Public transport soon: Gadkari Most wanted Hizbul

Govt formulating guidelines adhering to social distancing norms

The end of the extended lockdown has began to look like a possibility with the Centre on Wednesday disclosing that road public transport services may resume soon.

The Government is formulating guidelines for safe usage of different transport modes adhering to social distancing norms to check the spread of coronavirus.

While addressing members of Bus and Car Operators Confederation of India, Union Transport Minister Nitin Gadkari said, "The Government will soon make efforts to start bus services on the basis of certain guidelines. We need to start transport at some level, because people are stranded in several places."

Gadkari said the opening of transport and highways will go a long way in instilling confidence among the public and cautioned towards maintaining social distancing and adopting all safety measures like hand wash, sanitising, face masks, etc, while operating buses and cars.

On demand of a bailout for passenger transport industry, Gadkari said the Government is fully aware of their problems and will fully support them to mitigate their issues. He said he is in regular touch with Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman, who are working overtime to these difficult days of Covid-19 pandemic.

The Minister also asked investors and the industry to convert the coronavirusinduced crisis into an opportunity by occupying larger global market.

"Economy is facing crisis due to coronavirus outbreak... We should treat it as blessing in disguise as no one wants to deal with China. Japan's Prime Minister is facilitating industry there to do investment out of China... It is a chance to boost Indian economy," the Minister He said Indian industry should grasp this opportunity to invite those foreign companies to invest in them in India. He expressed confidence that the country and its industry will together win both the battles — the one with coronavirus, and the one with economic slowdown.

Responding to concerns uplift the economy during raised by the operators, the Members of the confederation made suggestions for improving the condition of public transport which included extending interest payment exemptions, restarting public transport, extending age life limit, deferring state taxes, extending Micro, Small & Medium Enterprises (MSME) benefits, extending insurance policy validity, etc.

The Minister also said the insurance sector should come forward to help as it has benefitted due to less accidents during the lockdown. He further said work on many highway projects has resumed.

Govt rejects claim but app team in touch with him to plug loopholes

RAJESH KUMAR NEW DELHI

Serious concern about data security breach of Aarogya Setu App was raised after a French hacker Robert Baptiste, who goes by Elliot Alderson on Twitter claimed a potential security issue in the app prompting the Government to issue clarification that there was no security vulnerability in the contact tracing app.

Responding to clarification, Alderson tweeted, "I will come back to you tomorrow. The challenge by the hacker has put the Government machinery in a fix and given ammunitions to the Opposition parties amid Covid lockdown. The app with about 9.08 crore users as of now has been the most downloaded app on Play Store. It did not take long for the tweet to catch the eve of Aarogya Setu App team which contacted Alderson shortly and tried to fix the loopholes. Congress leader Rahul Gandhi, the Software Freedom Law Centre, India (SFLC.in) and the Internet Freedom Foundation (IFF), have raised question on Aarogya Setu App. After Alderson's tweet, several people have expressed privacy and security concerns over the app, which has been made mandatory for all public and private sector employees, as well as those in coronavirus containment areas. His tweets created a flutter on Twitter, with several people asking him questions about the alleged security issue. One Twitter user asked if Alderson believed the issue was intentional and done by design, to which he replied in the affirmative.

Soon after the Modi Government rejected the claim, Alderson tweeted that five peounwell at the Army headquarters; one infected people at the Indian Parliament and three infected at the home office. "Basically, I was able to see if someone was sick at the PMO or the Indian Parliament. I was able to see if someone was sick in a specific house if I wanted," he tweeted. Meanwhile, rejecting charges by the Opposition that the Aarogya Setu app breaches privacy, Union IT Minister Ravi Shankar Prasad has asserted that the platform is "absolutely robust, safe and secure" in terms of privacy. This is a technological invention of India — Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology, our scientists, NIC Niti Aayog and some private (entities) — whereby it is a perfectly accountable platform to help in the fight against Covid-19." Prasad said.

About 10,000 migrant workers from Dhanbad in Jharkhand were caught in a hapless situation in Karnataka when the State Government cancelled three trains that were to carry them back to their native places on Wednesday. The Karnataka Government decided to stop them from going back after a meeting between Chief Minister BS Yediyurappa and property builders a day before.

The logic of "reviving economy" in the State seemed to have prevailed over the BJP Government in cancelling the special trains, which was strongly criticised by the Opposition Congress. The State and parcel of India and Sangh volunteers helped them during the lockdown without any discrimination, which was complimented by various Muslim community leaders, RSS joint general secretary Dattatreya Hosabale said on Wednesday.

Hosabale, who was interacting online with foreign media, rejected as "baseless and far from reality" the perception about the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS) being "anti-Muslim".

He said Sangh was in touch with Muslim leaders and "helped the people from the community across the country including at Shaheen Bagh in New Delhi" during the coronavirus-induced lockdown.

Shaheen Bagh was the centre of a prolonged protest against the Citizenship Amendment Act, which critics have alleged was aimed at targeting the Muslim community.

Hosabale also echoed RSS chief Mohan Bhagwat's remarks to the Tablighi Jamaat row that an entire community cannot be held responsible for the mistake

"Many Muslim communileaders have written to Bhagwatji welcoming his stand and thanking him," Hosabale claimed. There has been criticism from activists in Gulf and other countries over allegations that members of Muslim community were facing harassment after a number of people who had attended a Tablighi Jamaat congregation in Delhi tested positive for coronavirus. India has rejected it as propaganda by vested interests.

"RSS as an organisation has been in touch wit Muslim community leaders. They are part and parcel of this nation. The service done by RSS workers during the lockdown is a testimony of Hindu society, which looks at all communities including Muslims as their brothers," Hosabale said.

UP Govt hikes liquor prices, hopes to earn ₹2,350 cr revenue

Government on Wednesday decided to increase liquor prices from ₹5 to ₹400 per bottle depending on its size and category of the drink.

The decision to increase the prices was taken at a Cabinet meeting chaired by Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath, said state Finance Minister Suresh Khanna, adding the hike is likely to fetch a revenue of ₹2,350 crore for the state in fiscal 2020-21.

Giving details of increase in prices of liquors of various categories, Khann said prices of country-made liquors have been increased by ₹5 per bottle.

"A bottle available for ₹65 will now be available at ₹70. Similarly, a bottle of countrymade liquor costing ₹75 will now be available at ₹80," Khanna said.

As far as prices of Indiamade foreign liquors (IMFL) are concerned, in the economy class, the price of a 180 ml-bottle has been increased by ₹10 while a bottle in the range of 180 ml to 500 ml will see a hike of ₹20, Khanna said.

The price of an IMFL bottle above 500 ml capacity will undergo an increase of ₹30, he said, adding the medium category liquors too would undergo similar price hike.

As far as regular and premium classes of IMFLs are concerned, the minister said, the prices of 180 ml bottles have been increased by ₹20, 180 ml to 500 ml bottles by ₹30 and for bottles above 500 ml by ₹50.

The imported liquor will see a hike of ₹100 for a 180 ml bottle, ₹200 for a bottle in the range of 180 ml to 500 ml and ₹400 for a bottle which is above 500 ml capacity.

These hiked prices will come into effect from midnight. "The hike is likely to earn a revenue of ₹2,350 crore for the State Government," said also said, "Following the imposition of nationwide lockdown, the sale of liquor in the state also came to a halt. People who could not control and check their food habits resorted to buying illicit liquor, when they could not get normal liquor. As a result of this, there were reports of illicit liquor being made on a large scale in the villages."

The minister added that over 80,000 litres of illicit liquor were seized till May 4, while 499 illicit liquor manufacturing units were busted in the state. More than 3,500 FIRs were registered and nearly 3,600 persons were arrested in this connection".

Khanna said the situation took a ugly turn, when three freinds consumed sanitiser, when they did not get liquor.

"This incident took place in Ghaziabad where a case in this regard has been registered at Modinagar police station. Sanitisers have alcohol. In Kanpur too, some persons died after consuming illicit liquor,'

Yogi Govt to set up new agency for investment. employment

Lucknow: The Yogi Adityanath Government is planning to set up a new investment promotion and facilitation agency that will focus on bringing new investments and creating employment.

Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath will head the new agency and the ministers of industrial development and MSME will be the vice-chairmen of the same.

According to Alok Kumar, Principal Secretary industrial development, a proposal to this effect had been received from 'Invest India', a body of the Central Government, and the new agency was based on this.

Experts from various fields will be members of the agency that will work towards bringing in fresh investments and ensuring generation of employment. The State Government has already assured the migrant workers who have returned to Uttar Pradesh form other states that they will be provided employment opportunities here. IANS

The petition relying on news reports states that stranded migrant workers across the State have expressed their desire to return home. Further, on May 5 members of the Union visited the Bangalore International Exhibition of the workers. The workers expressed that they wished to return to their home States and had walked over 50 km to arrive here.

Yediyurappa had stated after his meeting with the builders on Tuesday that pandemic was in control and travel by workers was unnecessary as construction and industrial activities have restarted in the state.

Naikoo's killing, close on the heels of sacrifice of eight security personnel including a commanding officer of 21 Rashtriya Rifles, is set to boost the morale of the security forces in the Valley.

According to official sources, "Riyaz Naikoo was trapped by the security forces after receiving credible inputs about his presence in his native village of Beighpora late on Tuesday evening. In the past, Naikoo had managed to give slip to security forces on numerous occasions but this time he ran out of his luck. Instead of conducting the operations in the dead of the night, the security forces waited for the first light and reportedly blasted the house where Naikoo was hiding. Later, they recovered his dead body from the debris of the house and confirmed his elimination after verifying his identity. The security forces also refused to hand over his dead body to his familv members to contain mass assembly of locals in the area.

According to police records, Rivaz Naikoo took over the command of Hizbul Mujahideen in the Valley after Zakir Musa, the successor to the group's commander Burhan Wani, left to form his own terror group Ansar Ghazwat-ul-Hind, which is affiliated with Al-Qaeda in 2017.

