More lockdown but fewer curbs likely

Modi, Shah discuss CMs' views: Social distancing must but need to push up economic activities

PNB ■ NEW DELHI

Two days before lockdown 4.0 ends, Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Home Minister Amit Shah on Friday discussed about the views of Chief Ministers on further opening up several sectors of economy with strict social distancing norms if the lockdown were to be continued beyond May 31.

For the past three days, the Home Minister was collecting inputs and suggestions from all Chief Ministers. Highly placed officials say the Centre may give more power to the States to decide on opening up the economic activities and defining containment zones.

Many Chief Ministers have reportedly preferred the continuation of the lockdown, but there is a near consensus on opening up many sectors as well as malls and public transports, including metro services.

While all Chief Ministers urged the Home Minister to speed up economic activities and gradual return of public life, they also expressed their apprehension about being flooded with surge of patients when the country relaxes the strict lockdown norms.

As per sources, two special Covid-19 panels set up by the Centre have submitted their recommendations for the exit strategy. The panels have suggested that the Centre should do away with all lockdown curbs except keeping schools, colleges, movie halls and religious places closed till situation improves.

The panel has also recommended not to reopen inter-State travel and said that the efforts should be directed towards strengthening containment measures in the worst-hit districts.

The worst-hit 13 districts are: Municipalities of Mumbai, Chennai, Delhi/New Delhi, Ahmadabad, Thane, Pune, Hyderabad, Kolkata/Howrah, Indore, Jaipur, Jodhpur, Chengalpattu (Tamil Nadu) and Thrivallur (Tamil Nadu). These 13 districts are having 70 per cent of the positive cases in India. The Centre and the States of these 13 cities have already decided a plan on the geographical definition of containment zones.

The Home Minister also apprised the Prime Minister of the outcome of the talks between the Cabinet Secretary and 13 Municipal Commissioners and District Magistrates from the sensitive cities.

The Central Government is expected to announce its decision on the lockdown within the next two days. Prime Minister may speak up on this on May 31 scheduled "Mann Ki Baat", said officials.

At present, the current lockdown rules prohibits opening up of hotels, malls, public transports in containment zones. There is expected to be a dilution on this and shops inside the malls and hotels may be allowed to open with limited number of entries.

Meanwhile, West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Friday said all religious places will be allowed to open in the State from June 1 but not more than 10 people can pray at a time.

"Temples, Gurudwaras, Mosques and all religious places in the State are closed. They will open from June 1 but not more than 10 people will be allowed at any given point of time. No assembly would be allowed in religious places", Mamata said.

Modi-US Prez didn't discuss China, India contradicts Trump

PNB ■ NEW DELHI

India on Friday denied that Prime Minister Narendra Modi and President Donald Trump recently held a telephonic talk over the issue of Ladakh and China. This assertion came hours after Trump said he had spoken to Modi and "he is not in a good mood on what is going on in China".

Contradicting the US President's claim, sources said, "There has been no recent contact between Modi and US President Trump. The last conversation between them was on 4 April, 2020, on the subject of Hydroxychloroquine".

Meanwhile, Defence Minister Rajnath Singh on Friday held a telephonic conversation with his US counterpart Mark T Esper at the latter's request. The two Ministers briefed each other on the respective experience of fighting the Covid-19 pandemic and vowed to continue the excellent bilateral cooperation in this regard, the Defence Ministry said.

The two leaders reviewed progress on various bilateral defence cooperation arrangements and expressed their commitment to further pro-

Singh also accepted Esper's condolence over lives lost in eastern India during Cyclone Amphan recently, and briefed him on India's relief efforts. Trump made the remarks about talking to Modi on Thursday while reiterating his offer to mediate between India and China on what he called a "big conflict" going on between the two nations.

Haryana Home Min bats for lockdown extension

PNS ■ CHANDIGARH

With a sharp increase in the number of corona virus cases in Delhi-NCR, Haryana Home Minister Anil Vij on Friday suggested that the lockdown should continue beyond May 31 and justified the strictness of the Delhi border, saying a free movement will lead to a surge in corona virus cases in the state.

Vij said, "If you ask my personal opinion, strictness will have to be maintained. Giving more relaxations at this stage can lead to increase in cases. Because the stage at which corona virus is right now, need of the hour is that lockdown should be extended." "Already relaxations have been given like opening of 'bazaar' (markets), factories... domestic flights have restarted. I am not in favour of more relaxations because cases are going up," Vij said, adding he would convey his opinion to the chief minister.

Citing a sharp increase in corona virus cases in the Haryana districts adjoining Delhi during the past week, Vij had on Thursday issued orders for sealing borders with the national capital. "Cases are increasing in the districts adjoining Delhi. The main reason for this is movement of people from Delhi into these adjoining districts of Haryana. Barring the categories exempted by the Delhi High Court and those exempted by the Centre under lockdown 4.0, the state borders for others will remain completely sealed," the order had said.

Meanwhile, traffic jams were reported on the Delhi-Gurgaon border on Friday after the latest order made the movement of people across the borders without valid permission tough. "I regularly monitor things and keep a close watch on the situation.

ARCHANA JYOTI ■ NEW DELHI

Underlying ailments are already known to have expedited the Covid-19 death. However, now the researchers have found that in ten Covid-19 patients suffering with diabetes dies within 7 days of hospital admission, and one in five is intubated and mechanically ventilated.

Age, though, is the biggest determining risk factor for death among those with either form of diabetes who get Covid-19, said the researchers as they found that two-thirds (65 per cent) of Covid-19 patients with diabetes admitted to hospital are men, and the average age of all patients is 70 years.

Under-40s have a very low risk compared with those over 40, and especially compared with those over 60 years in their study published in Diabetologia (the journal of the European Association for the Study of Diabetes (EASD)).

The findings hold importance for India which is known as a high-risk country for Covid-19. There are around 50 million people with diabetes in India whose number is likely to touch 87 million by 2030, because of various reasons, sedentary lifestyle being the major one.

The CBI transferred from an undisclosed entity based in Bahamas. From the analysis of digital evidences and accounts of Puri family maintained by Saxena, it was revealed that the amount of USD 16.33 million is proceeds of crime in the hands of Saxena belonging to Deepak Puri and is parked in the accounts of companies of Matrix Group, the agency said. Likewise, proceeds of crime belonging to Ratal Puri, nephew of Congress leader Kamal Nath, and transferred to Rajiv Saxena from an undisclosed foreign entity have also been attached.

More trouble in officing for Tablighi Jamaat

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

In more trouble for Tablighi Jamaat, the CBI has registered a Preliminary Enquiry against the Islamist outfit's organisers and other unknown persons on a complaint alleging that the organisation's Trust indulged in dubious cash transactions by using illegal means and non-disclosure of receipt of foreign funds to the competent authority under the Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act.

In March, the police evacuated more than 2,000 people staying at the Tablighi Jamaat headquarters here at the Nizamuddin for a religious congregation. Scores of the Jamaat's members were tested Covid-19 positive and they had fled out of the country to avoid spreading the pandemic. In the Delhi police FIR, the outfit was accused of organising the event in violation of government orders to avoid mass gatherings in the wake of coronavirus outbreak.

On its part, the Jamaat has denied the allegations. After registering the PE, the CBI has collected all the chargesheets filed by the Delhi Police in connection with the landmark event. The copy of the report relating to the outfit's financial dealings through multiple bank accounts including cash transactions, sources added.

Microvascular complications (eye, kidney and nerves) were found in 47 per cent of the subjects in the study, while macrovascular complications (arteries of the heart, brain, legs) were present in 41 per cent. Across all patients, by day 7 one in five (20.3 per cent) had been intubated and placed on mechanical ventilation, and one in 10 (10.3 per cent) had died. A further 18 per cent had been discharged home at this point.

Govt is consistently shrinking savings, income of common man: Congress

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

The Congress on Friday alleged that the economy is 'sinking' but the Government is consistently 'shrinking' the savings and income of the common man by reducing the deposits bank deposit and fixed savings rate of public sector banks.

The party also questioned the Supreme Court's silence over the remarks made by the Solicitor General (SG) a day earlier and alleged that the Government was autocratic in its functioning. The impact of interest rate cut decision on March 31 amounts to loss of ₹19,000 crore income per year for the depositors," Congress chief spokesperson Randeep Surjewala said in a statement. "While the rich and upper middle class is in 'economic grief'. The decision to reduce interest rates and discontinue RBI Bonds during lockdown is 'brainless, heartless and shameful', he said adding due to already existing economic crisis, the reduction of 18,650 crore of the people is down. The interest rate cuts in PPF, KVP, NSC and other saving instruments further hit the already shrinking savings of approximately 30 crore depositors, who have deposited Rs 14 lakh crore in various schemes, he said.

The latest blow for middle class, farmers, pensioners and 7.75 per cent RBI bonds and further reduction of interest rates by SBI, said Surjewala. In the last two months, the total combined reduction in income of 30 crore depositors in saving schemes (PPF, NSC, KVP etc.) and 44.1 crore account holders of State Bank of India (SBI) is Rs 44,670 crore annually (from reduction in interest rates on savings scheme and reduction in SBI savings, fixed deposit interest rates), he claimed. ₹44,670 crore is 24 per cent of actual fiscal stimulus measure announced (₹1,86,650 crore) by the government. So around one-fourth of whatever is announced is already taken back by the government by reduction in interest rates. If we include other Public Sector Banks this figure will increase by at least 3 times," he said.

The Congress demanded that interest rates on all small saving schemes, fixed deposits (FD) and savings bank deposits must be restored immediately to pre-March 12 level. On the matter of 5G Tushar Mehta, who on Thursday stated in the Supreme Court that there were a handful of people - "prophets of doom" who were always sceptical about everything, Surjewala, said, "Modi Govt's 'New Definitions' in SC - 1)'Some High Courts are running a parallel Govt' 2).

Persons with IDD more likely to die from virus: Researchers

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Persons with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) are more likely to die from Covid-19 than those without IDD, according to researchers from Syracuse University and SUNY Upstate Medical University. More so, because usually individuals with IDD have a higher prevalence of comorbid circulatory, respiratory, and endocrine diseases.

Published in the ScienceDirect's Disability and Health Journal, the study says that the disparity is likely related to a higher prevalence of comorbid diseases among those with IDD, and/or a higher percentage of people with IDD are living in congregate residential settings. IDDs are disorders that are usually present at birth and that negatively affect the trajectory of the individual's physical, intellectual, and/or emotional development.

Pandemic hits Indian pvt healthcare sector hard

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

In just two months since the lockdown was imposed to contain the Covid-19 infection, the Indian private healthcare sector is facing an existential threat, a survey said on Friday adding that the healthcare facilities in the country have witnessed at least 80 per cent fall in average revenue.

