Dying declaration: Gangraped; No rape: Cops cite FSL

Hathras Dist Admin under cloud for threatening victim’s family

The dying declaration the 19-year-old victim of the Hathras rape case had allegedly circulated on social media by her family members on Thursday has been found to be "inaccurate and twisted", contrary to the claim made by them.

The police officer of the Hathras district on Friday said the forensic investigation report issued by the FSL had clearly shown that the victim was not gangraped and her family "were not telling the truth".

"They have tried to portray the innocent victim of the death as a “rapist” by circulating the above pdf of the dying declaration of the victim, which they claim is the ‘dying declaration’ of the deceased woman," the police officer added.

The cop said the Hathras police had earlier registered a case for rape, murder, and criminal conspiracy against the accused and had also allotted a special police team to probe the case.

The UP police officer said that the police had been investigating the case "since the first day" of the incident and that the "facts of the case were accurately recorded in the FIR and the case registered at the police station".

The police officer said the Hathras police had "not received any official or written complaint from the victim’s family regarding her death and rape".

"We cannot ignore the fact that the police had not received any complaint regarding the fake statement or the ‘dying declaration’ of the victim made by her family members," the police officer added.

The Hathras police had recently arrested a 35-year-old man in connection with the death of the 19-year-old woman, who was allegedly gangraped by four men, and had subsequently handed over the FIR to the district administration.

The FIR was registered under sections 366/376/379/409/412/498A/498/120/b under the IPC.

Punjab farmers intensify their protest against new farm laws

The farmer unions on Thursday started the "milk" rail roads campaign, concluding 24 gates in the State. Among them, mostly a few are in Malwa, nearly eight in the west of Punjab, and the rest in Punjab and central Punjab. The Punjab government had allowed protests in the Tarn Taran area, but almost all blocks were sealed by the farmers. The farmers have already given a call to boycott some corporate houses and their products in the state. According to them, the corporate houses have their factories in this state, so they will not be able to supply the state. The farmers also staged a sit-in at the direct command of the Punjab government.

Detention of Rahul Priyanka illegal: Gehlot

Jaipur: Rajasthan Chief Minister Ashok Gehlot on Thursday said the arrest of Congress leader Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka Gandhi Vadra was illegal and demanded their immediate release.

"I respect the law. I respect the Constitution. I respect the police's work. I respect them. But I demand the immediate release of Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka Gandhi Vadra," Gehlot said.

He said the Congress has been engaging in peaceful protests, and said, "Whenever the police are needed, we will inform them."

Gehlot said the police have also arrested dozens of farmers, but then released them.

"If you (the police) are not releasing them, you are not only illegal, you are doing politics," Gehlot said.

He said the Congress would continue to protest until Rahul and Priyanka are released.

The police had arrested Rahul and Priyanka during their participation in farmers' protests in New Delhi earlier this week.

CBI did not probe possible of Pakistan intel agencies role in Babri case: Court

New Delhi: The Supreme Court on Thursday rejected the government's stand that the CBI had not probed the possible role of Pakistan intelligence agencies in the Babri Masjid demolition case.

"The CBI had prima facie evidence regarding the role of Pakistan intelligence agencies in the Babri Masjid demolition case which was in its possession," the court observed.

The court directed the government to take appropriate steps in the matter.

Another rape in UP shows us why we need to implement reforms now and face the forces from political pressure

To an end is the beginning. For the first time in our country’s history, we are being shamed and shamed and shamed again.

Despite our various amendments and laws, and the millions of women who have been subjected to crimes and injustices, the problem of rape and sexual violence continues to persist.

But what is the problem? The problem is not the law or the lack of it, but the enforcement and implementation of it.

It is not just the authorities who need to step up, but the entire society. We need to raise awareness, educate ourselves, and support our survivors.

The time to act is now. Let’s come together to make a change and break the cycle of violence.
Gandhi tested his ideas practically on the ground. Today, the world sees the path shown by the Mahatma as the best and most enduring lead.

