RBI halts EMIs, cuts rates

75 basis point interest rate cut is the steepest in 11 years

Govt puts corona cases tally at 724

RBI Governor Shaktikanta Das addresses the media on Monday in Paris.

The Reserve Bank of India on Monday said it will provide a 75 basis point cut in the repo rate, which is the effective rate charged by banks to their customers, to reduce the cost of borrowing for consumers and businesses. The move comes as the government has introduced a nationwide lockdown to contain the spread of the coronavirus. The repo rate is currently at 4.40%, the lowest in two-and-a-half years.

The cut in the repo rate will be effective from June 1, the RBI said in a statement, adding that it also expects the lending rate to move in line with the reduction in the policy rate. The RBI said it will also provide a special liquidity facility to banks and other financial institutions to ensure they have sufficient funds to meet the needs of borrowers.

The move is part of a package of measures announced by the government and the RBI to support the economy during the pandemic. The government has already introduced a stimulus package worth Rs 20 trillion to support the economy.

The RBI said the decision was taken after an emergency meeting of the Monetary Policy Committee, which is responsible for setting interest rates.

“The Nigeria’s Central Bank has announced a cut in interest rates from 12% to 11.5% to support the economy,” the bank said in a statement. The move is part of a broader package of measures announced by the government and the central bank to support the economy during the pandemic.

China’s response to the Coronavirus outbreak is a lesson on how to stay strong in times of a global community crisis

HARISH MAWATSA

With troubles being brought by the alarming spread of COVID-19, one aspect of the world that has been largely ignored by marketers is response patterns. However, one of the most significant changes to business over the past few decades has been the shift towards humanizing corporate communication and the growing interest in understanding and addressing the needs of customers. This is particularly relevant in light of the recent Coronavirus outbreak in China, which has had a profound impact on the business landscape.

Given China’s rapidly growing economy and high population density, the impact of the COVID-19 outbreak has been significant. The government has taken strict measures to contain the spread of the virus, including lockdowns and travel restrictions. These measures have not only affected China but have also had ripple effects on global supply chains and financial markets.

In this context, it is crucial for marketers to understand how consumers are responding to the crisis and how they are likely to change their behavior in the future. By doing so, they can better tailor their marketing strategies to meet the needs of their customers during this uncertain time.

For example, companies are now focusing on providing customers with support and reassurance during the crisis. This includes offering extended returns policies, providing free shipping, and updating customers on the status of their orders. By doing so, they are not only meeting customer needs but also building trust and loyalty.

In conclusion, the COVID-19 outbreak has highlighted the importance of understanding and responding to consumer behavior. By taking a human-centered approach to marketing, businesses can not only meet the needs of their customers during this challenging time but also build stronger relationships for the future.
US has most confirmed coronavirus cases in world

The US now has more coronavirus cases than any other country, with Europe accounting for 31% of infections, according to data from Johns Hopkins University data. The US has reported 856,700 cases, followed by Russia (491,201), Brazil (239,200), the UK (220,000), and Spain (161,000). The country announced a record single-day increase of 61,000 confirmed infections on Saturday, the highest number ever reported. The US also reported record 2,300 deaths on Saturday.

In China, where the outbreak originated in December, the number of confirmed cases as well as the death toll remains low. As of Saturday, China had reported 85,600 cases, according to Johns Hopkins, taking the number of people who have died due to the coronavirus pandemic in China to 4,365. The world’s top economic power began reporting its first cases in late January, and has so far suffered 85,600 new infections, the highest in the world. For most people, the new coronavirus causes only mild or moderate symptoms, such as fever and cough. For some, especially older adults and people with existing health problems, it can cause more severe illness, including pneumonia.

In the US, most of the deaths are among elderly residents of nursing homes, and the total number of people who have died is expected to exceed 100,000. The government’s projections, based on data from the CDC’s Global Mortality Database, estimate that the US will report 100,000 to 240,000 deaths by the end of May. The White House said Friday it was “optimistic” that the death toll would be lower than those projections.

The first infected person in Europe is thought to have been a passenger on a cruise ship called the Diamond Princess that was quarantined in Japan in February. About 70 passengers who visited Italy were confirmed to have the virus. The first people to test positive for the virus in Italy were two tourists who were treated at a hospital in Cremona, near Milan.

India leads 2020 global GDP growth, says Moody's

Mumbai: Moody's Investors Service on Friday revised its outlook for India's gross domestic product (GDP) growth for calendar year 2020 to 2.5 per cent from a negative outlook on April 3. Moody's expects the Indian economy to contract by 3.5-4.5 per cent year-on-year in calendar 2020 due to the novel coronavirus disease (COVID-19). Moody's said India's GDP growth would be to 2.5 per cent in calendar 2021 driven by consumption and investment.
 Dakshinamurti was sold off and they belonged to a prodigious family. "Vibhushan" in 1999. The three Gujral Brothers were a blend of India's mythology and culture. What was the idea of the Bengal school of modernism? It was a forethought of the Bengali school in its present form. In the visual arts, its present-day quality lay in the dry colour, the texture and the apparent solidity of a stated fact. This was the beginning of the ism of the Bengal school. The idea of the Bengal school of modernism was concerned with the dialogue between the ale and the ale, between the image and the audience into a forest, guide the audience to the aesthetic. The political propaganda. Maybe it's a good idea to keep your content away from the political. It's good. But I think it has a monotonous schedules. It's good. But I think it has a monotonous schedules. What could be possibly better than music to keep people away from the work? We have to keep our content away from the political.
Promising is a daunting task, especially when one has to worry about several bumps along the way. There was a time when I was caught up in the child’s mind, trying to understand their perspective of the world and their reactions to various situations. I have also been looking for ways to improve myself and to become a better performer on stage. Overall, my focus has been on creating an environment that is conducive to learning and creativity. It is important to spend time thinking about the impact of my work on others and to reflect on how I can grow and develop as a person.

There was no preparation. I'll be lying if I say I prepared for it. I am not a method actor. I always flow with the script and what the other actors are giving. Though subconsciously there is mental preparation of the issue involved. That’s all that's involved.

There's a certain thing that is about her. The way she talks, her gestures, and the way she carries herself is something that I could not have even imagined. When I met her, I thought she would be different, but she was not. She was just herself. She was comfortable and confident.

So, I think it becomes difficult to please the audience when you are morally correct or not. As an artist, I try to make my point sometimes but it does not always work.

I think people nowadays get offended easily. "I think people nowadays get offended easily. I think people nowadays get offended easily."
