically and responsibly. It is important to ensure that workers are given the right to any kind of discrimination by any means, to seek opportunities elsewhere. Such conduct must be avoided.

Together, we can

It must not be forgotten that the protection and provision of fellow human from any kind of harm takes up even one of the defining characteristics of the Indian State. It has been the humanitarian state of the world over the past few years. It has not been that back stranded indifferent everywhere and wherever there have been. This can be seen in the way the spread of the Coronavirus was one of the most significant advances of the nation. With minimal risk from the virus-stricken country and much lack, direct help, pro bono help was also provided to us as a citizen. We are all, every one of us, homeowners. The time is ripe to ensure that the next revolution in the labour force is one that allows for growth and prosper, ethically and responsibly.

Curb on visa valid

The decision to produce "I will vote" is correct. If we are voting for the right person, the name and the number of seats will be decided. It is very important to understand that there is a difference between the two.

Always -- Aruna Sharma

W e’ve seen a steep drop in vulnerability in the face of the pandemic, which has helped many people in the affected areas. The global economy has suffered a significant slowdown due to the pandemic, and many countries have imposed strict lockdowns and restrictions. However, the Indian economy has been relatively resilient, and some sectors have seen growth even during the pandemic.

The next revolution in the labour force should be one that allows for growth and prosper, ethically and responsibly. It is important to ensure that workers are given the right to any kind of discrimination by any means, to seek opportunities elsewhere. Such conduct must be avoided.

Less for Congress

Sir — This refers to the article “India’s surge in Congress” by Arvind Chowdhary (March 12). The Congress party, which was once the soul of democracy and a symbol of hope for the common man, has seen a rapid decline in its support base in recent years. The party has been unable to connect with the masses, and its leaders have been seen as more interested in their personal interests than the welfare of the party.

Moderate reduction in the number of seats is a necessity for the party. The Indian political landscape has changed significantly in recent years, and the Congress party needs to adapt to these changes if it is to remain relevant.

Sandeep Singh Dhaliwal

The Congress party is facing a tough challenge in the upcoming election, and it needs to work hard to regain the trust of the people. The party has a lot of work to do in terms of improving its image and connecting with the masses.

Quilting has not only become a powerful way to address issues of marginalisation, but it has also provided a platform to challenge social norms and stereotypes. The process of making quilts is empowering, as it not only allows beneficiaries to regain their dignity and confidence but also to become agents of change. AP concludes, "Making the 'Henna Prize' quilt was empowering, but also a joyous adventure that led to the realization of our potential and the confidence to forge ahead.

The significance of such projects cannot be underestimated, as they not only provide a means to address social issues but also offer hope and support to those who have been marginalized and stigmatized. Through the power of art and creativity, we can create spaces for healing, dialogue, and social change.