Before joining the ranks of terror outfit, Naikoo was working as a Mathematics teacher in a local school. During sporadic protests of 2010, Naikoo was picked up by the security forces for indulging in incidents of stone-pelting. After he was released in 2012, he started working as over ground worker and gradually become one of the key members of the Burhan Wani's group. He was tech-savvy and was involved in a series of incidents of attacks on security forces, truck drivers, brick kiln workers and civilians. In September 2018, Naikoo along with his cadre had reportedly kidnapped family members of police officers.

Later, the kidnapped relatives were exchanged in a "swap" with his detained father.

Police spokesman said, "Naikoo had been continuously making audio and video clips and putting up on social media to motivate vouth to join militancy and went on recruiting new boys". He was responsible for a large number of innocent youths getting into militant ranks and indulging in serious violence against local population and security forces, added police spokesman.

"He was a mastermind behind the revival of HM outfit in Jammu & Kashmir. He also released videos / audios on number of occasions carrying pro-Pakistan and separatist propaganda," said police state-

"He looted orchard owners and farmers to collect funds for his outfit. He has also been collecting booty from illicit cultivation of opium and 'bhang' in South Kashmir. His outfit also figured in narco trade case in Jammu where a huge sum of sale proceeds was transferred to one of his contacts," the police statement added.

STAFF REPORTER ■ NEW DELHI

The Delhi Police on Wednesday said that they have arrested the admin of the Instagram group— Bois Locker Room— which was being used to share obscene messages and morphed pictures of underaged girls on the social media site. Meanwhile, Police said that they have identified 27 people of the group and 15 of them have been questioned so far. Police also said that the group, are being quizzed at their homes in the presence of their parents and members of NGOs. According to a senior police official, the 18-year-old juveniles, who are part of the admin of the group appeared for his class 12 board examinations this year. "He is a student of a school in Delhi-NCR.

Four group members — above 18 years - have joined the probe on Wednesday," he said.

On Monday, a juvenile, who was also a group member, was apprehended. Ten members, including minors, of the Instagram group have also been identified, police said. The minor was also quizzed and the devices used to engage in the offensive and vulgar communication have been seized from the group members.

"The CyPAD unit has sought information about the alleged group and it's members from Instagram. Their reply is awaited. The devices of the identified members of the group have been seized and sent for forensic analysis," said Anil Mittal, Additional Public Relation Officer of Delhi Police.

The role of other group members is also being ascertained. The identified members, who are major, are being examined. The minor members of the group are being dealt with as per the provisions of Juvenile Justice Act," said

However, Instagram had earlier said it takes the issue "very seriously" and does not allow such behaviour. It had said the objectionable content featuring minor girls was removed from the platform as soon as it was made aware of it.

Twitter handle launched to address Covid-related queries

STAFF REPORTER ■ NEW DELHI

As one-stop solution for all the Covid-19 related queries, complaints and to ensure authentic information about the disease, the Delhi Government on Wednesday launched a Twitter handle @DelhiVsCorona.

Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal has also set up a team of representatives who will keep a tab on the live status of the situation at the Delhi Government hospitals where treatments of Covid-19 patients are going on and provide authentic information.

"This team will be in touch with the patients and the doctors on a regular basis and ensure a speedy solution to their issues. The Twitter handle will be a one-stop solution of all the Covid-19 related queries and complaints raised by the citizens," the government said in a statement.

In the fight against Covid-19, considering communication and authentic information is the key, the initiative was launched by the Government. "Twitter users can tag @DelhiVsCorona and tweet their queries regarding ration, checkups, hospital-related queries or any other Covid-19 related queries," it said.

The team of representatives will ensure swift and speedy action on the issues related to Covid-19 treatment asked on Twitter, it said, adding that this will help to reduce panic and anxiety amongst the citizens of

However, within a period of last one and a half month, the Gurugram police had registered 73 cases for liquor smuggling or bootlegging and 71 accused were arrested. Also, the police had seized 10,948 bottles of country liquor, 4063 beer bottles.

However, the State has also suffered a massive loss of around ₹400 crore per month due to closure of liquor vends in the state. Apart from this Gurugram has so far reported 104 positive cases including 17 fresh cases on Wednesday in which 10 cases are linked from Azadpur sabzi mandi, New Delhi, 4 from Dundahera village and 3 from Madaan hospital.

eader of Opposition in the LDelhi Legislative Assembly Ramvir Singh Bidhuri has suggested the Government to start home delivery of liquor by creating a special website in view of the increasing cases of coronavirus

In a letter written to Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal on Wednesday, Bidhuri said that witnessing heavy rush and lathi charge by the police at the liquor shops, the government should start a special website on which people can book and buy liquor online.

Demanding immediate withdrawal of increased prices on petrol and diesel in the capital, he said the move is antiporters and anti-businessmen.

Bidhuri said that till the formation of Kejriwal's gov-ernment in Delhi, VAT on petrol was 20 paisa per rupee, while on diesel VAT was 12.5 paise per rupee but the Kejriwal Government has now increased the VAT rate on both petrol at one rupee.

"This means that the Kejriwal Government has increased the VAT rate on petrol from 20 to 30 per cent (one and half times) and on diesel from 12.5 to 30 per cent (about two and a half times) in its five-six years rule. There has not been such a huge increase in VAT on petrol- and diesel in any state of the country," he

Cong flays Centre for petrol-diesel price hike

The Congress on Wednesday slammed the Centre for increasing the prices on petrol and diesel. Terming the rise in fuel prices as unfair, the party demanded that the Government immediately roll back the increased prices. Congress leaders Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka Gandhi said that at a time when the fight against coronavirus is causing economic hardships to all, the Government has chosen to increase fuel prices instead of reducing them.

"The ongoing battle with

Congress general secre tary Priyanka Gandhi Vadra was also unsparing in her attack against the Government over its decision to hike excise duty on petrol and diesel. In a series of tweets, Priyanka said that the government was busy filling its coffers at a time when the benefit of low crude oil prices should have been transferred to the consumers.

"The people should benefit from the low crude oil prices. But the BJP Government repeatedly hikes former Finance minister P Chidambaram too voiced concern and suggested the Centre must borrow to meet deficits and not impose higher tax burdens when economic activity has ground to a halt amid the coronavirus.

"New or higher taxes are justified only when the economy is booming. Tax burdens on the middle class and poor is actually taxing distress. Governments should give money to the people in times of money from the people," Chidambaram tweeted.

Congress chief spokesman Randeep Singh Surjewala at AICC Press video conference said the entire nation and its 130 crore people are fighting the Corona pandemic and the poor migrant labourers and workers, the shopkeepers, the farmers, the small and medium businesses are virtually penny less, they are struggling for every single Rupee, yet, this draconian Government is fleecing 130 crore Indians by raising insurmountable taxes on petrol and

PNS NEW DELHI

Civil society groups have Curged Prime Minister Narendra Modi to ensure that the Railways do not charge for tickets on the special trains being run to transport migrant workers back to their homes lockdown.

They said all travel must be free and food expenses should be borne by the state.

The civil society organisations, who have come together to form 'National Campaign for Migrant Workers', demanded that the migrant workers returning home be provided an ex-gratia of ₹7,000 in lieu of the wages lost due of the lockdown.

They also appealed to the ministry of home affairs to issue directions to withdraw all the mass FIRs against the migrant Bandra (Mumbai), Hyderabad where the workers protested to allowed to be go home. "The protests were an expression of genuine distress," said the

Ministry's panel on infrastructure OK's construction of three seaplane airports

ARCHANA JYOTI NEW DELHI

The Union Environment Ministry's Expert Appraisal Committee (EAC) on infrastructure has cleared terms of reference (ToR) for three seaplane airports at the Brahmaputra riverfront in Guwahati and at the Statue of Unity and Shatruniay Dam, both in Gujarat. The ToRs are guidelines for conducting environmental studies of projects after which it is considered for clearance by the panel.

The EAC in its meeting held through video-conferencing in April noted that the water aerodromes aims to boost tourism near Statue of Unity and Sardar Sarovar Dam, Gujarat along with terminal building on the land side and allied facilities. Both projects are planned in the land provided by the State Civil Aviation Department.

The ₹12.5 crore proposed project is located on Panchmukhi Lake (Lake-3) of Sardar Sarovar Dam at Limdi Village in Narmada District, Gujarat. Over 2,046 sqm land will be acquired for the proposed project.

The development of Water Aerodrome has been proposed at Shatrunjay Dam, Village vadal in District Bhavbnagar by Civil Aviation Gujarat Department to be spread over 0.40 hectares of area. The proposed project is planned in the area provided by the Narmada Water Resource Department, Partly Private land in the pro-noted the EAC.

Similarly, the development of water aerodrome has been proposed at Guwahati Riverfront (Bramhaputra River), Guwahati, Assam by the State Transport Department.

The proposed terminal will be spread over the plot area of 0.42 Hectares.

Considering that the water aerodrome are just emerging in the country as a new mode of transport involving sea/river fronts and its likely impacts on water, air and aquatic biodiversity including flora and fauna, the EAC followed the appraisal process as is being done in the case of airports. The project proponents also informed the EAC that water aerodrome were primarily on water, intended to be used either wholly or in part for the arrival, departure and movement of seaplanes, and any building and equipment on ground or water.

Sea plane operation from coastal/ river/ canal as well as terrestrial water bodies will extend the connectivity to those areas where there is no land-based airport.

The high capital investment for airside infrastructure development required in land-based airport can be avoided. Thus, there is a necessity to establish water aerodromes for seaplane operations, argued the project proponents.

After discussion with members, the EAC cleared ToRs for the three projects asking their proponents to take clearance from the National Board for Wild Life (NBWL) in case near to the sanctuary as well as impact of aerodrome on flow characteristics during normal and flood conditions by modelling study among other required clear-

Minister Pramod Sawant has ordered the formation of a coordination committee of officials from the state government agencies and the ASI, for streamlining maintenance and restoration work at the Church complex.

The Bom Jesus Basilica is home to the mortal remains of Spanish saint St Francis Xavier, who was also associated with recommending the Inquisition in Goa. Born in Navarro village in Spain's Basque region, Francis Xavier is regarded as the patron saint of Goa by the state's Catholics, who account for around 26 per cent of the state's 1.5 million population.