The survey was conducted by healthcare industry body NATHEALTH in 251 healthcare facilities across 9 states and 69 cities to assess the impact of COVID-19 on the domestic healthcare industry especially among small and medium-sized hospitals, which are now facing existential challenges post the lockdown from March 4, 2020. The findings showed that 90 per cent of the surveyed healthcare facilities are facing financial challenges with 21 per cent facilities facing an existential threat. According to the survey, hospitals in tier 1 and tier 2 cities are experiencing a 78 per cent reduction in OPD footfalls, and a drop of 79 per cent in inpatient admissions. The study found that 90 per cent of organisations require some form of financial assistance. The findings indicated that even after the lockdown lift, the situation will remain difficult for the hospitals and nursing homes as patients will hesitate from visiting hospitals.

Dr Sudarshan Ballal, President NATHEALTH, said there is a need to address the ongoing challenges faced by the Indian Healthcare industry. "Low financial performance, shutdown of OPDs, prohibition on elective surgeries, and ban on international travel have led to low footfalls from national and international patients in the last three months," he said. Besides this, Covid-19 outbreak has significantly impacted cash flow in all organizations. There is a need for a stimulus package to revive the Indian healthcare industry. These measures will be crucial to implement to provide much needed relief to the healthcare sector which is the frontline defense in this fight against Covid, suggested Ballal.

The survey findings indicate that the situation will remain difficult for the hospitals and nursing homes as patients will hesitate from visiting hospitals. Hospitals are working towards adapting to modern healthcare techniques and are providing consultation through telemedicine, but the problem related to OPD footfall will remain for some time. "The other challenge is increase in cost of operations is also a major concern given more stringent hygiene and containment requirements post Covid," said the NATHEALTH President.

Every individual in this study had Covid-19, so rates are case-fatality rates that gave the researchers an idea of the severity of the disease among both groups. Among ages 0-17, for every 100 individuals with Covid-19, 1.6 with IDD died and less than one without IDD died. Among ages 18-74, for every 100 individuals with Covid-19, 4.5 with IDD died compared to 2.7 without IDD. Rates were similar for those 75 and over - for every 100 individuals with Covid-19, 21.1 with IDD died and 20.7 without IDD died.

The researchers also found that individuals with IDD had a higher prevalence of comorbid circulatory, respiratory, and endocrine diseases across all age groups.

FAO warns of several successive locusts invasions in Raj

RAJESH KUMAR ■ NEW DELHI

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) has warned that several successive locusts invasions are expected until July in Rajasthan with eastward surges across northern India as far as Bihar and Odisha followed by westward movements and a return to Rajasthan on the changing winds associated with the monsoon. In its latest update, the FAO said locust swarms have moved into northern India but there are less chances of migration past to reach southern parts of India, Nepal, and Bangladesh.

flight and advised that flights should be avoided through any of the states of Rajasthan, Himachal Pradesh, Jammu Kashmir and Goa too issued alert in the wake of possible invasions. India is currently witnessing its worst locust attack in almost a century with swarms of locusts having arrived earlier than they usually and have reached farther. In the past few days, there have been movements of adult groups of locusts in India, Oman, the UAE, and Uganda. Spring-bred immature adult groups and swarms that arrived in Rajasthan from the west continued to move east in the eastern portion of the state and to the central states of Madhya Pradesh and Maharashtra.

As of 26 May, at least one swarm had reached to the northeast of Bhopal. Much of these movements were associated with strong westerly winds from Cyclone Amphan in the Bay of Bengal. Swarms are forming in the spring breeding areas and migrating east to the Indo-Pakistan border ahead of the monsoon rains, it said. These movements will cease as swarms begin to breed and become less mobile, it said. According to the FAO, desert locusts are breeding 400 times than usual due to favourable climatic conditions. This explosive multiplication may spell disaster for large parts of Asia and Africa. Favourable breeding conditions have resulted in their multiplication that is 400 times more than usual.

While the rich crops, recently harvested, survived the onslaught, the locusts can take a heavy toll on India's kharif produce if not controlled by the time the harvest season arrives. India is battling the worst desert locust invasion in more than 21 years. The crop-destroying swarms first attacked Rajasthan and have now spread to Punjab, Gujarat, Maharashtra and Madhya Pradesh.

In its guidelines, the DGCA said "Generally, locusts are found at lower levels and therefore pose a threat to aircraft in the critical landing and takeoff phase of a flight. Almost all air intake ports of the aircraft will be prone to ingestion in large numbers, if the aircraft flies through a swarm (areas like engine inlet, air-conditioning pack inlet etc.). Aviation regulator DGCA on Friday issued guidelines for stakeholders like pilots and engineers on how to deal with locust swarms, saying they pose a threat to aircraft in the critical landing and takeoff phase of a flight. India is battling the worst desert locust invasion in more than 21 years. The crop-destroying swarms first attacked Rajasthan and have now spread to Punjab, Gujarat, Maharashtra and Madhya Pradesh. "Generally, locusts are found at lower levels and therefore pose a threat to aircraft in the critical landing and takeoff phase of a flight. Almost all air intake ports of the aircraft will be prone to ingestion in large numbers, if the aircraft flies through a swarm (areas like engine inlet, air-conditioning pack inlet etc.).", the regulator said in its airborne are advised to share the information with all arriving and departing flights. Being a day-time phenomena, a pilot is also required to share information of locust swarms.

It is strongly advised that flight should be avoided through any known locust agricultural area. According to Ministry of Agriculture, the Rajasthan government has deployed 778 tractors and 50 fire brigade vehicles, Madhya Pradesh - 72 tractors and 38 fire brigade vehicles, Uttar Pradesh deployed 6 tractors and Punjab deployed 50 tractors and 6 fire brigade vehicles for locust control. "The Centre is in close touch with all the affected states of Rajasthan, Punjab, Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh and Maharashtra and an advisory has been issued," it said.

required to share information of locust swarm they spot in the course of flight. "Air traffic controllers are aware of locust presence in the vicinity of their operation circular. Pilot and static sources can also get partially or fully blocked while flying through locust swarms, the Directorate General of Civil Aviation said. "Blocked pilot and static sources lead to erroneous instrument indications, especially unreliable air speed and altimeter indications," it said. A pitot tube in airplanes is used to measure the flow speed of the wind.

TN crosses 20K mark, 874 more afflicted

KUMAR CHELLAPPAN ■ KOCHI

With 874 persons testing positive on Friday, the total number of persons afflicted with coronavirus in Tamil Nadu reached 20,246. The only consolation for the authorities is the number of patients discharged from various hospitals in the state Friday saw 765 persons getting cured and discharged from hospitals and this made the total number of active cases in the State as 8,776.

Nine persons were declared dead on Friday and the fatalities reached 154 all over the State. The efforts by the Government to contain the pandemic continued without any hold back as 71 laboratories were working round the clock to test the samples. According to the medical bulletin issued by the Tamil Nadu Government, 11, 334 persons were tested on Friday which took the total number of persons tested till date to 4,66,550. Chennai continued to be the epicentre of covid-19 in Tamil Nadu with 13,662 persons testing positive till date. There are 6,533 active cases in the district which is closely followed by Chengalpattu (545). There are districts like Namakkal, Nilgiris and Perambalur which do not have even a single coronavirus patient. Dharmapuri, which succeeded in containing the pandemic reported three cases on Friday. 62 persons tested positive for coronavirus in Kerala on Friday, according to Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan. Speaking to reporters at Thiruvananthapuram, the chief minister said that the hike in coronavirus cases was mainly due to expatriates and persons from other States who returned to Kerala. "Out of the 62 tested positive today, 33 were from foreign countries, and 29 from other States. Number of hotspots in the State increased to 101," said the Chief Minister. But he had some news of comfort to the people of the State. "The instances of virus in every 100 tests done in Kerala is 1.7 per cent and this is the best in the country," claimed Vijayan. He also ruled out the possibility of community/social transmission in the State.

Uncertainty over Amarnath yatra as cases rise in J&K

MOHIT KANDHARI ■ JAMMU

While the Jammu & Kashmir Government is still contemplating whether to allow pilgrimages to the Amarnath cave shrine for a shorter duration in the second week of July this year, the total number of coronavirus cases are spiraling up without showing any signs of coming down, especially in Kashmir valley.

The Government, which is tied up with containment efforts to check the further spread of deadly virus, is already under pressure from the pilgrims to allow annual pilgrimage to the cave shrine for a limited period of at least two weeks.

The final decision in this regard is expected to be taken during next week by the State Government. The Amarnath Shrine Board after holding three-day discussions with members of the board and taking in account the fea-

128 new cases in State, 36 from Jammu and 92 from Kashmir

Earlier, Shri Amarnath Shrine board authorities had decided to suspend the yatra this year but later recalled their decision claiming the final decision would be taken after taking a fresh review of the prevailing circumstances.

Due to heightened security concerns, the authorities in Jammu & Kashmir cannot take a unilateral decision as it has to ensure safety and security of the pilgrims during the yatra period.

Secondly, till the time lockdown guidelines are relaxed and smooth movement of pilgrims is permitted the pilgrimage cannot take place even for a limited period of time. A senior government functionary said, "we are waiting for the centre to take a final call on the issue of holding annual pilgrimage to the Amarnath cave shrine".

"Once we receive a green signal, our yatra logistics, clearing yatra track, setting up temporary shelter points, arranging refreshment, registration of pilgrims as per the guidelines can be initiated".

On the other hand, another famous shrine of Shri Mata Vaishno Devi is also awaiting final nod from the union govt to restart yatra for local pilgrims. Shri Mata Vaishno Devi yatra was suspended on March 18, 2020 ahead of the nation wide lockdown from March 23.

Meanwhile, on Friday, one more patient died due to Covid-19 in Srinagar while 128 new cases were detected in Jammu and Kashmir, taking the total tally to 2164 cases. Out of these, the total number of active cases are 1261, 332 in Jammu division and 932 in Kashmir division.

According to the media bulletin, out of 128 new positive cases, 36 were reported from Jammu division and 92 from Kashmir division.

All the 36 cases from Jammu were returnees. Highest number of 14 cases were reported from the border district of Poonch while seven cases were reported from Jammu, and six each from Kathua and Baramulla districts.

In Kashmir valley, the highest number of 27 cases were reported from Srinagar, followed by 19 cases from Kulgam, and 18 from Kupwara. According to media bulletin, 76 percent active cases in the valley are localised in the four districts of Srinagar, Kulgam, Anantnag and Kupwara.

Religious places, offices to open from June 1 in Bengal

SAUGAR SENGUPTA ■ KOLKATA

Amid eyebrows raising in the medical fraternity and the opposition circles, the Bengal Government has decided to safeguard 'Jan' and operationalise 'Jahan' even as Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Friday declared that the State will be fully functional from the first week of June with the opening of both religious places and public offices.

"While temples, mosques, churches and gurudwaras will open from June 1, the public and private sectors will become fully functional from June 8," she said adding not more than 10 persons will be allowed entry in religious places.

