Recovered cases more than active cases in some States

A more diligent note about the surge in COVID cases in India, the country has created havoc across India. The second wave of COVID-19 has brought good news from some States, where the number of recovered COVID-19 patients has exceeded the number of active cases.

Active vs Recovered Cases - A closer look at the numbers

The most interesting observation is that in several States, the number of recovered cases is higher than the number of active cases. This trend is evident across different States, with varying degrees of variation. For instance, in some States, the ratio of recovered to active cases is almost 3:1, whereas in others, it is closer to 1:1.

Factors Contributing to the Recovery Rate

The higher recovery rate can be attributed to several factors. First, there has been an increase in the testing capacity, leading to a better identification of cases. Second, the availability of adequate healthcare facilities, especially in the form of hospitals and ICU beds, has improved significantly. Third, the population's compliance with preventive measures, such as wearing masks, maintaining social distancing, and getting vaccinated, has contributed to a lower transmission rate.

Challenges Ahead

While the recovery rate is encouraging, there are still challenges that need to be addressed. First, the need for adequate isolation facilities to prevent the spread of the virus is critical. Second, the high numbers of active cases in some regions point to the need for increased testing and contact tracing efforts. Third, the socio-economic impact of the pandemic must be considered, as cases in rural and urban areas might have different implications.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the higher recovery rate in some States is a positive sign. However, it is crucial to maintain the current efforts to prevent a resurgence of cases. The government's proactive measures, along with the cooperation of the population, will be key to sustaining this trend.

APMC to help farmers earn better during Covid-19

In a move to help farmers to improve their production in times of Covid-19 and address the concerns of the farmers, the Associated Produce Merchants Conference (APMC) has announced a scheme to help farmers in the production of essential commodities. The scheme aims to provide financial assistance to farmers who are involved in the production of essential commodities and to ensure a steady supply of these commodities to the market.

The scheme will be implemented in collaboration with the farmers' organizations and will provide financial assistance for the production of essential commodities. The farmers will be provided with the necessary inputs, such as seeds, fertilizers, and pesticides, and will be guided on the best practices to ensure high-quality production. The scheme will also help in the sustainable production of essential commodities and in ensuring a steady supply of these commodities to the market.

The scheme will be implemented in phases, with the first phase starting in the current fiscal year. The farmers will be provided with the necessary inputs and guidance, and their progress will be monitored regularly. The scheme will continue for a period of two years, and the farmers will be provided with financial assistance for the production of essential commodities in each year.

In addition to the financial assistance, the APMC will also provide technical support to the farmers. The experts from the APMC will visit the farms regularly and will provide guidance on the best practices to ensure high-quality production. The scheme will also help in the sustainable production of essential commodities and in ensuring a steady supply of these commodities to the market.

The scheme is expected to have a positive impact on the farmers' income and livelihood. The financial assistance will help the farmers to improve their production and ensure a steady supply of essential commodities to the market. The scheme is expected to benefit thousands of farmers across the country and will contribute to the overall growth of the agricultural sector.
Kerala CM slams package for ‘domino’ effect

Keralaites at Baselian Convent at Thalassery in Kannur.

A global collective of Keralaites are furious at the Centre’s decision to provide immediate relief to口袋 crores of migrant workers who are starving.

The Centre should have taken steps to boost the supply line but failed to appreciate the situation, the collective said, while comparing it with a budgetary package announced by the Prime Minister’s Friday declarations on 29 April.

“Despite the State financial condition not over yet in the state. We will take all precautions while returning the migrant workers who are starving? FM’s nonsensical act. Sir — With the Government sending down notices to 36 states, it looks like we are on the verge of a lockdown down南 down from next week, which will be very hard on the poor, whose daily cases are on the rise. We should be prepared for an intense phase, as the virus spreads rapidly. We need safety protocols and well-trained healthcare workers. We need to speed up vaccination. We need the lockdown to begin — the sooner the better. As a nation, we need to start preparing for the worst. We need to ensure our healthcare system can handle the surge of cases. We need to ensure that essential services are available. We need to ensure that the elderly and vulnerable are protected. We need to ensure that our healthcare system is prepared for a surge in demand. We need to ensure that our economy can handle the impact of the lockdown. We need to ensure that our political leaders are taking the necessary actions to protect our people.

Till then, we need to do our part to slow the spread of the virus. We need to stick to the lockdown rules. We need to wear masks. We need to wash our hands. We need to keep our distance. We need to avoid large gatherings. We need to work from home if possible. We need to use telemedicine if we have a cold or flu.

Sir — We are writing to you to urge you to consider the following measures:

1. Focus on the most vulnerable: We need to prioritize the most vulnerable groups, such as the elderly, pregnant women, and people with underlying health conditions, in the vaccination drive.
2. Invest in public health: We need to invest in public health infrastructure, including hospitals, laboratories, and vaccination centers.
3. Support for small businesses: We need to support small businesses and entrepreneurs who are struggling to make ends meet.
4. Mental health support: We need to provide mental health support to those who are struggling with anxiety, stress, and depression due to the lockdown.
5. Education support: We need to provide support to students who are unable to attend school due to the lockdown.

Let us come together to ensure that our country is prepared for the worst. Let us work together to protect our people. Let us fight this pandemic together.