The Basilica is also recogiised as an UNESCO world heritage site and is one of the most prominent places on the itineraries of the several million tourists and devotees who visit the state annually.

Quoting a complaint made the church authorities, Malik said that the Basilica is in a general state of disrepair and neglect.

In his letter, Malik also urged the Union Minister to direct the ASI to "pull up their socks to complete all the restoration works in a timebound manner and if possible. before the monsoon arrives in

₹1,610-crore relief for | Corona cases lockdown-hit in K'taka

Bengaluru: To bring early relief to farmers, flower growers, washermen, barbers, auto-rickshaw and taxi drivers - some of the worst-affected by the Covid-19 induced lockdown, the Karnataka Government on Wednesday announced a Rs 1,610 crore package.

"The state government will provide Rs 1,610 crore compensation/benefit to the people who are in distress due to the lockdown since March 25 and extended till May 17 to contain the coronavirus spread," Chief Minister B.S. Yediyurappa told reporters here.

Among the beneficiaries of the package are farmers and growers flowers, vegetables and fruits, washermen, barbers, auto-rickshaw and taxi drivers who all suffered huge losses due to the prolonged lockdown, which has been extended twice since April 15 and May 4.

"As growers have destroyed their flowers in 11,687 hectares across the state due to lack of demand during the lockdown, Rs 25,000 compensation per hectare will be given to those who suffered crop loss to the extent of 1 hectare," said Yediyurappa.

A separate relief package will soon be announced for farmers and growers of vegetables and fruits, as they too suffered huge amount of losses due to the lockdown, he

Similarly, service professionals like 2,30,000 barbers and 60,000 washermen (dhobis) in urban and rural areas, who too have been affected by the lockdown, will be given one-time compensation of Rs 5,000 each.

About 7,75,000 auto-rickshaw and taxi drivers across the state, who also lost income due to lockdown, will be given one-time compensation of Rs 5,000 each.

"As micro, small and medium enterprises (MSMEs) also reeled under production loss over the last 42 days and will take time to revive, monthly fixed charges on their electricity bills will be waived for two months since April," said Yediyurappa.

Payment of fixed charges on power bills of large industries will also be deferred without penalty and interest for two months since April.

"Incentive and concessions will be given to consumers paying bills in the stipulated time. Reduction will be given on interest on delayed on payment and adequate time for paying balance bill payment in installments," said the Chief

— PAPER WITH PASSION — Creation to preservation

Millions of Indians are out of work. We must not let them get out of hope as well. It's time for some big-bang reforms survey by an independent economic think-tank, the Centre for Monitoring Indian Economy (CMIE), for the week ended May 3 has estimated that unemployment rate in India surged to a staggering 27.11, up from just 8.7 per cent in early March. Unemployment has always been a slow-burn crisis in India but what's worrying is an urban flare-up ever since the lockdown. According to the latest CMIE data, unemployment rate was the highest in urban areas, which include a majority of the red zones. As against 26.16 per cent for rural areas, it stood at 29.22 per cent in urban India. In the previous week ended April 26, the urban unemployment rate had stood at 21.45 per cent and the rural unemployment rate at 20.88 per cent. The impact of the shutdown on small businesses and manufacturing facilities has been brutal. Several previously viable, even profitable businesses have been laid low due to the COVID-19 shutdown. And with it, all hopes and dreams of not just thousands of entrepreneurs but also accountants, clerks, secretaries and more have been shattered. Companies have had to slash wage bills significantly in order to ride out the storm and "orders" to pay salaries cannot possibly be met. We understand that several unions have approached the courts, asking them to order companies to pay up. Firms, too, have retaliated saying that they cannot possibly pay and that there needs to be a sense of rationality here. It is true that some companies have used the pandemic as an excuse to shut down parts of their business or to get rid of recalcitrant employees and are just shrugging their shoulders. That said, unions should also realise that several firms have seen their cash flows drop to zero and normal salary payouts to all employees will be impossible. Instead of fighting fruitless cases, which will only succeed in shutting down companies, unions need to rally the troops and raise money from their employed members to support those who are jobless. Of course, only good ones do that and in India, unions have been in a political morass for decades.

It must be agreed that we had no other option than go for a complete shutdown in a bid to contain the disease. But this does not absolve the Government. When the scale of disruption has been such that unemployment is becoming the norm, it calls upon the Government to intervene and respond with all the resources it has at hand to alleviate distress. Statements by the Chief Economic Advisor KV Subramanian, saying that there will be "no free lunch" for a stimulus, are extremely unhelpful and insensitive. Further, the situation conveys that this Government is not getting the correct advice. Maybe these words were made in response to Nobel Prize-winning economist Abhijit Banerjee's comments on a call with Congress leader Rahul Gandhi, where he had argued for a massive stimulus. But prima facie, it is impossible to see what choice the Government has if the economy is to revive. It will be expensive and will mean the suspension of some big-ticket projects and investments. Possibly even a pay cut for the Government itself. But if revenues are to rise again, the Government has to spend instead of doing public relations exercises around "Make in India." The need is to sustain incomes and that calls upon the Government to save the weakened parts of the economy. The need for a fiscal package cannot be denied. This is the start of the seventh year of the Narendra Modi Government and the COVID pandemic cannot be blamed on prior actions. India has a once in a lifetime opportunity to attract investors and make some truly dramatic reforms. We are letting that opportunity as well as any job of preserving jobs slip through our fingers. We cannot allow that to happen. If for nothing else, at least for the sake of the millions who are now unemployed.

Felu*da* to the rescue

CSIR has developed a testing strip, named after Satyajit Ray's famous sleuth, to detect COVID-19 in minutes

ilmmaker and author Satyajit Ray created the sharp-witted, well-read, analytical and intellectual sleuth Feluda as a homegrown counterpart to the great detectives in world literature. Feluda wasn't superhuman or a geek, wasn't blessed with great tools of gimmickry but was a simpleton with a deductive mind, one which we could relate to. He was the original Bengali, who simply because of his rootedness became a pan-Indian favourite. too. And now he seems to have inspired a testing kit tool in our fight against COVID-19. Two Bengal scientists at the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR) have developed a rapid testing strip named after him, which is paper-based, affordable and reliable for early detection. In conjunction with Tata Sons, CSIR is gearing up for commercial production for it to be ready for use by the end of this month. Making the best use of the new CRISPR technology for mapping the genomic sequence of the novel Coronavirus and paper strip chemistry, the testing kit can read a visible signal that can be rapidly assessed to establish the presence of viral infection in a sample. Unlike the antibody-based rapid test currently being used by the Government for surveillance in hotspots and containment zones, the IGIB diagnostic kit relies on DNAprotein interaction for successful diagnosis. The strip basically will change colour, just like a pregnancy strip does. What's more, the results will be available in minutes. Besides, there's no need for any specialisation, the test can be carried out in a simple pathological lab. While the now extant RT-PCR test kits are priced at ₹4,500, the Feluda test strip would cost only ₹500 per test. Compared to the RT-PCR test for COVID-19, which takes more than a day to yield results, Feluda results will be out in an hour, out of which 45 minutes would be just for the testing preparations. This will facilitate large-scale sampling, which undoubtedly is much needed. Currently, India is testing less than one person per 1,000 people (0.76 to be precise). The scientists prefer saliva over blood because it is easy to collect even from an elderly patient.

With nations across the world caught in a race against time to develop a vaccine for the deadly Coronavirus, India, too, has been scurrying to build its own arsenal to fight it. From laboratories coming up with promising ideas to fasttracking the development of a vaccine and the development of rapid testing kits by a lab in Pune, the Corona crisis may well change science for good. What is most required though is developing a respect for scientific temperament, holding talent and funding research in the country. If a virus assault of three months could prod home-grown scientists to find their own solutions, imagine what sustained encouragement and funding of R&D could do? We should keep our best scientific minds home in a post-COVID world to build our own sufficiencies. And begin to collect our own patents rather than in collaboration with others.

With changing transnational contours of the app economy, where the jurisdictional functionality of service providers is questionable and operates in clouds, India needs to strengthen data laws

he Government's directive to all public and private sector employees to install the Aarogya Setu app in their mobile phones has raised eyebrows in some quarters. But the fact is that a post-COVID world is going to be equated with a digital society. It will be the new normal, where the use of diverse and converged digital technologies will help people maintain social distancing and facilitate secured living in an age of pandemic.

The Aarogya Setu app is designed to keep the people informed about the risk of them being infected with Coronavirus. Self-assessment begins with a request for information such as gender, full name, age, countries travelled to in the last 30 days and professional details. The app, which makes the use of GPS to get the user's location, discovers other available applications near his/her device using bluetooth. By cross-referencing the location details with that of Indian Council of Medical Research (ICMR)'s database and by collecting records of nearby users, it does a risk assessment and returns with a colour-coded message. It appears that the app continuously collects the user's data and uploads them to a Government server along with a DiD, which is a unique digital id. Data in the server is anonymised in such a manner that personalised features are suppressed without affecting the statistical features of the data

The fact that devices exchange information, continuously collect location data of registered users and maintain a record of the places where they may have come in contact with other people has given rise to a sense of distrust among the people. Hence, the controversy. Arguments can be drawn into two fields: One of data privacy and the other on surveillance. While debate around the Aarogya Setu app is unsubstantiated and unfounded, questions related to data privacy will very much be a talking point in a post-COVID society.

Data is now widely being treated as the new "oil", "gold" and is a valuable resource from the perspective of society, economy, polity, privacy and human progress. For a society to make progress from an informa-tion age to a knowledgeable, digital world (data-driven society), the effective use of data and information, while qualifying with privacy parameters, will be a cornerstone of public discourse. Privacy is as old as mankind and has a close connection with human dignity, freedom and independence of an individual. Maintaining privacy will be lenging in an age ot intormed soci ety. Data privacy is a necessity so as to preserve and protect personal information that is collected by organisations. The fear of it being used by a third party is always

Data privacy assumes significance as people live with the app economy for the entire day, every day and every hour. Digital citizens, while accessing various apps, give in to the consent clause and in reciprocation forfeit intimate details to data companies by accepting the fine print of services that they receive through the app. Further, several devices often track our movements, preferences and any information they can mine from our digital existence. This without the consent of the user.