Public and private sector offices too will begin work with full staff strength, while allowing public transport to ferry passengers to their full capacity. Buses which were allowed to carry only 20 people earlier will now be able to ferry passengers to its full sitting strength, she said reminding, "no standing person will be allowed".

Tea gardens and jute mills too will start functioning with full capacity from June 8, she said. When asked if sudden opening of the system will neutralize the good effects of the 68-day lockdown a fuming

Chief Minister said if the Railways could send in 'Corona Expresses' (read trains bringing infected migrant workers) packed with people then where was there a harm in opening the State. "We have reports that the Railways is sending trains, heaving with migrant workers. In one seat, three-four persons are travelling. We have to look at it. I thought then what is the harm in opening up religious places. From June 1, religious sites and places can open up in Bengal."

She however said that "no mass congregation or no big festival would be allowed to be organized" in the State till further orders.

"Already Bengal has received 5-6 lakh migrant workers many of who already bring infected migrant workers packed with people thousand of them in trains... many of these people are carrying corona infection... so much so that the people have started running away when a train is entering the Howrah station," said a local Corona Express is coming," she said.

She said that but for the irresponsible attitude of the Railways which too have a "social responsibility towards the citizens of the country." Bengal Government had been successfully controlled the proliferation of the virus.

"We were successful in controlling the spread of corona virus in the last two months, but now it is increasing as a lot of people are coming from outside. The Railways is sending migrants in crowded compartments. In the name of Shramik Special trains they are running 'corona express' trains," she said.

Another senior virologist predicted "a massive increase in the number of cases in the coming weeks and Bengal will find it difficult to bury its dead people if the decision is not changed right away," CPI(M)'s Md Salim said, "it seems now its sudden lifting will finish with the Modi Government in haphazard implementation of plans. While on one hand the sudden imposition of the lockdown brought great miseries to the poor people of the country now its sudden lifting will finish the advantages of the lockdown."

Senior doctors wondered whether social distancing norms could be followed. In case of a full relaxation of lockdown norms and said "the entire good effects of the lockdown would be compromised if we open up now."

Another senior virologist predicted "a massive increase in the number of cases in the coming weeks and Bengal will find it difficult to bury its dead people if the decision is not changed right away," CPI(M)'s Md Salim said, "it seems now its sudden lifting will finish with the Modi Government in haphazard implementation of plans. While on one hand the sudden imposition of the lockdown brought great miseries to the poor people of the country now its sudden lifting will finish the advantages of the lockdown."

He also asked "how the people will be transported to their offices and back at a time when the cases are increasing. And if the local trains are started where is a guarantee of social distancing?"

State BJP president Dilip Ghosh attacked Banerjee for taking knee-jerk decisions even as he asked "for reasons did we implement the lockdown in the past two months. Was it because we will sacrifice its good effects? Will the Chief Minister be able to control the rising cases if they start to multiply in the coming weeks? Who will take the responsibility of the families that will suffer now?"

Land acquisition to be made easier in UP

Lucknow: Continuing his efforts to promote industrialisation in the state, Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath has now issued directions to amend the revenue code which will make it easier to acquire land in the state.

The amended code will make it possible to lease agricultural land for industrial units and industrial parks. The Land Acquisition Act of 2013 will also be amended to simplify the procedure for acquiring land within a distance of 1 km on either side of an express way. This will also provide for additional means of revenue generation for the industrial development authorities. According to a government spokesperson, the state government will also develop an electronic city near the Jewar International Airport for which a large land parcel will be acquired.

"At a meeting between the Chief Minister and senior officials, it was decided to auction the lands of closed public sector units. A legal verification of the land will have to be carried out for the purpose," he said. If a revenue village comes under an industrial development authority, it has been decided that the public land in these gram sabhas will be vested with the respective authority.

Under the Industrial Development Zone Act, allotment of a plot will be cancelled if a unit is not set up there after a stipulated period of time.

Meanwhile, it has also been decided that land of closed units under the Industrial Development Department and plots allotted to closed units of other departments, such as sugar mills and Central government undertakings, will be acquired for the land bank. IANS

FAMOUS PALKHI TRADITION Maha Govt to fly Or take palkhis by bus to Pandharpur

TN RAGHUNATHA ■ MUMBAI

Having cancelled the traditional Maha Palkhis (palanquin) processions from Alandi and Dehu in Pune district to Pandharpur owing to the Covid-19, the Maharashtra Government on Friday decided to take the holy 'Padukas' (foot prints) notably of Sant Dnyaneshwar and Sant Tukaram from Warkari sect directly to the temple town in Solapur district in western Maharashtra.

At a meeting held between Deputy Chief Minister Ajit Pawar and the organising committee in Pune on Friday, it was decided that there would be palanquin processions from Alandi and Dehu Pune district to the Vithoba-Rukhmani temple in Pandharpur in view of the continued spread of coronavirus in many parts of the state.

In the past, palanquin processions would begin from Alandi and Dehu and go through Pune, Sangli, Satara & Solapur districts. The whole pilgrimage would take 21 days. Numerous palkhis join the main Tukaram and Dnyaneshwar palkhis along the way.

Devoites from from all over Maharashtra and nearby areas would set out for Pandharpur, wearing holi beads and sing the glories of Vithoba and songs like "Gyanba Tukaram", commemorating the saints. Upon reaching Pandharpur on the auspicious Ashadi Ekadashi day, the devotees would take a holy dip in the sacred Chandrabhaga river of Bihma river before offering prayers at the Vithoba-Rukobai Temple.

In consultations with the deputy Chief Minister, the organisers decided to discontinue the 'Palkhis' (palanquin processions) which would in the past see more than at least four lakh Warkaris, the people who would under annual pilgrimage (war) from Alandi and Dehu to the temple town of Pandharpur in Solapur district.

During the meeting, Pawar assured the organisers that the State Government would ensure the 'palkhis' would be taken to Pandharpur on the day of Dhami either by Helicopter or via State-run MSRTC buses.

This is for the first time in the nearly 800-year-old tradition of Palkhis, palanquin processions will not be taken by foot from the twin temple towns of Alandi and Dehu to Pandharpur.

As part of the decision taken by the State Government, palkhis of Sant Dnyaneshwar, Sant Tukaram, Sant Nirvnutan, Sant Sopankas, Sant Muktabai and Sant Namdeo will be taken directly by either road or air on the dashmi day.

Maha sees record 116 deaths, 2,682 more cases

TN RAGHUNATHA ■ MUMBAI

Maharashtra, which is the worst coronavirus-affected State in the country, notched another dubious feat on Friday, as a record 116 people died of pandemic and 2,682 others tested positive, taking the total number of deaths to 2,098 and infected cases jumped to 62,228 in the State.

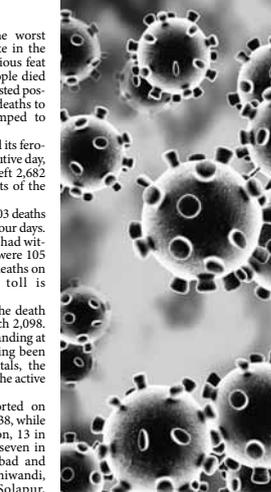

The coronavirus displayed its ferocious face on the fourth consecutive day, as it claimed 116 deaths and led 2,682 others infected in various parts of the State.

There have been a total of 403 deaths in Maharashtra during the last four days. On May 26 (Tuesday) the state had witnessed 97 deaths, while there were 105 deaths on Wednesday and 85 deaths on Thursday. Friday's death toll is 116.

With the latest fatalities, the death toll crossed 2,000 mark in the State. With the total infected cases standing at 62,228 and 8,381 patients having been discharged from various hospitals, the state health authorities pegged the active cases at 33,124.

Of the total deaths reported on Friday, Mumbai accounted for 38, while there were 17 deaths in Jalgaon, 13 in Pune, nine in Navi Mumbai, seven in Dhule, five each in Aurangabad and Malegaon, three each in Bhiwandi, Mira-Bhayandar, Nashik, Solapur, Kolhapur, two each in Raigad and Amravati.

Of the dead, 77 were men while 39 were women. Forty eight of them were aged over 60 years, 55 were from the age group 40 to 59 years and 13 were aged

"Seventy five out of 116 patients (65%) had high-risk co-morbidities such as diabetes hypertension, heart disease, etc," a State health bulletin said.

Out of the total deaths reported today, 46 deaths occurred in the last two days. Currently, 5,31,467 people are in home quarantine and 35,967 people are in institutional quarantine.

Meanwhile, considering that the monsoon is around the corner, prevalence of other epidemic diseases other than Covid-19 will also possibly increase. On this background, the health department has started its preparation.

For Malaria, insecticide spraying has been planned in sensitive districts and swachata surveillance is going on in the state for water quality.

Considering the increasing number of Covid-19 patients, the bed capacity is being increased as per the requirement in the three-tier system of Covid-19 health facilities.

Balancing act

India was quick to brush off US mediation on Ladakh. Besides, we can't afford to rub China the wrong way in the pandemic era

India finds itself in a peculiar situation, caught between the US and China over border tensions in Ladakh. While its strategic proximity to the first is a source of deep discontent for a hegemonic Asian power, the maverick support from US President Donald Trump, who offered to mediate in the crisis, has meant double trouble. Trump has made many mediation efforts on India's behalf at international fora before but the timing of this one in a post-pandemic world is different. More than India, it is a message to China. The US, which has made no bones about China fudging the scale and potency of the Wuhan contagion and is in a punishing mood, threatening to boycott it economically, is building an international coalition of opinion against the Middle Kingdom. It is, therefore, drawing India to be a part of this anti-China narrative, knowing full well that we could end up being among the top worst-hit nations and would have much to be suspicious about our eastern neighbour. In that sense, the US is feeding off India's weakened position, courtesy its plunging economy and a soaring public health crisis, as much as China is. The heightened tension at Ladakh is China's way of reminding India that it could light up the Himalayan border easily if we fell into the US trap of building a global campaign against it or block trade and investment here. In fact, given that we cannot end our import dependence on China overnight considering its manufacturing edge over ours, particularly when the pandemic has paralysed our economy, we just have to engage with China one on one. India, therefore, has rightly distanced itself, maintaining that it would solve issues with its neighbours through dialogue and diplomatic mechanisms rather than external intervention. China, too, which is used to speaking in a forked tongue, has already indicated diplomacy as a way around the impasse. India is well familiar with this blow-hot-blow-cold intimidatory tactic though the escalation this time is in sync with Chinese deprecations in the region against neighbours. Clearly, Xi Jinping wants to justify the need for his muscular leadership by positing the world as an enemy out to finish China as he faces a fall in GDP about 25 per cent unemployment, a plunging economy and the suppressed rage of a people, who will never know the damage the virus has done to them.