Rashid Afzal Patel

The thoughts and messages of Mahatma Gandhi, the father of the nation, are relevant not just to his own time and world, but to our own day. The trust of the world was getting entangled in an arms race for the first time in 1947, and that was the moment Gandhi left. People are now forced to understand what was a solution in his time and how it has now become a problem. The world is not of our time and world is not of our time. It has not changed in the last 70 years. It has remained the same. People have come to realize that the philosophy of non-violence and the principles of self-reliance, freedom from want, and freedom from fear are essential for the survival of humanity.

In the current context, where the world is facing a global pandemic, the message of Gandhi is more relevant today than ever before. He believed in the power of satyagraha, which means truth and non-violence. This is the foundation of any movement for social change and it is a powerful tool for bringing about change. The principles of non-violence and the philosophy of self-reliance are essential for the survival of humanity.

Trump signs temporary Govt funding bill

WASHINGTON

President Donald Trump has signed a stopgap funding bill into law, averting the possibility of a government shutdown when the new fiscal year starts Thursday.

The legislation — called a continuing resolution, or CR, in Washington-speak — would keep every federal agency running on a current funding level through December 11, which gives Congress and the White House time to pass an appropriations bill to fund the rest of the government.

The measure is the bare minimum acceptable for Capitol Hill’s powerful Appropriations Committee, said to produce headlines rather than solve problems.

The stopgap funding bill, otherwise known as a “bridge bill,” has not set a stop date for the current fiscal year, ensuring that programs, regulations and laws established in the previous year remain in effect.

The appropriations process can be difficult and contentious, with many programs or funding levels facing the possibility of expiration on September 30, including the Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP), payroll taxes, and a program that prevents Medicaid cuts to hospitals that serve many poor people.

Congressional leaders have also expressed concern that Trump’s deal-making abilities despite his “America First” agenda would be limited by the likely absence of a lame-duck session of Congress later this year, when he could push through major legislation if the Democratic Party took control.

“It’s a stopgap measure, but it’s a step in the right direction,” said a Democratic appropriations committee aide.

"This year, I've been trying to be a little bit more conscious, because I've been spending a lot of time outdoors and realizing how much we're damaging our planet," she said.

"I've been trying to make changes in my lifestyle, whether it's going for walks instead of sitting in a car, or recycling more. I've also been trying to reduce my carbon footprint by using less plastic and buying locally sourced products," she added.

As a celebrity, Bhumi Pednekar is using her platform to raise awareness about climate change. "I think it's important for people in the public eye to speak up about these issues, because we have a responsibility to inspire others," she said.

"I'm trying to use my voice to encourage people to make small changes in their daily lives, whether it's something as simple as turning off the lights when we leave a room, or using reusable bags instead of plastic ones," she added.
Diners are now looking for new ways to have at-home experiences. With COVID-19 times, from virtual款еляon to connection difficulties, dining experiences have changed dramatically. Yet, the desire to imbibe and indulge in the craft, with cocktails being the norm, home cocktail drinking and dining experiences have changed dramatically. For many people, the experience of being at home can get monotonous and the desire to get out and enjoy the social atmosphere of a restaurant becomes the norm. However, with the strict preventive measures taken, including on-promises closures, restaurants, this trend has successfully translated. Brands and restaurants are creating unique experiences for patrons who want to indulge in the craft, with cocktails being the norm and experiential, so that they can have the feeling of being in a restaurant while at home.

The comforting cycle of a full life is to do something new and challenging while having fun. Life in lockdown is all about looking for new ways to celebrate, “said Oprah Winfrey. Look for reasons to celebrate, and celebrate your life, the more there is in life to celebrate,” said Oprah Winfrey. Enjoy the journey to your success. It could be as simple as a compliment for something you’ve worked for or a pool party to your birthday. We are not saying you need to create a restaurant-like experience every time, but doing extra miles for a special occasion can be a great treat. There are some recommendations for everyday moments.

Look for reasons to celebrate. “The more you praise and cel- ebrate your life, the more there is in life to celebrate,” said Oprah Winfrey. Enjoy the journey to your success.