Let us be clear at this stage that collecting data, however private it may be, with the user's consent, implicit or explicit, for any purpose and using it for data analytics in anonymised form is not a breach of privacy. Of course, unless the data is personalised and shared with other platforms or a third party. This seemingly is not the case with the Aarogya Setu app at present.

The nation has just seen that efforts to curb the rapid spread of the Corona pandemic can be seriously affected due to contact tracing. This can be minimised with the help of data-driven technology that collects contact history of individuals. Undoubtedly, contact history is private but is used for a ensures just that and is a proof that India is growing to be a digitally matured State.

Post the COVID pandemic, India will witness a rise in app-driven socio-economic activities. Every aspect of the digital society — spanning from

COLLECTION OF DATA, PRIVATE OR OTHERWISE, IS INEVITABLE AND UNAVOIDABLE IN A DATA-INTENSIVE ALGORITHMICALLY

SOCIETY. AT THE SAME TIME, THE USE OF DATA RESPONSIBLY WHILE ALSO PRESERVING PRIVACY SHOULD BE THE ORDER

e-commerce, digital marketing and learning, digital art and culture, digital banking and transactions, social networking and social media, to digital Government interventions will spread ominously.

Collection of data, private or otherwise, is inevitable and unavoidable in a data-intensive and algorithmically governed society. At the same time, the use of data responsibly while also preserving privacy should be the order of the day.

This brings us to an important question: Is India prepared to regulate data laws in the cyberspace? Further, are the citizens digitally educated to understand the trade-off between "comfort" and "luxury" while using digital technologies or when they share their data for a purpose? Are they aware of the privacy concerns arising thereof? These questions need to be addressed by digital communi-ties of a post-COVID society. India's legal system, too, can be construed as half prepared to deal with concerns arising out of data privacy violation in the app economy and highly though the Information Technology Act (2008, amended in 2011) provides the necessary legal regime for cybersecurity and protecting privacy concerns thereof.

With changing transnational contours of the app economy, where the jurisdictional functionality of service providers is questionable and operates in clouds, India needs to consolidate and strengthen data laws on priority. The Personal Data Protection Bill, 2019, which is still stuck in Parliament, intends to regulate the processing of personal data of individuals (data principals) by the Government and private entities (data fiduciaries). The Bill must provide legal teeth to data protection authorities to prosecute the data fiduciaries with penal actions. Such regulation, even if passed, cannot be effectively compliant in the context of lacking digital citizenship practices and eti-

A post-COVID society and democracy in India will be digitally driven and will be converged around data privacy and security that should not be devalued due to the current political bickering on the installation of the Aarogya Setu app. The app has only a limited purpose to contain the spread of the Corona infection. At the same time, developers of the app must take care to ensure that the not intruded, de-anonymised or exploited by any other party.

FIRSTCOLUMN

A very risky proposition

The concept of 'immunity passports' comes with practical difficulties and a lack of sufficient scientific backing

KOTA SRIRAJ

Ith May 17 just ten days away, 1.3 billion people are waiting with bated breath to see if the Government is able to usher in a graded relaxation of the 53-day-long lockdown that India is currently under. The Government, on its part, is mulling how to gradually open up the nation and the economy without resulting in a fresh outbreak of Coronavirus cases.

As of now, the number of cases in the country is inching towards the 50,000 mark as States registered 2,958 fresh Coronavirus cases in the last 24 hours. There have been 1,694 casualties till now as the toll zoomed to 126 in one day across the country.

Amid this spike, the Centre's dilemma is made worse by the assessments made by British brokerage firm Barclays, which pegged losses to the Indian economy at $120 billion or four per cent of the Gross Domestic Product (GDP), putting more pressure on the Government to ease the lockdown, at least on commerce, at the

If the recent surge in cases is anything to go by, India still has a long way to go before it can claim to have a grip on COVID-19, unlike New Zealand which has successfully eliminated the virus. According to Ashley Bloomfield, Director-General of Health, New Zealand, this feat was achieved through rapid preventive measures, widespread testing and scientific research-based methodologies.

India needs to script its own success story in controlling the virus on one hand and revivifying the economy on the other hand. This naturally needs an immediate restoration of business and commercial activities but this is fraught with unimaginable risks to public health. As it is, Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu and Gujarat have continued to report a high number of COVID-19 cases while Delhi's Coronavirus count reached 5,000 after a deadly spike on May 4. But despite the doom and gloom scenario, the economy has to be opened up anyhow. These exasperating conditions have led some countries to explore the option of giving "immunity passports" or "risk-free certificates" to those who were infected with COVID-19

These passports or certificates issued by the Government are being visualised as a way to help people go to work and, in the process, get the economy moving again. In order to have an immunity passport, one would have to be reliably tested for antibodies and specific proteins that could help stall and stop the growth of the COVID-19 infection. This concept quickly caught the imagination of many nations stuck in various levels of the lockdown as it presented a plausible exit strategy from the existing limbo. But the concept of immunity passports has its own share of practical difficulties and lack of sufficient scientific backing, all of which make

The foremost challenge for the immunity passport strategy is that the antibody testing procedures across the world are in their formative stages. Even the home-testing kits for the same are not up to the mark in terms of quality and require strict following of instructions as per the kit.

Then there is also the issue of people who have fought off the disease initially having got infected again, whereupon their immunity failed. This also undermines the concept of immunity passports, as once the person is granted an immunity certificate, there is no guaranteeing that s/he will not get infected again, thereby posing a threat of community transmission.

The issuance of an immunity passport will also cause sociological issues as it demarcates "healthy" people from "sick" people who have no option but to wait for vaccines or drugs to be devel-

The novel Coronavirus is a "new" strain and has no precedent' nobody knows how and when it ends and the level of immunity needed to tackle it. Therefore, it is very difficult to predict how and when an infected person can be pronounced safe. Basing immunity-related conclusions on still-developing antibody testing processes for a disease that has evolved out of a new strain is nothing but speculation, which is not advisable. The lockdown of the global economy has dealt a major blow to incomes. However, panicled initiatives to open the economy can lead to a major loss of lives, which are more precious than monetary gains.

India must follow the trio of best practices adopted by New Zealand, wherein rapid isolation measures for hotspots, widest possible population testing using the latest scientific methodology is combined with a calibrated easing of activities for green and orange zones. It must also ensure that the identified hotspots or red zones stay fully quarantined. India must also encourage the scientific research community to identify measures to enhance and bolster cell-level immunity in human bodies as that alone provides the first line of defence against the COVID-19 virus.

The contemptible action of people to obstruct the dignified interment of doctors and violence against health workers battling the pandemic has outraged the medical fraternity and most citizens doctor contracted COVID-19 from a patient and succumbed to the virus on April 19 in Chennai. The funeral of the doctor was stopped by residents who assembled in large numbers to oppose it. The Madras High Court, taking suo moto cognisance of the despicable incident, said that Article 21 of the Constitution, which protects the life and personal liberty of all persons, includes within its ambit the right to a decent burial. The court said that this doctor was deprived of his right to have a decent burial.

In another incident in Meghalaya, the local governing bodies known as Durbar Shnong prevented the cremation of a COVID-19 infected doctor. Consequently, the Meghalaya Bar Association filed a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) in the High Court, against the State and local bodies. The court noted that the State authorities handled the matter in an that the State authorities handled the matter in an inept way and the obstructive conduct of the Durbar Shnong would shock the conscience of every rightthinking individual.

The contemptible action of various groups to obstruct the dignified interment of doctors and other healthcare professionals has outraged the medical fraternity and all citizens with a conscience. On April 20, the Indian Medical Association (IMA) said that objections to proper funerals of doctors and other health workers, dying in the line of pandemic duty, is the last straw. The IMA demanded a special Central law to take stringent action against those who indulge in violence against healthcare professionals and hospitals. The IMA called for a "white alert" on April 22 and sought to declare April 23 as a "black day" if its demands to protect the serving medical fraternity were not met.

Soon after, the Union Cabinet passed the Epidemic Diseases (Amendment) Ordinance, 2020 which was then signed by the President. The Ministry of Health and Family Welfare intended the Ordinance to ensure "zero tolerance" to any form of violence against healthcare professionals and damage to property. Significantly, in 2019 the Healthcare Services Personnel and Clinical Establishments (Prohibition of Violence and Damage to Property) Bill, drafted by the Health Ministry to contain violence against doctors, was rejected by the Home Ministry, saying that there cannot be a separate legislation to protect the members of a particular pro-

Hopefully, this Ordinance will make up for the community, that is on the frontline in our war against the pandemic. Though the passing of the Ordinance itself is a positive decision by the Government, the moot question is whether the new law is adequate to protect doctors and other healthcare workers?

According to the Ordinance, an "act of violence' includes any of the following acts committed against healthcare personnel: Harassment impacting living or working conditions; harm, injury or danger to life; obstruction in the discharge of duties and loss or damage to the property or documents of the healthcare personnel.

Property is defined to include: Clinical establishment; quarantine facility; mobile medical unit, and other property in which a healthcare worker has a direct interest. Further, "healthcare personnel" are people, who while carrying out their duties in relation to countering the epidemic, may come in direct contact with affected patients and thereby are at the risk of being impacted by such disease and include any public and clinical healthcare providers such as the time, there were sporadic incidents of violence that demoralised the medical fraternity fighting the contagion. Therefore, it was felt that separate and stringent provisions for emergent times were needed to act as effective deterrents to any such incidents of violence.

Though the Ministry makes tall claims of zero tolerance, with very high aspirations of pacifying a demoralised and shaken medical fraternity, the Ordinance does not address the issue of attacks on healthcare workers in normal circumstances, after the pandemic is over.
Assaults on them existed globally, long before COVID-19 reared its ugly head. Numerous pleas to protect medical staff have fallen on deaf ears. According to the IMA, over 75 per cent of doctors and other healthcare professionals have faced vio-DOCTORS AND lence at work.

obstetric complications died in Tuticorin. In retaliation, the attending doctor was killed by the enraged husband. This triggered a call for a strike by the Tamil Nadu Government Doctors' Association. The IMA has demanded that hospitals be declared as "protected zones" and called for strict implementation of laws in cases of violence against health professionals.