So what should India do? As Doklam has taught us, standing down is not always the way. Indian troops are now favourably placed in many positions and border infrastructure has been fairly ramped up over the last decade. Improved road corridors mean that we can now service requirements and replenish supplies even better. This is what has been exasperating the People's Liberation Army (PLA), which realises that its edge in the region is gradually being blunted and thinks that India might have ambitions in the Aksai Chin. So India should remain firm on legitimate positions. At the same time, it must step up diplomacy and keep at it rather than diverting itself to scaled up military conflicts as China is still a powerful neighbour. In fact, diplomacy, though requiring high-level intervention, may just work as the tussle this time is over areas that are not really disputed since 1962 and quite distant from the Line of Actual Control (LAC). Of course, this doesn't mean that China won't attempt transgressions and territorial intimidation to amass us during crises. At the same time, if China rakes up the long Himalayan boundaries, we should pose a counter-weight by tying up with Southeast Asian nations and build pressure against Chinese expansionism in the South China Sea. We should discuss shared threats in the Indian Ocean region with Vietnam, Philippines, Australia, Indonesia and Malaysia. Diplomatically, we could circle China by galvanising the threat perception from it in the region and strengthening a security alliance. One can do this with increased diplomatic engagement without appearing too aggressive and risking a Chinese hitback. In fact, we must be prepared for more hostilities as India builds self-sufficiencies. India has stalled it from ambushing our economy by amending its foreign direct investment (FDI) rules to mandate Government approval for all investments from "border" countries and prevent hostile takeovers. We have already cancelled orders for Chinese test kits as they were faulty and have switched to South Korea and other nations. We are supporting a global impartial probe into the Wuhan contagion and though "vocal for local" may not have any scale now, China will not sit easy with the discomfort over 5G trials and a future shrinkage of its market in India.

Hell before healing

The dismal conditions at quarantine centres across the country are more killing than the disease itself

The word "quarantine centre" has become the colonial equivalent of "kaala paani" or confinement in the dreaded prison on the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, where our freedom fighters were condemned to die in pitiable conditions. Now we are condemning COVID-19 patients as untouchables and leaving them to their fate if the horror stories of conditions at isolation zones are anything to go by. According to the Government's guidelines, each quarantine centre must have rooms/dormitories separated from one another with water, food, telephone, laundry and sanitation services. But the reality is so different that the Allahabad High Court actually took suo motu cognisance of the unhygienic and inhuman conditions at various quarantine centres in Uttar Pradesh after an engineer succumbed to the infection at one but not before apprising his wife of his plight. More lives could have been saved had the conditions enabled recovery than worsening the health of patients. This is not an isolated case. There are reports coming in from across the country of unhygienic conditions, soiled sheets, a few dirty toilets for scores of people, no social distancing, no privacy, shortage of food leading to people fighting over it, flies, mosquitoes, snakes, staff behaving in a rude manner, treating people like untouchables and throwing food packets at them, lack of medicines for those who have diseases like diabetes and heart ailments and disinterested doctors ignoring their duty. No wonder then that there have been reports of people trying to flee quarantine centres, not reporting their conditions and committing suicide. Even doctors have been up in arms about the sorry state of affairs. With the Government exiting the lockdown in a graded manner and the country seeing a surge in cases coupled with increasing testing, the pressure on these centres is bound to increase. How then will it deal with the situation?

The Government should increasingly consider home quarantining people as the public healthcare infrastructure is obviously overwhelmed. Plus, it can also think of roping in the private sector healthcare providers or hotels, which can be turned into quarantine centres for those who can afford to pay. There can be different budgets to suit different pockets. This will free up Government facilities and money for the millions who cannot afford to pay. Desperate times call for desperate measures and it is time we began looking for out-of-the-box solutions to deal with this unprecedented situation. Corporates can be asked to foot the bills of the centres and make the expense part of their CSR. The Government should have created the infrastructure during the lockdown period. The fact that it could not reflects poorly on it.

Hysteria in a time of virus

The Corona pandemic has been killing far fewer people compared to road accidents and other causes. It has indeed brought out the best and the worst in humanity

HIRANMAY KARLEKAR

Watching the public's and the Union and State Governments' response to the COVID-19 pandemic in the wake of the progress of the cyclone Amphan, I was reminded of Charles Dickens' famous sentence in A Tale of Two Cities, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of Light, it was the season of Darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going direct the other way—in short, the period was so wondrously mixed up, that the present period, that some of its noisiest authorities insisted on its being received, for good or for evil, in the superlative degree of comparison only."

There are parts of the sentence that are generally relevant to the times we live in India but not to the specific context we are talking about. Some parts do apply. For example, it is "the best of times" in terms of the courage, compassion and generosity shown by a number of people to help migrant workers, rendered unemployed by the lockdown. One of them is Pappan Singh Gehlot, a mushroom farmer in Delhi's Tigar village, who has bought air tickets worth ₹68,000 to enable his migrant workers to return to their village in Bihar. He has also given each of them a cash advance of ₹3,000 so that they do not face any hardship on return, besides getting their medical certificates. In another village, according to reports, Gehlot, who has been taking care of their food and accommodation since the lockdown began on March 25, did not want them to walk home given the risks, including those of accidents, involved. Interestingly, one of the reports has quoted him as saying that he had made several attempts to send them back to their home States by a Shramik Special train but could not manage to do so.

Another shining example is that of Akshay Kothawale, a 30-year-old auto driver in Pune, who is spending the ₹200,000 he had saved, in his wedding to feed migrant workers and those in distress in the streets. With the help of his friends who have chipped in, he is feeding 400 people every day besides feeding senior citizens and pregnant women to clinics.

Another example is that of the alumni association of the Bengaluru-based National Law School raising funds to charter an Air Asia Boeing A-320 aircraft to send 169 migrant workers and five children home from Mumbai to Ranchi in Jharkhand. According to Sheyl Trehan, one of those involved in the venture, it was carried out in cooperation with Priya Sharma of the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences of IIT, Mumbai.

There are many other examples of individuals and NGOs going out of their way to help migrant labourers and urban poor. They, however, constitute a small slice of the population. The overwhelming majority could not care less or are hostile. The indifference is manifest even in the case of the havoc wrought by the super-cyclone Amphan, which has devastated huge tracts in West Bengal and parts of Odisha. West Bengal bore the brunt of it. There were not more than 86 deaths thanks to the State Government's excellent work in evacuating people. The physical damage has been crippling. The Sunderbans, the world's largest mangrove forest and a wildlife sanctuary, has virtually been destroyed. Hundreds and thousands of people have been rendered homeless. Crops over thousands of square kilometres have been lost. According to the Kolkata Municipal Corporation, over 5,000 trees have been uprooted in the city—the figure may have been as high as 10,000 if the adjacent areas are included. Hundreds of lamp posts have been destroyed. Yet, having satisfied their voyeuristic instincts in front of television sets, the overwhelming majority outside West Bengal and Odisha is now obsessed with COVID-19 and the threat the pandemic poses to them. And this despite the fact that COVID-19, the first case of which was reported in India on January 30, 2020, has been killing far fewer people compared to road accidents and other causes. Thus, according to the latest figures, there have been over 166,000 cases, 71,196 cures and 4,706 deaths. This means, on a rough average, over 36 deaths per day since January 30. In sharp contrast, there are on an average 1,214 traffic accidents and 377 deaths from such mishaps, every day. There were 5.45 crore cases of, and 28 lakh cases of deaths from cardiovascular diseases in India in 2016.

It is this hysteria worked up over the COVID-19 pandemic which is one of the main reasons making this "the worst of times" in terms of the cruelty arising therefrom, and also the hypocrisy laid bare by the mismatch between official expressions of concern for migrant workers and their inhuman treatment on the ground. It is not just the fiasco of the efforts to take them home by special trains earmarked exclusively for them. It is also the widely manifest attitude of not being sympathetic to the terrible suffering of migrant workers on highways, roads, airports, railway stations and inter-State borders—and regarding them as untouchables to be consigned to the peripheries of their villages or neighbourhood by locals fearing them spreading infection. And this despite wide dissemination through media of the fact that COVID-19 infects one only through close personal contact and home quarantine is good enough. Even single women and children are not spared!

The basic reason is fear and, in its fundamental sub-statum, that of death. This is understandable. There is neither cure nor as yet a vaccine for COVID-19. Exaggerated fear, in the teeth of the availability of information, which shows its lack of basis, is however, irrational and unwarranted. Like all fears, it should have been contained by an application of will. This has not happened. Instead, the majority of people in this country has been enveloped by a wild terror that has led to the better of their humane instincts and rationality.

This leads to two other segments of Dickens' observation, "It was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness," and "it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair." It is the age of wisdom in the sense that the people are beginning to realise that what many had taken for granted—that humans are the masters of the universe—is not true and that rationality is a fragile attribute. It is the age of foolishness in that the majority cannot still apply reason in a time of crisis. The hope lies in the shining conduct of a minority and the compassion and courage shown by even people from the most privileged sections, the despair from the selfishness and worse of the majority and the attitude of the Union and most of the State Governments to the plight of migrant workers.

It is a remarkable commentary on the state of affairs that the Supreme Court, on Thursday, had to forbid the railways and the State Governments from extracting train or bus fares from stranded migrant waiting to return home. The railways had to provide them with food and water during train journeys, while the States from which they were boarding would have to take care of their meals and water during bus journeys. One only wishes the order came earlier.

Reforms in PDS

Sir—This refers to the article, "Pandemic and PDS" (May 28) by Santosh Biswal and Utam Chakraborty. It needs to be clarified that the exercise of State-wise coverage within the overall national coverage of the National Food Security Act (NFSA) was done by the Planning Commission using 68th round of NSSO Household Consumption Expenditure Survey (2011-12). The estimation took into account the monthly per capita expenditure of States and the inter-State price differentials to arrive at the consumption cut-offs for rural and urban areas for each State/UT. This was thereafter used to arrive at the percentage of persons falling below that cut-off level of expenditure separately for rural and urban areas. These percentages were then applied on the 2011 population Census to arrive at the number of persons in each State/UT both in rural and urban areas. This yielded the eligible population in the rural and urban areas in each State/UT.

Private hospitals must share the burden

This refers to the editorial, "The cost of care" (May 29). The Supreme Court has rightly questioned private hospitals for not giving free COVID treatment to affected patients. It is a fact that the growing number of cases has crippled Government hospitals. There is a need for private hospitals to coordinate with the Government to tide over the crisis. The Bench, headed by Chief Justice SA Bobde, has asked the Government to identify a list of hospitals where COVID patients can be treated free of cost. At least the private hospitals can waive consultation, laboratory and ward charges for patients. The cost of medicines can be borne by them, too. In Government hospitals, too, at least 25 per cent of the cost of treatment and medicines should be borne by the patients. Then people will be careful enough to stay away from infected people. Since the Government has been bearing the treatment cost, some people are not following the guidelines. In many places, COVID warriors have also been attacked. Also, it is unfair to expect private hospitals to attend only to COVID patients. Those suffering from other diseases should not be neglected. As things stand now, other patients have been mainly neglected with some fatalities as well.