Sincerely,

COVID-19 makes dentists a vulnerable group of health workers as salivary glands are potential reservoirs for the Coronavirus

Dentistry comprises 100 years this Indya’s first dental. The world’s first dental college was set up in Calcutta in 1835 to make the profession respectable enough to admit to the community. Today, there are more than 2.7 lakh dentists registered in India. In the last five years, the number of dental colleges have increased by 50%. The dental workforce in India is three-fourths of all health care workers and they contribute significantly to the health and well-being of the country. They provide preventive care, surgical and restorative care to millions of Indians. This includes cleaning and polishing teeth, filling cavities and other procedures.

Dentists and their assistants spend most of their time in close proximity to patients, social distancing is virtually impossible. A typical dental clinic is a closed room with limited ventilation and as such to safeguard and many clinics are not in basements. The problem of dentists the use of dental and surgical instruments such as burs. This procedure is done under sterile conditions in a dental surgery, instruments are sterilized in an autoclave. The autoclave is a closed vessel containing pressurized steam at high temperature and pressure. The autoclave is used to kill bacteria or destroy them. This procedure is called sterilization.

Dentists have always arrived using some form of technology in the dental field. The introduction of dental lasers in the late 1980s was a major breakthrough. Laser technology allowed dentists to perform procedures more accurately and with less pain. Other technologies such as digital x-rays, computerized tomography, and intraoral cameras have also made the diagnosis and treatment of dental problems more efficient.

The specter of dental work is that it is a profession with a long tradition of excellence. The history of dentistry can be traced back to ancient civilizations such as Egypt, Greece, and Rome. The practice of dentistry has evolved over the years, with the development of new technologies and techniques.

In the 19th century, dentistry was a relatively new field and was still in its infancy. Dentists were often untrained and unlicensed individuals who performed procedures without regard for safety or hygiene. In the late 19th century, the American Dental Association was formed, which helped to standardize the education and practice of dentistry.

In the 20th century, dentistry continued to evolve, with the development of new procedures and technologies such as orthodontics, implant dentistry, and cosmetic dentistry. Dentistry has also become more specialized, with the development of new specialties such as endodontics, periodontics, and prosthodontics.

In the 21st century, dentistry continues to advance, with the development of new technologies and techniques such as digital imaging, computer-aided design and manufacturing (CAD/CAM), and 3D printing. Dentistry is a field that is constantly evolving, with new procedures and technologies being developed all the time.

Keep nature front and centre

All our future financial and economic systems should value fixed relationships with nature to minimize the potential risks of such pandemics in times to come

VIVEK SAXENA

Landscape, social distancing, self-isolation, economic disruptions, unemployment, mental health issues, dietary changes, fragile food systems, social inequality, rent arrears, climate change, and a global economic crisis have all forced us to re-examine our relationship with nature. The global crisis brought on by COVID-19 has forced us to reflect on the way we relate to the natural world, and has highlighted the need for a more sustainable and resilient future.

The current pandemic has demonstrated the interdependence of human systems and nature. The health of the planet and the well-being of its inhabitants are inextricably linked. We must learn from this pandemic and work towards a more sustainable and resilient future.

We need to value and protect nature, and ensure that its resilience is not compromised. We must work towards a future where we can coexist with nature, and where our actions do not harm the planet.

As we emerge from this pandemic, we must learn from the mistakes of the past and work towards a more sustainable future. We must ensure that our actions do not harm the planet, and that we value and protect nature for the health and well-being of all.

China asks US to ‘meet halfway’

BEIJING

China on Thursday asked the United States to “meet halfway” in a row of new trade talks after Trump offered to “start a new chapter” with Beijing.

China’s request came after US President Donald Trump offered to “start a new chapter” with Beijing on Thursday, following a series of new trade talks.

China has previously said that it would like to see a “headline-free” phase one deal with the United States, which would be announced at a meeting between Trump and Chinese President Xi Jinping.

The World Bank on Friday approved a USD 1 billion loan to India to finance efforts for providing social assistance to the poor and vulnerable households, severely impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic.

The disbursement of the 2.4 billion Covid-19 Social Protection Response Fund will support the government’s efforts towards reaching out to the poor and vulnerable households to ensure no one is left behind. The fund will be announced last month towards support to the poor in the country is weighing on investor sentiment over the effectiveness of the country's health sector.

Meanwhile, the Indian health sector’s multifaceted lending agency is in talks with the government to provide assistance for thinly populated and remote enterprises, said World Bank Country Director Ahmad Ahmad.

The programme will be implemented by the United Nations

The primary objective of the fund is to provide social assistance to the poor and vulnerable households, severely impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic, through the existing social protection programs.

This platform draws on the country’s existing architectures in the health, nutrition, and banking sectors, and supports local and national government programmes to meet the existing social protection needs.

T20 WC may shift to 2022

The option of shifting the upcoming T20 World Cup to 2022 could not be put on the table when the ICC's cricket committee met here on Friday, a day after the world governing body announced that it would go ahead with the tournament as scheduled.

A cloud of uncertainty now looms over the women to cut costs when it returns, with Cricket Australia's chief executive officer Kevin Roberts revealing that the board would consider options from the ICC for 2022. At the time of last year's meeting, the T20 World Cup was a great idea but Flick also pointed out that "even if we had a great game, it's going to be a commercial disaster, unless the ICC makes sure it thrives in the long run."

"We will use it to rebuild a team that has been through a lot of things," the German head coach said. "We want to go into the tournament as being able to play our best football, but our focus is also on building a strong squad for the future."

"We need to have a strong foundation to play our best football," he added. "We want to make sure that we can continue to build on the success we have had in the past and we are confident that we can achieve that."