In 2014, angry relatives of a 14-yearold boy, who was declared "brought dead" at a private hospital in Bathinda, Punjab, went on a rampage. They damaged the nursing home and burnt down the doctor's house. The Punjab State Chapter of the IMA demanded strict action against those responsible for damaging the nursing home and the house of the doctor. Angry relatives of patients are not the only ones who oppress medical professionals, the Government set-up is also equally guilty. Dr Indranil Khan, an oncologist, faced harassment after he posted images of doctors wearing raincoats in a COVID-19 ward of a Government hospital on social media. Police detained Dr Khan, charged him with causing communal disharmony and criminal intimidation and confiscated his phone.

A writ petition against his harassment by the police was filed before the Calcutta High Court. Justice Prasanna Mukherji of the Calcutta High Court said that freedom of speech and expression, which is granted under Article 19 of the Constitution, has to be scrupulously upheld by the State. The court said that if an expression of opinion brings the Government into disrepute, it cannot defend the allegation by intimidation of the person expressing the opinion by subjecting him to prolonged interrogation, threatening arrest, seizing his mobile phone and SIM card. In another incident, Dr Piyush

Pushkar Singh, who complained about the shortage of equipment and protective Hospital for bringing disrepute to the institution on April 15. Clearly, the Epidemic Diseases Ordinance, 2020, which is stated to ensure the safety of healthcare professionals is not designed to protect Dr Khan and Dr Singh

Sadly, the COVID-19 outbreak led to a rash of attacks against doctors and other health workers. Healthcare personnel deployed in rural areas were beaten and stopped from entering the villages and for "violating" the lockdown while going to work. The hurried promulgation of the Ordinance appears to be a knee-jerk reaction by the Government. First, the Ministry's claim that the citizens fully cooperated with the healthcare workers is belied by its own statement that incidents of violence have occurred which demoralised the medical fraternity. Second, the Ordinance only "protects" healthcare personnel in an epidemic and not in general conditions. Therefore, this Ordinance does not afford any protection to the medical fraternity in a non-epidemic situation.

DOCTORS ARE

LIKE YOU;

According to the World Health Organisation (WHO), health workers must be provided with training on infection prevention, given Personal Protection Equipment and technical updates. They must have a blame-free environment to report on incidents such as exposure to plood or bodily fluids or violence.

The right to health i.e. the right to live in a hygienic and safe environment, flows from Article 21. According to Article 47 the improvement of public health is the primary duty of the State. Justice Chandrachud said under Article 11 the right to life is magningless unless 21, the right to life is meaningless unless accompanied by the guarantee of certain concomitant rights including, but not limited to, the right to health. The right to health is understood to be indispensable to a life of dignity, well-being and includes, for instance, the right to emergency and improvement of public health. In the current situation, with the need to have a conducive and safe environment for medical professionals and the responsibility of the State to provide for public health, the Government will be well-advised to take all steps to protect the medical fraternity from any form of lawlessness. The Centre must consider enacting a standalone law that will enable hospitals and medical personnel to work in a safe environment at all times, so as to attain the Constitutional aspiration of right to health for all citizens. While social distancing is being advocated, medical professionals do not have the privilege of working remotely. The best form of applause to give the doctors and medical personnel is to give them a safe working environment. (The writer is Advocate Partner in a he Indian subcontinent has always been extremely prone to natural disasters like floods, earthquakes, landslides, avalanches and storms. Statistics published in media reports suggest that post-Independence, till 2017, India has witnessed 529 natural disasters, leaving aside those caused by droughts, epidemics and extreme temperature. These disasters have resulted in nearly 2,00,000 deaths and left hundreds of millions affected in the country. In all of these incidents, our armed forces have been employed for conduct of Humanitarian Assistance and Disaster Relief (HADR) missions, more often than not, as the key nodal agency. It, therefore, comes as a major surprise to all, especially the mili-tary leadership, when they find themselves and the military on the fringes in this ongoing war against the pandemic, tasked with providing only limited assistance on the periphery.

That apparently appears to have become a source of immense anxiety and insecurity among the Service Chiefs, forcing them to call a press conference to announce a series of displays by elements of the three Services and the Coast Guard to honour our "Corona warriors."

If, on the other hand, these were the directions of the Government that they were complying with which is also a major possibility it shows them up as weak, only aiming to please their political bosses in hopes of future rewards.

To my mind, there appears to be no other reasonable explanation for this bizarre exercise, which obviously appears to have, at least outwardly, paid them some dividends, if the Prime Minister's tweet means anything.

Let us not get it wrong. There is indeed much to be appreciative of, inasmuch as such displays go towards building the morale of the "Corona warriors." But did it really require the Chief of Defence Staff and the three Service Chiefs to make the announcement? Is that what they have been reduced to? For that matter, was the scale that this morale-boosting exercise was undertaken at really necessary?

In such troubled times, substance over showmanship would have been better appreciated. Much of that time, money and effort, could and should, have been better utilised in providing assistance to the vast numbers of our citizenry who have been rendered utterly destitute, dented scale. We neither anticipathungry, without shelter and unable to reach their homes because of an ill-planned and poorly-executed nationwide lockdown.

Feeding the hungry, providing tented shelters for the homeless or transport for the weary are not matters that require approval from the highest levels, just a humane bent of mind at the local level. That in itself would have garnered enough goodwill among the populace, without this grasping for publicity that we witnessed on television.

It should be seen as a positive step that our military has not been called out in this disaster, except of course for providing medical assistance where necessary. This suggests that our civil administration is finally maturing and waking up to its duties, however poor its performance might have been this time

In all fairness, this particular disaster has been on an unprece-

ed it nor were we prepared or trained for it and errors were to be

It has been the bane of the military in the past that whenever a disaster occurred, it invariably led to the civil administration and its agencies all but abdicating their responsibilities, leaving it to the military to take over the process, coordinate and provide the required assistance. Examples are too numerous to quote but the floods that devastated Uttarakhand and Kashmir, in the past, best illustrate this phenomenon

Clearly, as we look at and assess the security environment in our region, there can be little doubt that our military must take all necessary precautions to keep its units out of harm's way so that they can meet their constitutional obligations and successfully protect our sovereignty at a moment's notice. Static units and those uncommitted operationally, spread out all over the country could have been utilised in a number of ways to provide succour to our hard-pressed brethren. As a matter of fact, it was the bounden duty of our Service Chiefs to have interceded with the Prime Minister and have convinced him of the enormous range of assistance that our forces were capable of providing. Obviously the lack of Personal Protection Equipment (PPE) within the forces may well have been an important consideration for the hierarchy in whatever suggestions they may have made. In any case, the "Corona warriors" would have been more appreciative if they had been provided with PPE and protection from rampaging mobs instead. In fact, within the veteran community, leaving aside a few, these theatrics have been seen as contrary to service norms and ethics, as the former Naval chief, Admiral Laxminarayan Ramdas', article in one of our dailies makes it amply

Instead of copying what the US Air Force Aerobatics Teams did at New York, we could have looked at the more innovative ways the Spanish military was used to manufacture PPE. It may come as a surprise but various Ordnance Corps establishments within the Army are authorised tailors and equipment repairers, who could have been gainfully employed to produce masks and other equipment.

Given the massive deficiency in PPE suits, even the Ordnance Parachute Factory at Kanpur could have been modified quickly to mass-produce them. An opportunity to do good was truly squandered, leaving behind only a bitter taste in the mouth that is unlikely to disappear any time soon.

In recent days, US President Donald Trump and Secretary of State Pompeo have claimed that the deadly virus originated from the Wuhan Institute of Virology in the central Chinese city of Wuhan, where the outbreak was first detected last December. The two leaders have also said that China has refused to give international scientists access to learn what happened.

Geneva: At least 90,000 healthcare workers worldwide are believed to have been infected with Covid-19, and possibly twice that, amid reports of continuing shortages of protective equipment, the International Council of Nurses (ICN) said on Wednesday.

The disease has killed more than 260 nurses, it said in a statement, urging authorities to keep more accurate records to help prevent the virus from spreading among staff and patients.

The Geneva-based association said a month ago that 100 nurses had died in the pandemic sparked by a novel coronavirus that emerged in the central Chinese city of Wuhan late last vear.

"The figure for health care workers infections has risen from 23,000 to we think more than 90,000, but that is still an under-estimation because it is not (covering) every country in the world," Howard Catton, ICN's chief executive officer, told Reuters Television in its lakeside offices. The 90,000 estimate is based on information collected on 30 countries from national nursing associations, government figures and media reports. The ICN represents 130 national associations and more than 20 million registered Catton, noting that 3.5

million cases of Covid-19 have been reported worldwide, said: "If the average health worker infection rate, about 6 percent we think, is applied to that, the figure globally could be more than 2,00,000 health worker infections on Wednesday.

t started with a small trickle with the sharing of screenshots of chats of an ▲ Instagram group by an individual and, within a few hours, became a deluge. Soon social media was agog with the workings of the (now infamous) 'bois locker room,' where boys (and girls) spoke graphically about girls their age. Within three days, there have been enough twists and turns to match a thriller with arrests, leaking of more chats and name calling. But this is certainly not the first, and certainly not the last case where juveniles have been involved in cyber crime.

Experts who follow juvenile behaviour acquiesce. Dr Samir Parikh, Director and Head of Department of Mental Health and Behavioural Sciences, Fortis Healthcare says that the case didn't come as a surprise. "We are basically a hibernating society and need something to wake us up for some days, intellectualise it and then return to slumber. There are million other incidents out there," he says.

Supreme Court advocate Pavan Duggal, who specialises in Cyberlaw says, "The lockdown period has seen the highest spike in cyber crime in 20 years since the internet was introduced in

Of course, there are a number of reasons why such incidents take place.