KV Seetharamiah

"One nation, one ration card" is already enabled in 17 States/UTs. So far, 146 LMT foodgrains have been delivered to NFSA beneficiaries during April and May 2020 under regular NFSA and Pradhan Mantri Garib Kalyan Anna Yojana (PM-GKAY). Further, distribution is also under progress. Also, the Atma Nirbar Bharat Abhiyan is being implemented to reach out to all such people who may not have NFSA or State ration cards, including migrants/stranded migrants but are in need for temporary ration.

A proper review of the above initiative on a factual basis should have been done before naming some States as "doubly disadvantaged." This is a lack of proper understanding of facts and ongoing reforms, which often leads to unsubstantiated criticism of the PDS of having an imaginary in-built inequity. The Government always welcomes further improvement in the system and is open to any constructive criticism as it helps in improvement of the system for the benefit of the poor.

Build cyber resilience

As cyber attacks soar, a data recovery plan must be fully integrated within the business and align with its cloud strategy

RIPU BAJWA

During these extraordinary times, when the world is fighting against the deadly COVID-19 pandemic, other threats like the danger of catastrophic cyber attacks have fast mushroomed alongside. As business leaders come face to face with rising cases across the world and in India, the need to be prepared with better data security solutions arises. The World Economic Forum's Global Risks Report, 2020 ranks cyber attacks as the second risk of greatest concern to businesses in the coming decade. As the tools of the Darknet become more sophisticated and accessible, cyber attacks are becoming increasingly borderless — taking advantage of jurisdictional constraints of regional authorities.

According to an industry research by Frost & Sullivan, 46 per cent of Indian organisations that are in the process of digital transformation have encountered a security incident in 2019. In fact, as per another industry report released recently, India witnessed a two to three-fold increase in the number of cyber attack incidents during the ongoing lockdown that began on March 25.

As it is, cybercrime constitutes a serious problem for India even outside of crisis periods. India was among the top five most targeted countries in the world by cyber criminals in recent years, reflecting the significant amount of work still outstanding in strengthening the nation's cyber defences. Though it is a positive development that more than 550 million Indians have connected to the Internet in recent years, fuelled by rural growth, this comes with its own set of problems. The rapid proliferation of Internet users and of the Internet of Things (IoT) has also left the country's public and private sectors vulnerable. We are seeing more and more large-scale data loss and the rise of ransomware attacks — so business resilience planning is key to survival.

Why medium-sized businesses must act now: Reacting in real time to a cyber attack is already too late. Managing the risk requires agility, meticulous alignment across the business and testing to maintain awareness. It is all about being proactive rather than reactive. Cyber resilience is more important than ever as medium-sized businesses assess their risk of being attacked, whether at the hands of criminals or as collateral damage in cyber warfare. Any data loss can put the nails in the coffin for unprepared businesses. While today's business leaders may hope to evade the hit-list, it is a matter of "when" not "if" an attack happens.

Defending against catastrophic data loss: Defending a medium-sized business from the worst-case scenario and mission-critical data loss requires cyber security expertise and a holistic approach to resilience. Awareness needs to be built across the business — this is not just a technical problem. Synergy between technology and business processes is where true resilience is attained. Learning on cyber experts when it comes to planning and implementation will help businesses identify key applications, recovery times and objectives.

Every arm of the business needs to understand where its most sensitive data and services are parked and the level of risk around them. To understand the level of risk, an agile approach is needed because risk changes along with the business landscape. For this reason, regular scans and analysis of the internal landscape are essential to understand these changes and the impact.

Protecting a huge portfolio of assets is not easy, especially as it expands. But every business must understand what its DNA is — that's the critical 10-15 per cent of data that must be protected at all costs. This is the lifeblood of an organisation and, in the event of a cyber-attack, is the difference between its life and death. It is business-critical and must be decided upon with a holistic view. For some organisations, this can often lead to analysis paralysis — the desire to save it all. In the same way that we would only carry our most essential belongings from a burning home, businesses must decide upon their most prized data so that it can be protected and used to recover the business in the aftermath.

There is a cure: The good news is this process can be simplified by data protection and cyber-security services that enable organisations to establish policy-driven automated workflows to move business-critical data into an isolated environment and lock it down in less than five steps. This is called a cyber-vault, the ultimate protection for a business' DNA.

In the event of an attack, this data will help businesses to recover. When responding to cyber incidents and working to bring critical systems and data back online, accuracy and simplicity matter. A cyber recovery plan must be fully integrated within the business and align with its cloud strategy.

Businesses are increasingly aware of the dangers of a cyber attack but they need to truly invest in cyber resilience in order to shore up the gaps in the ever-changing work environment. And cyber security expertise is vital. The clock is ticking, it's not a matter of "if" but "when" and businesses need to be prepared.

WE CAN'T ALLOW SOME PLATFORMS TO HAND-PICK THE SPEECH THAT AMERICANS MAY ACCESS. THIS WILL BE A BIG DAY FOR SOCIAL MEDIA AND FAIRNESS.

The perfect blend

Blended finance combines public sector and philanthropic monies as catalytic capital to raise multiples of private sector monies, which help scale up the flow of funding to sustainable projects

SOURAJIT AIYER SANDEEP BHATTACHARYA

As sustainability becomes mainstream, it is becoming a well-acknowledged fact that the planet just does not possess the resources required for us to maintain our current consumption patterns and emulate the aspirational lifestyles of the West. The estimated growth in global population to 10 billion in the not too distant future is an added headwind. This situation has meant that driving efficiencies in resource usage is fast coming into public discourse to reduce the carbon footprint. This is translating into necessary assets that would need funding. Such examples abound, like fuel-efficient cars, migration of public transport to e-vehicles, high-speed rail in place of airlines, urban Mass Rapid Transit trains substituting fuel-run vehicles, micro grids for far-flung communities instead of diesel generators and so on.

While these assets, which are typically part of large-scale transformational projects, are funded either by the Government or by concessional loans from development financial institutions, public capital is not going to fulfil the need for the trillions of dollars of investment the planet requires to scale up projects that would usher in the desired sustainability goals.

However, the biggest challenge to bringing private sector capital to the fact that most projects do not offer commercially-viable returns, owing to high upfront costs, long payback, remote location of some projects, nascent technologies and in certain cases, political uncertainties, weak institutional frameworks and so on.

This is where blended finance has come up as a solution in this context. It combines public sector and philanthropic monies as catalytic capital to raise multiples of private sector monies, which help scale up the flow of funding to sustainable projects, while yielding substantial economic benefits to all stakeholders.

The blended finance structure addresses the project's perceived risks, thereby helping increase the size and number of funding opportunities. It comprises funding, which may or may not be concessional, supported with one or more elements like guarantees, political risk insurance, performance insurance, outcome-based funding, interest subvention, concessional or off-market local currency hedging, project preparation grants and so on.

This combination can and must be decided upon with a holistic view. For some organisations, this can often lead to analysis paralysis — the desire to save it all. In the same way that we would only carry our most essential belongings from a burning home, businesses must decide upon their most prized data so that it can be protected and used to recover the business in the aftermath.

There is a cure: The good news is this process can be simplified by data protection and cyber-security services that enable organisations to establish policy-driven automated workflows to move business-critical data into an isolated environment and lock it down in less than five steps. This is called a cyber-vault, the ultimate protection for a business' DNA.

“ IN THE END, COMPULSIONS LIKE CLIMATE CHANGE, GREENHOUSE GAS EMISSIONS, SUBSTITUTING THE IMPORT COST OF FOSSIL FUELS AND DRIVING ECONOMIC GROWTH THROUGH 'GREEN SECTORS' WILL NECESSITATE AN URGENT SCALE-UP IN SUSTAINABILITY PROJECTS. TO ACHIEVE THIS, INNOVATIVE MECHANISMS TO RAISE DEDICATED GREEN CAPITAL WILL HOLD THE KEY, ESPECIALLY AS INDIAN BANKS CANNOT ALWAYS FUND THE LONG MATURITIES THAT SUSTAINABILITY PROJECTS ENTAIL. WHILE BLENDED FINANCE CANNOT SOLVE ALL THE ISSUES, IT CAN CERTAINLY ADDRESS SOME OF THE BARRIERS

the role of the Solar Energy Corporation of India in terms of evaluation, disbursement and monitoring.

Another example is that of cKers Finance and Rockefeller Foundation. In 2018, their partnership involves an investment by Rockefeller in the Delhi-based sustainable energy Non-Banking Financial Company (NBFC) to build a $50 million asset financing portfolio for scaling up India's decentralised renewable energy segment (DRE). The Rockefeller investment would help cKers provide funding access at reasonable rates and terms to build the sustainable energy portfolio about 10 per cent of which would be in mini-grids. While the national grid has reached almost all places in India, the quality of supply remains erratic and thus DRE solutions like micro and mini-grid hold value.

Then there is the US-India Clean Energy Finance (USICEF) programme, which supports distributed solar power projects through grants specifically for early-stage project preparation support. Managed by the Climate Policy Initiative, it is a partnership between the US Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) and others. Developers apply to theUSICEF, which maintains an empanelled list of service providers (legal and professional services consultancies and so on) and engages them with the grant.

The project preparation support makes these developers investment-ready to raise funding from OPIC and other like-minded firms. The average grant is only about $0.1 million or so but this is a significant challenge for the developers given the small scales and the limitations they face in resources and talent acquisition.

This programme, with a total $3.5 million grant committed so far, has supported several rooftop solar, small ground-mounted and solar home system projects across more than a dozen Indian States. Last is the "pay for success" outcome funder model. Gramen Impact Investment, a Mumbai-based impact NBFC, launched social impact bonds addressing women's livelihood and empowerment, youths' skill-development and clean energy. Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) spending by organisations in India has risen exponentially in recent years, mostly towards health and education. However, India's Human Development Index score, which includes mostly health and education indicators, has hardly improved.

While CSR is only one component of India's social sector spending, this does give some indication that actual achievement of outcomes is perhaps found wanting at times. The outcome funder model attempts to close this gap. The predefined outcome metrics are independently verified by third-party evaluators for on-ground achievement, only upon which the outcome funder (a philanthropy or CSR fund) would meet the enterprise's interest and/or principle obligations — thus "pay for success".

This ensures that the philanthropic resources are leveraged in a manner that will help achieve outcomes far more than what direct spending could possibly do. Other blended models abound globally, each of which can potentially be replicated in India. The US-India Catalytic Solar Finance Facility used catalytic, first-loss capital to create risk-mitigation facilities. The Grid Solar Fund, which funds off-grid solar companies, raised $10 million in political risk insurance from OPIC to attract investments from the private sector.

Climate Investor One Fund raised blended capital at about 1.7 times multiple with a tiered-structure, which bifurcates capital into first-loss, subordinated equity and debt with credit guarantee from OPIC to attract investments from the private sector. Denmark's Climate Investment Fund raised blended capital at over 1.7 times multiple, by using a preferential model where losses are shared equally by public and private investors but the latter enjoy a preferential return and a catch-up option.

