FOOD is best vaccine’ WFP wins Nobel Peace

The Telangana Legislative Assembly will meet on October 13 to decide on making amendments to the government’s new food policy. The state government decided to hold the special assembly session on October 13, a day after a special Committee of Council on October 12 was held before the council on October 14, it is learnt.

The resolution also said the government made its decision to revive the state’s food policy and said it has to be introduced in the House. It also requested the government to come out with a detailed food policy for the state.

TST restores normal services in all hospitals

HYDERABAD: With the coronavirus situation improving, all the hospitals in the city, including all the government hospitals, have started restoring normal services.

Speaking at a press conference, Dr. P. R. Bhagawan, Medical Education officer, said that the government has decided to allow all the hospitals to start providing normal services.

However, the government has also warned that if the situation deteriorates, the hospitals may have to revert to their previous arrangements.

GDP likely to contract 9.5 pc in FY’21: RBI

The Reserve Bank of India on Friday said economic activity is likely to contract 9.5 per cent in the first quarter of the fiscal year, as per the estimates of the Central Statistical Office (CSO).

In a statement after the meeting of the Monetary Policy Committee, RBI governor Shaktikanta Das said that the economy is expected to contract in the first quarter of the fiscal year, followed by a recovery in the second and third quarters.

The government and the Reserve Bank of India are likely to announce the fiscal and monetary package before the end of this month.

‘T’sentiment’ no longer a trump card forTRS

The Telangana unit of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has been trying to exploit the sentiment of the Telangana Sahithya Samithi (TSS) to gain support among the Telangana community in the upcoming assembly elections.

However, the TSS has been trying to distance itself from the BJP, and is not willing to support the party in the elections.

Kavitha all set to enter Council

Her victory a mere formality on Oct 12

One has to wonder if the actual outcome of the elections is decided before the results are announced.

Kavitha Reddy, who is the candidate of the Telangana Rashtra Samithi (TRS), has been widely tipped to win the seat.

But the question is, will the elections be held?

There is no denying that the TRS has been a dominant force in the state, and has been able to win most of the seats in the past. However, the party's popularity has been waning in recent times, and the elections could be tough.

But the question remains, will Kavitha win?

Is she expected to be the next chief minister of Telangana?

The TRS has been in power since 2014, and is currently led by K. Chandrashekar Rao.

The party has been widely credited for bringing about a change in the state's economy, and has been able to attract foreign investment.

However, the party's popularity has been waning in recent times, and the elections could be tough.

Kavitha all set to enter Council

The Congress has fielded Kavitha Reddy from Secunderabad in the upcoming Assembly elections. The Congress party's victory in GHMC polls, unlike during the party's victory in GHMC polls, was not taking place in the Telangana sentiment.

Kavitha Reddy has been an active member of the party's parliamentary meeting in the Telangana Parliament since she was included in the Congress' high command in the party's preparatory meeting for the elections. Even the Congress High Command is not ready to discuss the 'Regulatory framework for civil servants'.
The Medical Devices Park in Hyderabad has received good response with more than 25 firms interested in setting up a manufacturing facility. Apart from the state’s key players in the Medical Technologies, other elements like Manzil, Easy Care, Vytronix, Nellore, Pet Ltd and Peds achieved the goal of setting up a factory and investing in the medical devices park in Srisailam. A centre of excellence in local manufacturing will kick off in the near future, with SIPL, Syrups Labs, Bionut, Mothos, Jagdeo Life scooters being other companies which have signed up to set up factories in the park. It must be noted that the entire transformation of the state’s Medical Devices Park is a major initiative by the State Government under the NEP (Amit) largest domestic/venture capital fund initiative. An overall investment of Rs 500 Crore is expected to be pumped into 25 firms under the Medical Devices Park. There are four firms which have completed factory construction and are waiting to be commissioned. Besides, 150 firms are seeing a positive response to their applications. The state has set itself a goal to achieve a target of 50000 devices and 30000 jobs over the next 5 years. The Medical Devices Park is an integral part of the TDP’s NEP strategy to boost the state’s economy.

A PhD student at the University of South Carolina, China, has been arrested for allegedly spreading false information about the COVID-19 pandemic. The student, identified as Li Wenliang, had been given a warning by the university for disseminating false information. The university later apologized for the mistake and released the student, who was later found dead in his room. The incident has sparked outrage in China, with many people criticizing the government's handling of the situation and calling for greater transparency in reporting COVID-19 cases. The student's death has been widely shared on social media, with many people expressing their condolences and calling for justice. The incident has also raised concerns about the government's handling of sensitive information and the potential for censorship in China. The incident has sparked protests in various cities across China, with people calling for greater transparency and accountability in the government's handling of COVID-19 cases.
After Paswan

With the Dalit leader’s death, Sonowal could either be the beneficiary of a sympathy wave or stand forlorn. Will LJP survive?

As one of the tallest Dalit leaders of a post-Mandal India, Paswan had built a national party like the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) and the Janata Dal United (JD-U). His brand, inspired by the untouchability of caste and untouchability of caste, had surged far beyond the traditional Dalit voter base. He had not only carved out a space for the Dalits in Indian politics but also created a identity that could appeal to progressive sections across the spectrum.

Similarly, Nitish Kumar had played a crucial role in transforming the erstwhile Congress stronghold of Bihar into a bastion of Lok Janshakti Party (LJP). His strategy of bringing together the backward castes and the middle-class households in the state had proven to be a masterstroke.

Sonowal believes that with the untimely death of Babulal, a major step has been taken to snatch away the lotus symbol from the RJD. He wants to take the momentum in the state to make it the main opposition force. With the LJP having already merged with the JD-U, he intends to create a new matrix of power in the state. Sonowal, who has been a key figure in the JD-U and later in the LJP, has been instrumental in transforming the party's fortunes in the state.