PARENTS: THE FIRST LINE OF CONTROL

Societal norms hold parents responsible for bringing up children and imparting values. Consequently, the first fingers always point in their direction whenever youngsters are involved in behaviour that is deemed unacceptable. Dr Geetanjali Kumar, counselling psychologist and parenting coach for 22 parenting. "Children have a sense of entitlement which springs from guilt compensatory parenting. The latest phones, the smartest TV in each bedroom are gifted by adults to make up for not spending time with children." The question to ask is why do youngsters need these rather than fulfilling every

An extension of this is the way parents cover up their wards' misdemeanours. "There is no sense of ownership and responsibility as we haven't made them realise that every action has consequences," says Dr Kumar. A missed test in school sees parents shooting off explanatory letters. "If the child hasn't finished the assigned work, we are quick to say it doesn't matter and we will pay the tutor," says Dr Kumar. The boundaries for the lack of responsibility keep on extending to underage or drunken driving and more.

Etishree Bhati, clinical psychologist, says, "There are two kinds of parents. Ones who approach the problem calmly and question whether it was curiosity or sexual arousal that made the child do this? The other kind are harsh and don't try to understand the reasons. Their children are more likely to engage in this behaviour repeatedly, of course,

Role modelling too comes into play. When the first thing a parent does in the morning is to scroll the mobile, how can they admonish the child for the

BLURRED LINES

Society is in a state of flux where the greys are more prominent while the clear-cut demarcation between right and wrong has been obliterated. Rajat Mitra, Professor of Clinical Psychology, Amity University, who has worked extensively with juveniles and appeared in several hundred cases in court to assist its proceedings says, "Many parents are indifferent and haven't taken any assertive stand about value formation." He recalls an incident when Delhi Police found minors, both girls and boys, from upper middle class families in a state of undress and engaging in sexual acts in a public place. "Parents dismissed the behaviour by saying that the children were just having fun post exams. Right and wrong have become relative unlike in the past out Mitra further elaborating that most people feel that if it seems right, it must be so.

Bhati extends the argument further. She points out that 15 years ago, educators were talking about limiting children's screen time on parents' device and now every child has a personal one. "During lockdown, children retreat to their rooms on the pretext of online classes but neither the parents nor the teachers are aware of what they are doing. Even during a class they might be chatting or visiting adult sites," she

These blurring lines and easy access to pornography, with inherent violence, without any influence of ethics has repercussions. Mitra says, "Between 15-20 per cent adolescents get into violent sexual fantasies and some actually commit them."

Violent and vulgar sexual language seen in the 'bois locker room' screen-shots is indicative of a violent streak. "This violence associated with the crime gives them a high more than the crime itself," says Mitra.

Another attribute of the young is the love of risk taking. Dr Kumar says, "The regulatory mechanism of the brain which advises caution isn't developed as yet which makes the prohibited more

MOB MENTALITY

What sparked outrage about the 'bois locker room' incident was that it consisted of a group, rather than just individuals, engaging in lewd conversations. Mitra explains, "The boys give collective shape to the violent fantasies as they don't have to feel individual guilt. It is the same psychology at work when crowds burn, kill, loot and rape in the actual world absolving individual responsibility. This is replicated dig-

DISCONNECT IN EMOTIONS

Often we have seen that even at dinner tables people are glued to their individual mobiles. This effectively means a lack of communication. "Even the sibling bond isn't strong as children do not even watch TV together," says Dr

A lack of communication leads to an inability to express emotions and a need to generate thinking with a logical and emotional perspective where you can define the whys and hows of emotions. Children get frustrated because they can't talk to anyone about their concerns like changing body, hormone surge and more," she

CHANNELING RAGING HORMONES

The lack of communication means that they lack the arsenal to deal with their raging hormones. "Will it be done respectfully or in a vulgar fashion is had cases where 15-year-old girls have shared explicit photographs with boys and when discovered, threatened to slash their wrists if the parents say anything. The boys asking for photographs and the girls doing it willingly all point in the direction," says Kumar.

MEDIA: THE FAVOURITE PUNCHING BAG?

A change in the visual and vocabulary landscape of the media with the advent of first, cable television, and now, OTT platforms has been blamed for many societal ills. Dr Parikh says, "Attitudes and behaviours are formed by observation and imitation. The most accessible observable source is the media. Lack of censorship is taken as a sign of free thinking but if we see the top two-three shows on any streaming platform and their language, sexual portrayals as well as violence, we can see what the children were influenced by." He says that, as a deterrent, there should be a band at the bottom, highlighting the negative impact the way it is done with alcohol and cigarettes.

He points out that in the last decade we have deteriorated value-wise in the content. He gives the examples of dance shows featuring children and says, "Have you seen the expressions and movements of six-year-olds?'

Of the new media, the social kind has the singular largest impact. When in the the adult world, it is commonplace to see violent, sexual and false narratives in social media as a way of bringing down independent women, what makes us think that children would be immune from the behaviour? Parikh too agrees, "Often Twitter trends have an abusive word and children do use it."

LACK OF RESPECT FOR WOMEN AND LAWS

"Do you know who is my father?" is a refrain that all of us have heard often in reel and real life. Mitra says, "Many children grow up in homes where they hear their parents openly talk of flouting laws and bribing police."

Coupled with the lack of respect for law is an extremely derogatory view of women. They grow up in cultures where women have get no respect or empathy. "This makes them incapable of empathetic or caring relationships,"

ROLE OF SCHOOLS

After parents, schools are supposed influence and educate children. Bhati says, "They haven't been able to talk about emotional closeness and a fulfilling relationships. They aren't imparting sex education and even if they are, children today believe that they

Dr Kumar, a pioneer in sex education was associated with the first adolescent education programme launched by United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) in 2002-3, says, "I start the talk on a neutral note and when I come to the topic of sex education, the vibrant discussion becomes lukewarm."
Other gaps include the lack of counselling despite the presence of psychologists and source. ogists and counsellors.

WHAT DOES THE LAW SAY? Duggal says, "Children accessing the internet have the basic presumption that they know more than their parents." Add to it the fact that the IT Act of 2000 which was amended in 2008 made all the offenses bailable. People on bails deleted the electronic evidence against themselves. Consequently, there has been a famine of cyber crime convictions giving children the impression that the law is inadequate to catch them. "The fact that we haven't got any exemplary conviction in the 17 years since 2003 makes youngsters reckless," says the lawyer who was the counsel for the first cyber crime conviction for the complainant in 2003. There has been a massive change in technology and a more holistic, topical Act which takes into account that most cyber offenses are committed by youngsters is need-

In this case, the juveniles would at the most be sent to corrective homes or advised counselling. "Even in the applicable Act, Section 67 and 67 (A) which deal with sharing obscene electronic content against a woman were invoked by the police but they should have included Section 67 (B) which would deal with child pornography," says Duggal.

MOVING AHEAD

While this is one more in the series of offenses which have been committed, we cannot keep on moving our threshold further. Dr Parikh says, "The only hope is to create filters in young minds to minimise damage to belief systems, attitudes and behaviours. Gender sensitisation has to be a priority."

In a time when exposure is inevitable, the least we can do is protect children. "Media literacy should be taught in schools along with other subjects. This would enable them to question, 'Is it right?' 'How would this make me feel if it happened to me or my loved one?' 'Are they selling a product by using a celebrity?'" says Dr Parikh. Along with this, the media too needs self censorship, self realisation and responsibility.

Bhati emphasises on appropriate age-related sex education while Dr Mitra says that parents, schools and friends need to watch out for cues from adolescent. "There is a need for preventive action and greater awareness."

For this particular case, Dr Kumar says, "The parents and the children need individually. They should be encouraged to accept their mistake and then only is it possible to move forward." As for the larger picture, she feels parents and schools should work in tandem to reinforce values. "Counsellors in schools have to upgrade their skills. The lockdown is a time for schools to go inward and find out and address problems in

Only time will tell if the corrective actions will be put in place or if we will just slip back into slumber till the next and even more heinous offense grabs

Remake a hopeful world

The main thrust of MICHELLE OBAMA's documentary, Becoming, is not just her tale but what she inspires and how one story begets others

Nadia Hallgren's camera is winning American Factory) and the disability rights movement trailing them when Michelle perhaps looking for reassurance, (the acclaimed Sundance-winner asks the former president: "Does it seem like a show that you'd like Crip Camp: A Disability Revolution). It's been an auspicious, award-winning beginning Hallgren's documentary, for Higher Ground, the most Becoming, is — more so than we've seen before — the Michelle ambitious post-White House dive into Hollywood of any for-Obama Show. It captures the former US president. With mer first lady, in settings both Becoming, one half of Higher public and intimate, navigating Ground now steps in front of the her post-White House life, intercamera, too.

The film, itself, was a secret until last week when Netflix announced its forthcoming premiere. Hallgren typically worked with small crews or just by herself. Much of Becoming takes place either in arenas crowded with cameras or in private settings — the back seat of an SUV. the childhood home of Obama - so few would have spotted her.

"I think if people saw me, it probably looked very unofficial," probably looked very unofficial," chuckles Hallgren. Keeping Becoming clandestine still wasn't easy, though. "My closest friends had no idea what I was doing," Hallgren says. "People were always like, 'What are you up to?"

(Trouble the Water, Girl Rising, Trapped) making her feature directorial debut. The job, Hallgren believes, she won from her body of work and, as first gleaned in a high-pressure meeting with Obama, their similarities. "She's from the South Side. I'm from the South Bronx," says the New York-bred filmmaker.

Unlike the interview-heavy Hulu doc-series Hillary on Hillary Clinton, Hallgren's approach is mostly fly-on-the-wall, mixing glossy onstage footage of Obama's talks with the likes of Oprah Winfrey, Reese Witherspoon and Stephen Colbert with more personal scenes offstage. Obama reflects on her eight years in the White House and the often racisttinged response they engendered. "You hope people were more ready for us than maybe they were," she says. Obama doesn't analyse the 2016 election or the rise of Donald Trump except for one comment lamenting the turnout of African American voters. "That's my trauma," she says.

But the main trust of Becoming is not just Obama's story but what she inspires how one story begets others. Hallgren, drawing from the photography of Garry Winogrand, lingers on the faces in Obama's crowds, and in some cases takes a moment to follow their lives. Becoming may be part concert film but it's nearly as interested in the audience as it is in the showstopper on stage.