At the same time, a preferential model based on share classes was more effective. The Global Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Fund, which paid principal and interest in batches between its A and B share classes, could raise blended capital only at about 0.8 times multiple.

Models apart, another merit of blended finance is that it can cover areas traditionally unserved by conventional funding, like US' Prime Coalition, which invests in early-stage clean energy technologies, the Africa Clean Energy Facility, which focuses on project preparation and expects to raise a multiple of about 20 times its grants and IFC-GEF's China Utility Energy Efficiency Programme, which helped local banks lend for energy efficiency.

Blended finance can also mobilise commercial bank participation as seen in Dutch bank FMO's Guarantoo that grants partial credit guarantees to local banks, Indonesia's Sarulla geothermal project that used a political risk guarantee from Japan's JICA and a guarantee letter from the Indonesian Government to bring in commercial bank funding, German KfW and ResponsAbility's Global Climate Partnership Fund that refinances green lending schemes of local banks or Africa Development Bank's Facility for Energy Inclusion that combines commercial capital for small-scale energy access projects.

In the end, compulsions like climate change, greenhouse gas emissions, substituting the import cost of fossil fuels and driving economic growth through "green sectors" will necessitate an urgent scale-up in sustainability projects. To achieve this, innovative mechanisms to raise dedicated green capital will hold the key, especially as Indian banks cannot always fund the long maturities that sustainability projects entail. While blended finance cannot solve all the issues, it can certainly address some of the barriers. The models discussed in this article have already shown demonstrable value which makes them worth emulating. Most of them can be potentially replicated and scaled up further to fund India's multitude sustainability challenges. Emerging markets with similar challenges to India should also take note.

Climate change lessons from the Corona crisis

We clearly need to speed up research and testing of the various potential techniques for geo-engineering now

GWYNNE DYER

Human beings respond well to a familiar crisis, especially if it is also imminent. They don't do nearly as well when the threat is unfamiliar and still apparently quite distant. Consider our response to the current Coronavirus threat. Countries in East Asia with recent experience of similar viruses like SARS and so on immediately responded with "test, track and isolate" drills, plus instant lockdowns if the virus had already gained a foothold in the population. Other countries, just as rich and well-educated, had the same information but they waited several months before taking emergency measures that upset the comfortable routine of their lives. So the US, UK and France all ended up with death rates per million more than 50 times higher than China, Korea and Japan.

The same applies to global heating, except that in this case we are all Americans. None of us has prior experience of a genuine climate crisis and although we have known enough about what's going to happen to justify urgent action for 30 years now, we have done nothing decisive about it. We have lots of "clean" technology but total demand for energy has grown so fast that we are still getting a steady 80 per cent of our energy from fossil fuels. Realistically, this is not going to change much. We are who we are, shaped by millions of years of evolution and our ancestors didn't do long-term planning; they had to concentrate on acute short-term problems. A truly serious response to the climate threat will, therefore, come only when it is starting to hurt. Unfortunately, by then it will probably be too late.

The Earth system — the biosphere, atmosphere, the oceans, the rocks, all the components that govern the climate — plays by its own rules. It will absorb new inputs like warming for a long time while changing as little as possible. It is a "homeostatic" system. We are still benefiting from this feature now: A full degree Celsius of warming already and not much to show for it except hotter summers, shorter winters and bigger storms. But when the pressure on the climate system gets too great — reaches a tipping point — it is liable to charge off in unpredictable directions at high speed. "Non-linear change", they call it and we won't like it a bit. Hundreds of millions, maybe billions, will start to die. Then we will be ready to make great changes to save ourselves but it will be too late. Human systems will be collapsing under the impact of famines, wars and endless waves of refugees. And besides, once the climate hits non-linear change, it is almost impossible to bring it back. We're stuck with whatever it ends up, whether that new state will support a large human civilisation or not.

How far ahead is this calamity? We probably have at least a decade or two. Will we end all our greenhouse gas emissions in that time? Probably not. Cutting our emissions isn't enough. We have to stop all of our emissions before we push the climate system over the edge and we don't even know precisely where the edge is. Every bit of emissions we can cut now gives us a little more time before we reach the edge, but the global population will still be going up and people in the poorer countries will still be increasing their energy use. (It's their turn and you can't deny them that.) So, the crisis almost certainly will arrive and then we will finally be willing to make radical changes. What we will desperately need at that point is more time. That's why we will need geo-engineering. This is not a cure; it is a way of temporarily counteracting the warming caused by our emissions of greenhouse gases by reflecting a small part of the incoming sunlight in one way or another. In fact, you could say that it is "positive" geo-engineering, as opposed to the large-scale "negative" geo-engineering we have been doing for the last two centuries by dumping huge amounts of warming gases into the atmosphere.

When we are finally ready to act decisively on global warming, we will need a window of time to make the changes that are required to preserve this global civilisation and the biosphere it now dominates. Only geo-engineering can create that window. We don't need to start geo-engineering now. It would be wonderful if we never have to do it but that would take a miracle. We cannot know how long we would have to go on doing it, either. Long enough to get the carbon dioxide in the atmosphere back down to a safe level, certainly, which would be at least a matter of decades. But even without knowing the answers to these questions, we clearly need to speed up research and testing of the various potential techniques for geo-engineering now.

After a gap-down opening, the 30-share BSE Sensex picked up pace in late-afternoon trading to finish at 32,424.10, up 223.51 points or 0.69 per cent.

Besides stock-specific action, heavy foreign fund inflows led buying confidence to domestic investors, analysts said.

On a net basis, foreign portfolio investors bought equities worth ₹2,33,347 crore on Thursday, provisional exchange data showed.

"Indian markets once again gained momentum as the global markets which were weak. In the process it played catch up with them after under-performing over the last few weeks."

"Oil & gas, materials and engineering stocks did well. Large volume trade happened in stocks that saw little movement suggesting shifting of holdings between two institutions," said Deepak Jasani, Head - Retail Research, HDFC Securities.

8 core sector output drops by record 38.1 pc in April

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

The output of eight core infrastructure industries plunged by a record 38.1 per cent in April as the nationwide lockdown to contain coronavirus pandemic caused a substantial loss of production across sectors.

The production of coal, natural gas, refinery products, steel, cement and electricity contracted in double digits in the month, according to official data released on Friday. The eight core sectors had expanded by 5.2 per cent in April 2019 while in March 2020 the sectors had contracted by 9 per cent.

"In view of nationwide lockdown during April 2020 due to COVID-19 pandemic, various industries - coal, cement, steel, natural gas, refinery, crude oil etc experienced substantial loss of production," the Commerce and Industry Ministry said in a statement.

Production of coal, crude oil, natural gas, refinery product, fertiliser, steel, cement and electricity contracted by 15.5 per cent, 6.4 per cent, 19.9 per cent, 24.2 per cent, 15.5 per cent, 83.9 per cent, 86 per cent, 22.8 per cent, respectively. During 2019-20, core industries recorded 0.6 per cent growth against 4.4 per cent in 2018-19.

The record contraction in the growth rate of eight core sectors contributed to a broad-based contraction across eight core sectors, it had a differential impact on the extent to which activity was curtailed in the various constituents.

While data on automobile production has not been explicitly released for April 2020, the output is likely to have been close to zero as most plants were shut for a large part of the month during the lockdown," Nayyar said.

Based on the available data, he anticipated a contraction of 75-80 per cent in industrial output in April 2020.

GST Council to meet next month

Fin Min not for raising rates on non-essential items

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

The Finance Ministry is not in favour of increasing goods and services tax rates on non-essential items in the next month's meeting of the GST Council, despite depressed revenue collections due to the nationwide lockdown to contain the spread of COVID-19.

If goods and services tax rates are increased on non-essential items, sources said it will further bring down demand and impede the overall economic recovery. Post the lockdown, demand has been induced and economic activity has to improve on all fronts.

UK plans new 5G club of 10 democracies, including India: Report

PTI ■ LONDON

The British Government has approached the US with the prospect of creating a 5G club of 10 democracies, including India, amid growing security concerns related to Chinese telecom giant Huawei, according to a UK news report.

A so-called "D10 club" of democratic partners, including G7 countries - UK, US, Italy, Germany, France, Japan and Canada - plus Australia, South Korea and India will aim to create alternative suppliers of 5G equipment and other technologies to avoid relying on China, 'The Times' reported.

The move to speed up such a club comes as the UK launched an inquiry into Huawei's involvement in the country's mobile network upgrade in the wake of US sanctions against the company.

EPCEs Sudden sealing of State borders making difficult to operate in Capital

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

Seeking a stable policy for operations of units amid COVID-19, a representative body of special economic zones on Friday flagged that sudden sealing of borders in the National Capital Region is making it difficult for businesses to operate factories.

"We request that either a nationwide stable policy may be issued, applicable in all the states for the running of businesses or don't put any operative guidelines and compliances for trade and industry and not to pressurise payment of salaries to workers without any business." Export Promotion Council for Special Economic Zones and Export Oriented Units (EPCEs) said.

"We need new entrants to the market. That was the reason we had with Huawei at the time," the newspaper quoted a UK Government source as saying. Nokia and Ericsson are the only European suppliers of 5G infrastructure and experts say that they cannot provide 5G kit as quickly or as cheaply as Huawei.

Britain has labelled Huawei a "high-risk" vendor and therefore its involvement in the UK's 5G upgrade comes with a 35 per cent market cap, including a ban on its participation in the sensitive "core" of the network.

The review into Huawei, launched last week by the UK's National Cyber Security Centre, followed the announcement of US sanctions to block the sale of American chips to the company.

FIN MIN OFFICIAL No decision taken on setting up bad bank

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

The Finance Ministry on Friday said there is no decision taken on the proposal of setting up a Government sponsored bad bank to help ease pressure on lenders with regard to non-performing assets which are likely to witness a surge due to the COVID-19 crisis. Even the Economic Survey 2017 had proposed this idea, suggesting the creation of a bad bank called Public Sector Asset Rehabilitation Agency to help tide over the problem of stressed assets.

HRITHIK ROSHAN
So proud of you Pashmina. You are a special soul and an extraordinary talent. Your brightness and warmth lights up every room you walk into. Sometimes I wonder where you get that magic, but most times I thank god for you. We are lucky to have you and I'm sure the world is going to feel the same way very soon.

PANKAJ TRIPATHI
I am an actor. Our main aim is to help cinema and our performance reach out to maximum. Of course, the experience on big screen is different, people watch it together, in a community. On a small screen, you watch it alone. It's not like that theatres won't open. We have seen big things before and (theatres) have come out of it too.

KIRTI KULHARI
I am not really a birthday person. This lockdown has given me time to introspect and understand a lot of things and one thing that I have been contemplating on since quite sometime is self love and the lack of it in most of us. I hope this time makes some change in the way we look at ourselves and the way we love ourselves.