The LJP, which was formed in 2005 by Jitan Ram Manjhi, had initially supported Nitish Kumar in the 2005 Bihar assembly elections. The party had made a significant impact, laying the groundwork for Nitish Kumar to become the Chief Minister. It had also made it possible for other key players, such as the Janata Dal United (JD-U), to gain a foothold in the state. Sonowal, who had been a close aide of Manjhi, believes that the LJP can play a critical role in the state elections.

However, Sonowal’s ambitions may face some challenges. The LJP has a long way to go in terms of building a strong organizational base. The party has been accused of being a collection of factional interests, and its leader, Chirag Paswan, has been criticized for his divisive politics.

Letter to the Editor

Freedom of expression within limits

A Rightful assertion of democracy is that the citizens of a country have the right to freely express their views and opinions. This is a fundamental right that is enshrined in the constitution of almost every democratic country. However, this right is not absolute and is subject to certain limitations.

In India, the right to freedom of expression is guaranteed under Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution. However, this right is subject to certain restrictions, such as when it is likely to incite ethnic, religious, racial or caste enmity or likely to lead to public denigration.

The recent incident involving Sushant Singh Rajput and the ongoing case against the late actor’s family members is a case in point. The family members have been accused of using the actor’s death for political gain and spreading false information.

While the government has a responsibility to maintain law and order, it is equally important to protect the right of citizens to express their views and opinions. The government should ensure that any actions taken are proportionate and do not infringe on the fundamental rights of individuals.

Market expansion

India has witnessed a significant increase in market expansion in recent years. With the growth of e-commerce platforms and the rise of start-up culture, the market is becoming increasingly competitive. Companies are looking to expand their market reach and tap into new customer segments.

However, this expansion has also led to increased competition and price wars. Companies are struggling to differentiate themselves and provide value to customers. In such a highly competitive market, companies need to focus on offering innovative products and services that meet the needs of their customers.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the recent incident involving Sushant Singh Rajput and the ongoing case against the late actor’s family members is a case in point. The government should ensure that any actions taken are proportionate and do not infringe on the fundamental rights of individuals. Companies need to focus on offering innovative products and services that meet the needs of their customers.

For MSMEs, getting relief from the Government without registering is not possible because the latter is accountable to keep a record of who has been helped and by how much.

The Minister’s sector needs orientation and formulation and it can more easily communicate the fact, the aids and payments are recordable through digital mapping and inventories, which gives the banks sufficient control over its clients and, in turn, a generation of better financial credit. Loans can be sanctioned with collateral and controls with links to the Govt’s and private data. Services can be provided even to a lull of the lot. The banks have to look at the very aid, not to carry out digital lending in vogue for both banks and borrowers. The Government may be able to reach a bit of the market for the purpose of giving some authentic solutions to spreading the awareness of MSMEs.

For instance, the Reserve Bank of India’s (RBI) has been selling forward foreign exchange to MSMEs. But it is unclear how the banks are leveraging this facility. In cases where banks have been found to be not following the guidelines, the CRARs have been imposed to keep a record of who has been helped and by how much. FIGHTING BACK HARD

Have you ever felt depressed, anxious, worried, or suicidal? This vexed feeling of being depressed can drain your energy; it can make it difficult for you to muster your strength. As many say ‘snap out of it’ can we really do that? On World Mental Health Day, a few stars in showbiz — Shama Sikander, Nandini Rai, Punarnavi Bhupalam, and Saba Saudagar — speak to The Pioneer’s SHIKHA DUGGAL on how they’ve grown aware of their problems, dealt with them calmly, and have emerged victorious over such dejected feelings and share tips on how one can stay constructive during these gloomy times. It’s time we break the stigma around mental health.

#MentalHealthMatters: FIGHTING BACK HARD WITH RESILIENCE

Battling the blues

Both supported by her close family, Shama Sikander has never shied away from talking about mental health. Stalking mental health issues taking a backseat amid all the noise that’s going on in broadcasting channels, makes her believe that humiliating in looking towards a dangerous proposition. However, she feels it’s her responsibility to help others suffering from mental health disorders and share her story to help them live. Shama says mental health issues need to talk honestly about such illnesses. She came to know how it feels. When a body part gets injured we rush to the hospital, the doctor is different too we are unable to treat it because of the stigma attached. She must fight this deadly disease together. Add a start with talking and move around by engaging in a healthy conversation. Small steps can lead to major changes. She believes that needs to be compartmentalised. We must fight this deadly issue together. And it starts with talking about mental health. Watching mental health issues take over generalisation, met the right medical practitioner, and pushed myself to see the good. I could see a change!

Let’s talk about it!

Nandini Rai and the catatonic days

Two long years of waking up every day with depression, isn’t it a terrible feeling? In a bid to tell others that you can turn things round, Shama was on the verge of giving up on her dreams. I was on the verge of giving up on my dreams. I was on the verge of giving up. That is not acceptable. When I was interning along with the woman of the Miss Andhra Pradesh title was an experience that made a mark on her life. Although she has been along in the acting profession for a few years, she has given her autobiography to the world. She is self-thought, she is self-care and self-love. She looks at life managing to rough out. Having a mission, instead, she chose to fight back hard. She shares, “I have come from the lowest point and won the battle. I’ve chosen to fight back hard.”

Saba’s mission of finding relief

If you are a leader in our country, the construction on mental health is a very difficult. Our treatment for mental health issues needs to be compartmentalised. We must fight this deadly issue together. And it starts with talking about mental health. Watching mental health issues take over generalisation, met the right medical practitioner, and pushed myself to see the good. I could see a change! Hence, all goals are worthy of recognition and all success worthy of celebration, most things.