Often times when Obama was on stage, I was not the main camera filming her," says Hallgren. "So I had the opportunity to walk around. There was such an incredible energy in those arenas. The excitement that people had felt special. I thought: I want to capture this."

The timing of of the documentary is interpreting not increase.

mentary is interesting not just because it captures a sense of community before people were forced into lockdown by the pandemic but because it comes in the middle of the presidential campaign. The Deadline review of the film isn't alone in maintaining: "If Michelle Obama wasn't so adamant that she isn't running for public office, the perfectly timed the documentary would sure seem like a campaign launch."

Obama, however, has steadfastly maintained she's not a political figure and hasn't before officially endorsed a candidate. Obama decline to be interviewed for this article but she released a statement when Becoming was announced.

"Even as we can no longer safely gather or feed off the energy of groups, even as many of us are living with grief, loneliness and fear, we need to stay open and able to put ourselves in other people's shoes. Empathy is our lifeline here. It's what will get us to the other side," said Obama. "Let's use it to redirect our attention toward what matters most, reconsider our priorities, and find ways to better remake the world in the image of our hopes."

he Department of Pension & Pensioners' Welfare have taken the following initiatives to promote ease of living amid COVID-19 crisis:

The Department of Pension & Pensioners' Welfare (DoPPW) has successively taken steps in the recent past date to make life easy for the Pensioners. Here are some other initiatives too

☐ The department runs an online grievance portal "CPENGRAMS" (Centralised Pension Grievance Redressal & Monitoring Mechanism) in which any central government pensioner can register a complaint and the same is monitored by DoPPW till its final resolution and closure by the Pension settling Department/Ministry. DoPPW started a Toll-free call centre number 1800-11-1960 in June 2019 where pensioners grievances are lodged . The Department also counsels senior citizens on their pension related prob-

It got a deep-dive/root-cause analysis conducted by an independent third party. It was seen that some Ministries/departments often closed grievances routinely without qualitative resolution. It therefore evolved a model of on-the-spot resolution of grievances called the Pension Adalat.

With respect to NPS (National Pension System), DoPPW decided to start awareness workshops for central government employees. It conducted its first awareness programme at Jammu to educate the subscribers about the provisions of NPS and at the same time educate the different Departments on the Dos & Don'ts with respect to the system.

Keeping in view the representations/court cases filed by several central government officials covered under the NPS (National Pension Service) whose recruitment had been completed before January 1, 2004 but who for some reason, administrative or otherwise, could join service only on or after that, an option has been given to join the old pension system, if they so desire

Another initiative was the promotion of Digital Life Certificate. Keeping in view the difficulty faced by those seniors who are settled abroad with their children after retirement, it brought out a circular on Consolidated Instructions on Life Certificate and Commencement of Family Pension for those living abroad, vide which the bank branches abroad and the Indian Embassies/Consulates/High Commissions have been instructed to facilitate submission of life certificate and commencement of family pension.

 All pension disbursing banks have been instructed to provide door-step Life Certificate facility to those pensioners who are unable to visit banks in the month of November.

 To provide comfort to pensioners aged 80 and above, OM dated July 18, 2019 enables them to submit their Life Certificate w.e.f. October 1 every year instead of November 1. A pilot was done in 2018 in 8 cities in which Pensioners' Associations were roped in to go door to door and in 10 years. hospitals/ICUs with newly purchased Iris devices to collect DLCs. This was expanded in 2019 to 24 cities.

DoPPW also showed the sensitive side of the government with several reforms which touched human lives immensely. To enumerate a few:

☐ Rule 54 of CCS (Pension) Rules was amended to provide for payment of enhanced family pension (50 per cent of last pay) to families of even those employees who die during service before completing service of seven years. Earlier, the family of an employee who died during service before completing service of seven years was not entitled to enhanced family pension. ☐ A minimum qualifying service of

10 years is required for eligibility for pension under the CCS (Pension) Rules. Rule 38 of CCS (Pension) Rules amended to provide for Invalid Pension at 50 per cent of last pay to those government servants who retire due to bodily or mental infirmity even

For those living in non-CGHS areas, for OPD the amount of Fixed Medical Allowance (FMA) raised from ₹ 500 per month to ₹ 1000 per month.

Permission of CMO/CGHS dispensed with for sanctioning FMA to pensioners residing in cities/areas not covered under CGHS.

 Co-authorisation of pension for disabled children/siblings/dependent parents introduced in the PPO. This would avoid the delay and hassles of a fresh PPO by the office in favour of disabled children/siblings/dependent par-

■ Minimum pension raised from ₹ 3500 per month to ₹ 9000 per month. Minimum disability pension and family pension covered under CCS(EOP) Rules enhanced from ₹ 7,000 to ₹ 18,000.

 A new slab of death gratuity has been added. The family of a government servant dying while in service with a qualifying service of 11 to 20 years would be entitled to death gratuity at 20 times of monthly emoluments as against the existing entitlement of 12 times of emoluments. The ceiling of gratuity raised from ₹ 10 lakh to ₹ 20 lakh.

☐ The rates of ex-gratia lump-sum compensation being paid to the families of employees who die in performance of duty has been increased from existing ₹ 10-15 lakh to ₹ 25 to 45 lakh, depending upon the circumstances in which the death occurs.

 DoPPW also targeted awareness of pensioners/family pensioners through social media. The Union Minister of State (Independent Charge) Development of North-Eastern Region (DoNER), MoS PMO, Personnel, Public Grievances & Pensions, Atomic Energy and Space, Dr Jitendra Singh launched the Twitter Do You Know Series on Family Pension at Jammu on DoPPW will now take out a series of 30 info graphics (two per week) to spread awareness about family pension. Through this, the Pensioners/Family Pensioners/Departments & Ministry officials/Bank officials/Pensioners' Associations will become aware of the family entitlements for which till now they had to run around offices. Two booklets on family pension, in Hindi and English were also released by the Bhavishya (Online pension settling system): Pensioners' portal was strengthened by adding the facility of online pension sanction process Bhavishya. It is a software with a digitised end to end solution for pension settlement. As of now more than 1 lakh cases have already been processed through this software.

☐ Sankalp: With a view to re-orient pensioners towards an active post retired life and utilise their skill and experience towards nation building activities and social work, a new initiative namely Sankalp was undertaken. IAF salutes Corona warriors at KIMS

Indian Air Force showered flower petals on Kalinga Institute of Medical Sciences (KIMS) Covid Hospital, Bhubaneswar in a flypast from its helicopters on Wednesday as a mark of gratitude from the nation to the medical professionals combating COVID-19 crisis. The IAF took this initiative to boost the morale of the Corona warriors, who have dedicated themselves to save lives of the patients affected by novel Coronavirus.

ICAR-CRIJAF stands for jute farmers

Amid COVID-19 crisis, jute farmers of West Bengal and other jute-growing states have done a commendable work by sowing the crop in more than 90 per cent of their areas. In some states, 15 to 20 per cent more sowing area is anticipated despite lockdown and restrictions. All this was possible by the efforts of ICAR-CRIJAF, Barrackpore who issued regular agro-advisory, constant monitoring on availability of seeds, implements and other agroinputs to the farmers and other stakeholders.

Farmers are worried about the infestation of pests and diseases on jute due to the rainy weather. At present, the jute crops in the farmers' fields of different parts of the state is almost 20-50 days old depending on the sowing time. Due to the heavy rain in some pockets of Bengal and adjoining states, the jute fields have been waterlogged. Under such changing weather conditions, the crop now needs infestation, said ICAR-CRI-JAF director, Dr Gouranga Kar.

He added that the institute is issuing weekly agro-advisory on priority to outreach farmers and extension personnel of state governments through different digital platforms. He also said that around seven lakh farmers of different jute-growing states are getting benefitted every week through their agro-advisory.

Under rainy and waterlogged situation, he advised that the farmers should drain out the water immediately. After a few days there may be incidence of seedling blight and damping off. If such condition arises, some common fungicides like mancozeb (1g/l) or carbendazim (4g/l) may be sprayed once the field is drained out and

The damage of Indigo caterpillar has been reported from many farmers' fields, said Dr Satpathy, head division of Crop Protection, ICAR-CRIJAF. The insect usually becomes more problematic in jute fields, in which cabbage, cauliflower, potato, etc, were grown as the previous crop. In case of heavy damage, the farmers should go for the spraying of chlorpyriphos 20EC (2 ml/l).

In grown up jute plants of 30-

50 days, grey colour weevils with dark white spots and elongated heads are visible on the growing foliage. Heavy defoliation weakens the plant and adversely affects the growth. In case of considerable damage, foliar spray of chlorpyriphos 50EC+cypermethrin 5EC combination (1-1.5 ml/l) or chlorpyriphos 20EC (2ml/l) or quinalphos 25 EC (1.25 ml/l) may be done.

Generally, after moderate rainfall, the yellow mite infestation in jute goes down. But chances are that just after rain, once the weather is clear and there is abundant sunshine and the temperature is high, the mite infestation gradually increases. Maintain adequate soil moisture to reduce the damage symptom caused by mite infestation. In case of rain, wait for at least five to six days to initiate the acaricide spray if symptoms persist.

Dr Kar also said that it is advised to always use protective clothing, gloves and mask to avoid the drift of the insecticide. While conducting any type of intercultural operation, like pesticide spray, the farmers are advised to maintain social distancing and take all other preventive measures as per the advisoy to check the spread of

The first mantra of Rigved is: Agnimeedey Purohitam. It refers to the virtue that a person must desire to worship god and before beginning any new thing, should first remember god to destroy all the sorrows, problems, diseases etc.

Vedas are the invaluable treasure of education of each and every worldly subject that is, right from straw to Brahma. Therefore, medical science is also a part and parcel of Vedic knowlhuman life is Brahmacharya. So another Atharvaved mantra preaches that when a person maintains firm brahmacharya, then a precious gem of strength is generated in his body, which kills all the microbes that cause Further, it also preaches that Brahmacharya generates the best medicine within the body to kill all types of disease-causing germs. But there is a doubt that in the absence of holding Vedic knowledge whether or not Brahmacharya can be maintained.