ADAH SHARMA
I hope we all come out of this as more grateful, kinder people who are conscious about the environment. Once we begin shooting, all of us will be responsible and take the necessary precautions ensuring safety of oneself and the people around us. From reading watermelons to slicing scripts, this lockdown has been quite productive.

WILL SMITH
Playing Genie in Aladdin was terrifying. Robin Williams did absolutely brilliant, memorable and nostalgic job in his film. So when I am looking at a role and especially something that has historic and nostalgic value, I ask myself, 'is there any meat left on the bone?'

SHORT CIRCUITS

IMMERSIVE 45 MINUTES

'I AM A BIT EXTRA'

Girl meets boy. The two fall in love...rewind. Girl meets boy and they set animals free at a pet market. The unusual, the quirky, the socially awkward and the ones who don't fit in were some of the characters that MEGHA RAMASWAMY found missing in the Indian film landscape. With What Are The Odds?, the director tried to plug in the gap and the audience responded wholeheartedly. Within a week of its debut on Netflix, it climbed to number 5 and then number 2 while spawning fan clubs across the country. In conversation with the director, who earlier made documentaries like Newborns, Bunny and The Last Music Shop, it is evident that she takes up projects that she completely identifies with. While discussing the film with SAIMI SATTAR, she pauses frequently, searching for the right word and wants to understand a nuance better before answering a question. Excerpts:

QThe film is trending on Netflix. Did you believe something like this was possible?
Not at all. The response has been amazing and the film has its own fan clubs and all that now. (Laughs, which even over the phone line sounds overwhelmed). But I don't belong to this world, so it is very new and exciting for me.

QWere you planning an OTT release or a theatrical one and shifted because of the pandemic?

I am the writer and director and the producer had not masked the fact from me that it would not be the most comfortable theatrical release. I was told that I would have to make peace with big theatre release in Taipei, China, Taiwan, Los Angeles film festivals. It was important to get a worldwide release and Netflix has an outreach of 180-190 countries.

QOTT has given a platform for different kinds of stories being told...

Of course, a culture of serious audience has come about because of these platforms. For example, a series like Wire or Mad Men happened because these platforms were available. It really nurtures your tastes as an audience. It makes them creative (pauses) and opinionated. The reaction is immediate, personal and relies on word of mouth. It isn't a rehearsed audience which says "see this" or "do that". It is very passionate and creates its own bright guys. That's the relevance of OTT, as of now. Earlier, we had to rely on the review of a critic and wonder "if we should we buy a ticket?" But now it is as simple as turning on the TV.

QAre we making an impact globally through films as we see younger directors finding the rounds of international festivals now?

Of course, there are younger directors like Rima Das. There is this burst of creativity. We aren't making films just with a Third World narrative based in villages to get to the festivals. There is Rhythm Jahnuve, Kabir Mehta and Kabir Singh Choudhury who are just killing it with their originality. They are ground breakers. I love their edgy content. It is no longer that only Satyajit Ray can go to Venice.

Moreover, while earlier we heavily relied on bigger festivals but now smaller ones are also picking up in terms of audience. Indian Film Festival of Los Angeles (IFFLA) is such great festival where the programmers are championing South Asian and Indian cinema.

QSo what you are saying is that we've broken stereotypes...

There are no stereotypes that are working. It is a rude term. We do not have the smugness or the right to call anything stereotype. All types of writing is based on people's experiences and as a culture we should be respectful towards that. It might be a stereotype for us but may not be for them. We need to be harsh on these terms in this changing world. This is a 90s terms but it doesn't matter any more.

QMost coming of age films about adolescents talk about falling in love but this film is different.

The protagonist has this great sense of discomfort and, at the same time, compensating confidence. And it is possible to be both at the same time. That is the innocence of childhood. When you are 14-15, you are hormonally and mentally scattered. We tried to say through the character of Vivek (played by Yashasvini, last seen in Delhi Crime) that young women can be this too. They don't have to walk in a certain way or wear spectacles. Anti-social people can wear a yellow coat and strut about like she does as she wants to be noticed. The kids watching this film are relating to this. This narrative is allowing the character to have a gamut of emotions.

QDid the idea of the film come from your own growing up years?

I did. I felt very alienated as a kid. I didn't know how to behave in a certain way. I am a single child and I am socially awkward. I try to overcompensate by saying something... (gives a nervous laugh) absolutely stupid. This made me a bit extra. I always wondered why there were no films about children like us. In films, 14-15-year-olds were falling in love and having romances. Romance kuch nahi hota when you are 14-15. It was like a series of embarrassing incidents one after the other where I was falling in one gutter hole after another. I felt that this teenage angst, rebellion stupidity and inventiveness had to be honoured. The beauty of the character is that she can be clumsy, vulnerable, a great companion, sensible and volatile—at the same time. All that makes her what she is. It is not a typical girl meets boy story... I didn't want to make that film. This starts off as a regular girl meets boy story and all that trope and we built on it. We've embraced the alien, the weird, the weirdly of it all. People finally understand that it is okay to be absurd. There is so much space for imagination and the world needs it to keep sane, little hopeful and happy.

QThe film employs magic realism. How does that help the storytelling?

It is not just this film. I've done it in other films too. Just that this one has been seen by a wider audience. I've made hybrid documentaries that still follow the rules of magic realism. On a bigger scale, I will always be doing this. There was everything—films about ghouls, crime—but not about young women. They are undermined and treated disrespectfully. It is almost like lets give them something dumb and populist. With What Are The Odds, we've proved them wrong.

QHow did you select the cast?

Very organically. I follow a lot of independent musicians. I saw Yashasvini playing a guitar, ukulele, is called, at some point. She was singing and the rest of the crew too agreed that we had our lead. She had done a side role. What is the technical term for it? I don't know the word. Supporting role, it is called. I don't know since I don't come from this world. I feel girls like Yashasvini should be leading films because the youth needs relatable women. They don't need only girls who look as if they've just stepped out of the salon. She is relatable, clumsy, angry, wears her heart and brain on her sleeve. She is also vivacious and just fits the role.

Karanvir brings the calm to the storm like the time he also becomes like her in the film. He does a very non head boy thing even though he comes across as an uptight guy. But the duo get each other. It is their little rebellion. It is strangely predictive of the times too. (Chuckles) They are freeing animals in the pet market. And if you remember, the virus began with a wet market.

QDid children being stuck at home during the lockdown power its success?

That's a very ruthlessly exploitative thing to say about a ruthless theme in the world and I would rather keep away from the question because I don't want people to think that it is working for us. What about those kids who do not have a TV and can't watch the film? If I am talking about children being happy about the break, it's not talking about a particular kind of children. But what about kids being beaten up at home?

QHow did Abhay Deol come on board?

We were introduced by a friend as he was looking to produce something. And we had this character, Val. The more we interacted with him, the more we thought he should be our Val. When he agreed to produce it, we asked if he would also act in the film. He said, "That's not necessary. Cast who you want." And we chimed, "We want to cast you." It is so gracious of him as he's there for 15 minutes. The ensemble cast also had geniuses like Sulbha Arya, a legend, who gave us so much love, understanding and blessings.

QYour banner is called Missfit films...

It is M-I-S-S-F-I-T. Miss fit. It is to honour young women who feel misplaced and we would like to hold space for them as they navigate through films. And we love to deal with narratives around younger people in particular. We hear all of them. Straight, queer, gay—everyone.

QOTT changed the way films are being viewed...

It has domesticated entertainment. It no longer entails a trip to multiplex. There are theatrical films and OTT films and there is room for both. A cinema watching culture needs to thrive with both. Roma was released directly on Netflix by one of the greatest directors in the world. Some of the best directors are doing shows for OTT. It is not the smaller platform any more.

QWhat were your learning experiences from your past films, Newborns, Bunny and The Last Music Store?

I was living in a very small world where I was very content but the gates have opened to write and direct series with the success of What Are The Odds? It gives me the privilege of affording enough support to other people in this system. So now I can run my company and hire young writers. Being independent means doing everything yourself.

QThe absence of censorship on OTT has been criticised due to explicit content. Do you agree?

There shouldn't be censorship. All kinds of content make a culture. For example, films by Carlos Reygadas have a lot of nudity but what would arthouse cinema be without his contribution? Censoring anything shows that there is something which is not right in country.

QWhat is Cause Effect?

It is a little outfit under Missfit. We try and do pro bono, campaign driven work with NGOs and raise funds. It is a community driven initiative where we ask people for money. I've done a campaign with Dr. Kailash Satyarthi for it too.

QFuture plans?

Up next is Reshma Aur Shera, few series and a book adaptation. I am working with Jeetu Mohandas about which I am very excited.

CONVERSATION 30 MINUTES

In the name of love

Actor SARGUN MEHTA tells AYUSHI SHARMA that there are a zillion reasons for people to feel there's not enough fondness in a relationship but if you both want to be together, you will find a way

QHow different was it to shoot the song, Toxic, at home during the lockdown as compared to the usual outdoor shoots?

Of course, it was really different to shoot at home. Usually during shoots, people are doing everything for you, you just have to focus on one thing that is acting. Here, I had to make sure my house is clean and everything is in its original place. Ravi (Dubey) and I were the art directors and the lightmen for each other. We were the ones styling ourselves, doing hair and makeup. Everything was upto us. We were figuring out what content to shoot, how to go about it, what would look nice. And if we were to do it the usual way, there would be a unit of 75 to 100 people managing everything for us. Here, we were down to three people—Ravi, my friend, who was helping us with the camera and I.

QWhat appealed you the most about your role in the song?
Frankly, when I heard the song, I instantly fell in love with it. I thought it was one of a kind. It's dark and simultaneously filled with love. It's about a relationship that has gone bad but we still wanted to give it a happy ending. We were like no matter what, your relationship does deserve a second chance or any amount of chances that you think are right. Ravi and I were going to share screen space after almost 10 years. It's not that we didn't get any offers but there was nothing worth it. This song just felt right.

QIt deals with the downsides of a relationship and its upsides. Did you relate to it?

I did relate to the song but not from the perspective of the relationship that Ravi and I share. This is not exactly what we are as a couple, which is why we were undecided initially. We wanted to discuss if we want to show this side of our relationship or not. At times during the shoot, Ravi got angry that this is not us. We tried to cut away from it emotionally as much as possible because we didn't want to get too absorbed in the story. But every relationship goes through this. It can go bad, you get possessive or there can be more distance or proximity between two people.

There are zillion reasons that people can feel there is not enough love in a relationship. But if both of you want to fix the problem and want to be together, you will find a way.

QHow was it shooting with your partner with whom your journey has been smooth?

Yes, the journey has been very smooth. I think this was the first time I didn't see Ravi only as an actor or as a co-actor. I saw him as a director too. On the first day, I had my take on everything or tried to figure out what we wanted to do. But later, I realised that too many people spoil the broth. So he took charge. Everything was in his head, he directed all of it. I didn't want to mess with it so I completely surrendered to him as an actor. I thought this is the right way to do it. I saw him as a director for the very first time and I absolutely loved him. I have always said that he's a great actor but I didn't know he was such a great director too.