In previous yugas, the knowledge of Vedas was in vogue. As a result, everyone used to maintain Brahmacharya, perform daily Yajyen/agnihotra, which purified the air, water, food, etc. Therefore, the question of suffering from any disease did not arise. In current life, living beings, including humans, spread pollution in the atmosphere. If we go by a Yajurved mantra, we will find that if we perform daily agnihotra/Yajyen, then all infectious diseases could be destroyed. It purifies the air and thus erodes all kinds of pollution. Where would then the diseases exist?

But to our bad luck, unlike previous yugas, we are not aware of the vedic knowledge and as a result are unable to liberate ourselves from serious diseases spreading in the world current-

Let us pay our attention to a Yajurved mantra, which preaches that if a person makes contact with a learned Acharya or guru, then s/he, by teaching him Vedic knowledge, can help him purify his speech, respiratory system, senses, vision, the source of hearing, naval, organs of excretion and ultimately, his character and conduct.

These are the results that one will find in oneself if one follows vedic mantras:

- There will never be any kind of diseases spreading around.

- Yajyen purifies the universe if it is performed by everybody. It emerges in the form of smoke, which reaches up to the sun's rays and then, spreads around, reaching humans and other living beings. Thus it purifies the air and atmosphere. (The author is Swami Ram Swarup, Yogacharya, the chief editor of the Ved Ishvareeya Vani magazine.)

Drive to succeed different for Kohli and Smith: Warner Will need at least one dhey have similar impact on their teams but Virat Kohli is driven by sheer passion to subdue the rivals while Steve Smith just enjoys batting, says Australia opener David Warner.

India skipper Kohli and top Australian batsman Smith are arguably the top two cricketers of the current era. They achieve new milestones consistently, invoking debates, who is better between them.

"Virat's passion and drive to score runs is different to what Steve's would be," Warner said while speaking to Harsha Bhogle on 'Cricbuzz in Conversation'.

"Steve is going out there for a hit in the middle, that's how he sees things. He's hitting them out in the middle, he's having fun, he's enjoying himself, just does not want to get

Warner feels, while Kohli is batting he is aware that if he sticks around the middle his team will be on top of the proceedings.

"Virat obviously doesn't want to get out but he knows if he spends a certain amount of time out there, he's going to score plenty of runs at a rapid rate. He's going to get on top of you. That allows the guys coming in, especially in the Indian team you've got a lot of players who can be flam-boyant as well."

The Australian opener added that both men are mentally strong and a good knock by them boosts the morale of the entire team.

"When it comes to cricket, they both have got the mental strength, the mental capacity to score runs. They both love spending time in the mid

"They stabilise, they boost morale - if they score runs, everyone else's moral is up. If they are out cheaply you almost sense that on the field that everyone is (down on morale and thinking) 'now we all have to step up. It's a very bizarre situation," he added.

Asked about the similarities both live wires on the field, Warner said the passion to do better than the opponent keeps him going.

"I can't speak for Virat, obviously, but it's almost like we got this thing in us when we go (out to the middle) we need to prove people wrong, prove someone wrong."

"If you're in that contest, and if between himself and Kohli, who are I'm going at him for example, you're thinking, 'Alright, I'm going to score more runs than him, I'm going to take a quick single on him. You are trying to better that person in that game. That's where the passion comes from?

Warner also explained how he breaks down a match into smaller competitions.

ndia's Test vice-captain Ajinkya Rahane on Wednesday said cricketers will need at least a month of training before resumption of competitive games, which should happen only after a vaccine for the dreaded COVID-19 is discovered.

Rahane also said that in a coronavirus-scarred world, the lifestyle of cricketers will undergo a change as far as pre and post-match routines are concerned.

"...We would be needing three to four weeks of proper practice before playing any kind of competitive game (domestic or international), Rahane, who was named brand ambassador of ELSA (English Language Speech Assistant) app, said during an online press conference.

"...I am missing my batting. But obviously, cricket should only start when we get a vaccine to fight the virus," he asserted.

While the sports ministry is planning a phased resumption of national camps in Olympic disci-plines, the BCCI is yet to spell out its plans on cricket. Rahane said he is focussing on his fitness amid the lockdown.

"I am following the chart given by our trainer. I am also doing 'free weights' at home apart from meditation," he said

He agreed that in future, players will be wary of wild celebrations "The passion is driven by...I know my sense - one, the will to win and group hugs which they are so and two, wanting to do better than used to at the fall of wickets.

"I think we might go back to the good old days when fielders would still stand in their designated positions after the fall of a wicket and clap. May be handshakes will be replaced by a 'Namaste'," the elegant Mumbai right-hander predicted.

"But once sport resumes, you can't take anything for granted. The safety of the fans will be of utmost importance. There will be changes in lifestyle while travelling. Especially before and after the match," Rahane said

However he was non-committal on whether there should be a ban on the use of saliva to shine the ball, a topic of debate right now.

"I would like to wait and watch. You will only get a fair idea about revised rules once play resumes."

my failures: Samson

PTI NEW DELHI

 H^{e} has flattered to deceive on umpteen occasions but highlyrated wicketkeeper-batsman Sanju Samson says he has learnt to accept his failures in pursuit of the calm demeanour that former India captain Mahendra Singh Dhoni possesses.

The 25-year-old from Kerala has always been talked about by the likes of Kahul Dravid and Gautam Gambhir but it hasn't translated into international success with only four T20 Internationals in his kitty in the last five years.

"I have learnt to understand and focus more on my strengths and (be more) accepting (of) the failures. I try to contribute to the team's cause and try to take the team over the line. I am learning to focus and control my emotions while batting like MS Dhoni," Samson said during a podcast organ-

He recently made a comeback in India's T20 side and it was a worthy experience for him.

"It was great to be a part of the Indian team again. To be a part of one of the best teams in the world, surrounded by players like Virat bhai and Rohit bhai, it was a fantastic experience," Samson said.

In one of the games in New Zealand, Samson was sent to bat in the Super Over, something which made him feel wanted in the Indian set-up.

"It was a great feeling to be trusted by the players such as Virat bhai and Rohit bhai to go out there and bat in the crucial moments. It's a great feeling when the team and the players consider you to be a match winner." On a lighter note, Samson revealed that he refers to Steve Smith as "chachu" (uncle) after Brad Hodge started calling him by that "I share a very good relationship with 'Chachu' Steve Smith. He is one of the best brains in world cricket and we all enjoy a lot playing under him."

While Dhoni is his idol, he also loves watching Jos Buttler in Royals and makes notes on how the star Englishman prepares for games.

'I observe Jos especially given he too is a wicketkeeper-batsman. He's always working on his skills and his game and never sits idle.

"He's either working on his keeping, batting in the nets or running around the park. I love to observe and know how he thinks and prepares as a keeper before a game."

I have learnt to accept If you think Virat is good to watch, have a look at Babar bat: Moody

Former Australia all-rounder Tom Moody believes Pakistan batsman Babar Azam has grown by leaps and bounds in recent times and will "definitely" be among the top five batsmen of the decade in Test cricket in the near future.

"He (Babar) has emerged over the last year or so into something that is going to be so special. We talked about how Virat Kohli is so good on the eye as a batsman. If you think Virat Kohli is good to watch, have a look at Babar Azam bat. My gosh, he is something special," Moody said in The Pitch Side Experts Podcast as quoted by crick-etpakistan.com.pk.

"I THINK IN THE NEXT FIVE TO TEN YEARS, HE WILL DEFINITELY BE IN YOUR TOP FIVE (BATSMEN OF THE DECADE) WITHOUT A QUESTION,"

"I think in the next five to ten years, he will definitely be in your top five (batsmen of the decade) without a question," he added.

The former Sunrisers Hyderabad coach, however, admitted considering Azam's statistics at the moment, it is very difficult to put him in the top five current batsmen. "I think, in the next 5-10 years, he will be on your top five position. Even though he has played 26 matches but in half of those matches he was not considered even part of the main batting line-up for Pakistan. He was the after-thought down the order," he said.

"I think at the moment, it is very hard to justify him at that position given his statistics. Away from home he is only averaging 37 and at home he is averaging 67. But we have to consider that he has hardly played away from home and a lot of those games away were during the early part of his career," Moody added.

Under Kohli's leadership, India earned its maiden series victory in Australia in 2018-19, achieving the feat after trying for seven decades.

However, it can't be discounted that absence of Warner due to ball tampering ban turned out to be an important factor.

'This Indian team has to still cover a lot of distance in order to match up with that Australia team (led by Steve Waugh and then Ricky Ponting)," Nehra said during an interaction with ex-player Aakash Chopra on his show 'Aakash Vani'.

'You are talking about an Australian team which won three consecutive World Cups and before Steve Smith and David that reached the final in

He also did not appreciate the fact that every now and then team combination is being tinkered how team management had handled Rishabh Pant's career so far.

"KL Rahul is playing on the fifth position and Pant, the person you were preparing to succeed M.S. Dhoni, is serving drinks," the left-arm fast bowler, known for his straight forward views, said.

Thanks to his inconsistency, Pant had lost his place in the Indian team in white-ball cricket to

"I know he (Pant) has missed his chances and there is no doubt about it but then you have kept him in the team because you saw the potential in him at 22-23 years," Nehra said.

"There are a lot of talented players but they should be backed for a longer duration. Today also when we talk about the number five and six slots in Indian ODI side, then we are not sure about it," Nehra said.

"And at 33, 34 years old, that is more valuable than at 20, when you have more time ahead of you." Nadal recently said he was concerned with the risk of new injuries when players return to action after a long time without proper training. The Spaniard has had to deal with a series of injuries throughout his career and expects his body to struggle again when competitions finally resume.

Nadal also complained about "confusing" information regarding the return to practice of tennis players in Špain. He said he went to train on a private court because it wasn't clear to him whether he could practice normally after the gov-

The National Anti-Doping ▲ Agency's Director General Navin Agarwal on Wednesday said the body will conduct its disciplinary hearings online from Friday despite the many logistical challenges to ensure cases don't pile up due to the national lockdown.

NADA hearings have not been taking place due to the lockdown to contain the COVID-19 pandemic.