QFrom small screen to Punjabi films and now album songs, how challenging was this switch?

I don't know if it was challenging. I remember there was a time when I had an offer to move to another medium but I felt that I wasn't ready for it. When I saw my first Punjabi film, I decided that this is what I wanted to do. Like this is home and I would be able to make my place here. It just felt like it was a calling. When you just sit down and think about what you really want in life, mysteriously the universe really works to get that for you. Whatever I demanded—the kind of projects I wanted to do, how I wanted to make my debut or with which actor—everything just fell into place. I don't think that I literally lifted a finger for all this to come together. I have seen a number of rejections as well. There were so many people telling me that I won't be able to make it. But I had faith in myself and the universe.

QDo you think the Punjabi film industry competes with other new age regional cinema?

It definitely does. Not only does it compete, I think in a lot of places it's even better. We are an evolving industry and when you are growing, you try to make a space for yourself. You try to make really good content and you are okay with doing a lot of experiments. That's where Punjabi cinema is, it's experimenting with content. I really think we are making some great films.

CAUSE 45 MINUTES

SCENE 1: CONNAUGHT PLACE, NEW DELHI

The iconic Delhi locale is a block with shoppers, diners and people who come in to savour the beauty of its colonnaded colonial architecture. On any given day chaat-walas, handicraft vendors and ice-cream carts jostle for space. But a sweep of the camera and we witness the silence of the centre of India's capital.

SCENE 2: PANDIT DEEN DAYAL UPADHYAYA JUNCTION, UTTAR PRADESH

The station, a gateway to East India, contains the largest railway marshalling yard in Asia. However, we see one of the busiest stations in the country without a soul in sight.

SCENE 3: GATEWAY OF INDIA, MUMBAI

On any given day, the most famous monument of the commercial capital is a place where neither the photographer nor the tourist gets a moment to enjoy the view in peace. But now, it stands silent just like the docks around it.

When the lockdown was announced on March 24, documentary filmmaker Bharat Bala realised that it was an important time in the history of the country and felt that it was his responsibility to capture it. "I knew that it is the most unprecedented thing unfolding in front of our eyes. It is in one way historical and in another, disturbing." People in the West, both America and Europe have filmed the time extensively. Bala says, "In the next five years, we would be flush with interesting documentaries from those places while India would have nothing."

He felt that the content from TV news was transitory in nature and there was "nothing emotional, deep or like a canvas which tells the story of what a lockdown is like. Where are these 1.3 million people?" he asks.

So the creator of some of the really iconic works like AR Rahman's Vande Mataram got down to work. Over a period of 55 days, a team of 117 people filmed extensively for 100 hours across 16 states to preserve the time for posterity.

Even under normal circumstances when permissions are hard to come by, during lockdown this must have been some feat. Anticipating the question, Bala himself pipes up and says, "How did we do it? It was a

CANVAS OF A LOCKDOWN

Documentary filmmaker BHARAT BALA tells SAIMI SATTAR that the reason behind making Uthenge Hum was to ensure that posterity does not forget what the nation and its people went through during the lockdown

A central core team sat in Mumbai while crews spread across the country. Footage started pouring in from early morning to late in the night as the core team was sitting at a studio in Mumbai and giving directions to the crews in Uttar Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Tamil Nadu, Kerala, Karnataka, Tamil Nadu, Maharashtra, Gujarat, Delhi, Kashmir, Assam and more. "It was a mammoth exercise. A cameraperson in Assam would send a WhatsApp video and then I would set the frame and check the lens. Doing it remotely was bizarre. Sometimes they would send footage and I would say, 'This is great but what about this?' And they would go there and shoot again."

Bala wanted to get a large picture from a variety of places. So the teams went out to places like the Mumbai's CST Station, which is like the Grand Central of New York, and could not even spot pigeons. Some of the busiest airports were stark, with not a soul in sight. "Highways, airports, schools, colleges, streets and bazaars everything has been documented for posterity so that we should not forget this time. We also saw the Ganges clean and pristine in Haridwar and Rishikesh which was captured in a cinematic way," he says.

Bala believes that it would be a record for all of us of what the nation and its people went through. "Otherwise you just look down your window and see apna gali mohalla to bring everything to a standstill." The idea behind the four-minute film, called Uthenge Hum, is to convey that no matter what happens we will rebound. "That is the resilience of the poorest mother of India. She might have lost her husband at night but the next day she would get up and feed her children," says he about the film which he feels is an honest effort.

The voice over by actor and the-atre person, Seema Biswas, in the film represents the migrant woman. "When she says Uthenge Hum it seems like a mother, who has her feet on the ground, is saying the words."

And we all hope so too... that we bounce back resilient, more compassionate and better versions of ourselves from these difficult times.

CELEB TALK 30 MINUTES

As the pandemic unfolds, people around the world have found themselves in isolation to help contain the outbreak. While women continue to hold up more than half of the sky, the increase in workload and the surge in domestic violence has made women more vulnerable even inside their homes. It is high time we break the stigma around reporting abuse.

Against this background, UNESCO, UNFPA, UNICEF, UN Women and the South Asia Women's (Madanjeet Singh Foundation) have joined hands to support director and actor Nandita Das in the production and launch of a short film — Listen to Her.

The film focuses on two important issues that many women are grappling with — an unprecedented increase in their workload and at times, being locked down with their abusers. It aims to inspire women to speak up and for us to add our voice to end the silence around these issues. The film also creates public awareness of helpline numbers so survivors can seek immediate assistance.

In India, the National Commission for Women has recorded more than a two-fold increase in the number of cases of gender-based violence during the lockdown period. But we find ways to help the migrant population, daily wagers, health workers on the frontline, we also need to find ways to support women who are battling within their homes. Society simply cannot thrive if half the population lives in fear of being abused, physically as well as mentally.

The battle within homes

Actor, director and social advocate NANDITA DAS's short film Listen to Her aims to inspire women to speak up around issues like domestic violence, which has surged during the lockdown impacting each other. The film is adding its voice to encourage women to speak and for us to listen. Creatively speaking, it was a challenge to shoot during the lockdown. But was worth the experiment," says Nandita.

"There will be a before and after COVID-19, and this should apply to gender equality too. There must be a redefinition of masculinities, where men share responsibilities with women in dignity, respect and non-violence. UNESCO, together with its sister UN Agencies, UNFPA, UNICEF, and UN Women, felt it was important to support Nandita in making this film possible," shares Eric Falt, director and representative, UNESCO, New Delhi.

Argentina Matavel, representative, UNFPA India says, "COVID-19 has forced us to re-visit some very important conversations about gender, be it violence, equal participation at home or simply pre-defined roles for men and women. Today it is the pandemic, tomorrow it may be something else. Gender equality is no longer a contested matter, it is both complex and simple. It is a societal transformation that will be a reality when each individual looks at the other with fresh eyes, as if looking into a mirror, and then, treats them with dignity and respect, recognising that their own humanity is only complete with the full existence of the other."

The film poignantly depicts the ironic realities of what it means for women to 'stay home, stay safe' amid the pandemic. "On one hand, women and girls are compelled to heavy lift the increased caregiving responsibilities, juggling with many different pieces of life and work. On the other, many of them encounter a surge in domestic violence reported not only in India but across the world. The complex interplay of gender within the larger socio-economic impact of the crisis must be factored into the response and recovery of the COVID-19 pandemic," says Dr Yasmin Ali Haque, representative, UNICEF India.

Nishtha Satyam, deputy representative, UN Women India, shares, "The pandemic has challenged all of us to know about the dynamics of economics and power, both inside the home and outside. While many of us have had the privilege of home, a safe space, many women have long dreaded the four walls of home, a private chamber that reminds them of the horror and terror of physical, emotional and psychological abuse. Across the world, the dread now lies exposed along with the inescapability of it."

Daringly different

Actor JYOTHIKA says that there are several layers to her character in her recently released film, PonMagal Vandhal, which deals with a pertinent social message

◆ Tell us something about your next film PonMagal Vandhal.
It is a thriller with a difference. You can also call it a contemporary courtroom drama. I am very close to the subject which has been tackled in the film by director, J J Frederick, who has also written it. The film has a very pertinent social message with which each one of us can relate to instantly. It is a film which will make every woman proud.

◆ You have shared screen with five different actors who are also directors. How was the experience?
I have been lucky that I got an opportunity to work with five actors who are also good directors, including K Parthiepan, Thiagarajan, Pandiarajan, Pratap Potthan and K Bhagyaraj. It was Frederick's vision and idea to cast five different actors who are also directors. It was a learning experience for me, I learnt how they prepared their dialogues and delivered them clearly with precision and clarity.

◆ You play a lawyer in the film. To put it in a context, at home, are you a lawyer or a judge?
At home, I am never a lawyer because I am always a judge. If you compare me with my earlier films, you will realise that I have really come out of my shell. I am now under the blue sky. Today, I can do any kind of role. I am blessed that I am being approached by many directors with subjects that are daringly different.

◆ How difficult was it to act with directors like Parthiepan and K Bhagyaraj?
It was a big challenge to deliver my dialogues in front of Parthiepan because they were lengthy and the film is basically a courtroom drama. But thankfully, I was prepared as I was given the script three months ago. It is to the credit of director Frederick that he filmed four single shots each of five minutes. You would not believe that he, who is in his 20s, has not only written the subject well but also made his debut with this film. In the first narration itself, I was hooked to the subject and said yes to it. It has had the situation been different, it would have been a joy to see its release in theatres and the reaction of the audience. OTT release is a big celebration as filmmakers will be able to reach as many as 200 countries. However, it is not a permanent solution, it will only help for the time being. If we wait to release PonMagal Vandhal in theatres, there is a long queue. It will take at least a year for the hero-oriented films to release, the heroine-oriented ones will get their chance only after two years.

◆ Why do you prefer to work only in your home productions?
After 36 Vayathinile, I have mostly acted in my home productions because it allows me to be in my comfort zone. It is important now as I have to strike a balance between my career, home and kids. Also, when you do not know how the audience is going to respond to your film, it is better to invest in your own film.

◆ You seem to opt to act under new directors...
Working with newcomers is good as they do not follow the typical pattern. They belong to a new genre and their working process is very different from mine. If I work only with the same directors, I may end up becoming stagnant as an actor. The character of Venba that I play in PonMagal Vandhal is the most challenging that I have ever played in my career, perhaps because of the direction.

◆ Are you open to act in web series in the near future?
I am not sure. Nothing in my life, including acting in films, had been planned till today. I feel good cinema should live. If I don't get good offers in films, who knows, I may take up acting in web series too.

◆ How keen are you on entering politics?
Like my sister Nagma, I don't want to take up politics because I believe that you can do far greater work for the masses even if you are not in politics. Every actor has a social responsibility and should not just depend on the government.
