KOLKATA INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL DEFERRED TO JANUARY

The Kolkata International Film Festival (KIFF), scheduled to be held in November, has been deferred to January next year due to the COVID-19 pandemic, West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee said on Thursday. Initially the 26th edition of the KIFF, with limited number of visitors, was scheduled to be held from November 5 to 12. It will now be organised from January 8 to 15, 2021. Banerjee posted on her twitter handle, "After receiving global film fraternity's consent, I hereby inform all stakeholders of Kolkata International Film Festival & cine lovers that our festival has been rescheduled, given the current circumstances. 'It will now be held from Jan 8-15, 2021. Let the preparations begin!'

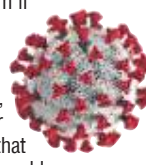

PAKISTAN WOMAN GANG-RAPED AFTER BEING SOLD BY HUSBAND

A woman in Pakistan's Punjab province was allegedly sold for rupees 5,000 by her husband to four persons who gang-raped her for 21 days. The incident took place in North Sargodha, some 200 kilometres from Lahore. The suspects took her to their place and gang-raped her for 21 days before she managed to flee and reached the local police station. The woman on Wednesday submitted an application in the sessions court Sargodha after police refused to file a case against her husband and four rapists. Additional sessions judge Muhammad Ijaz issued a notice to district police officer Sargodha and sought a report on the matter on November 2.

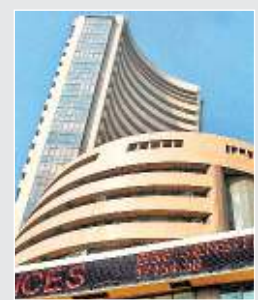

SOME RECOVERED CORONAVIRUS PATIENTS MAY STILL CARRY VIRUS

Some recovered COVID-19 patients may still carry the novel coronavirus, according to a new study which recommends that people leaving quarantine avoid close contact with others, wear a face mask, and possibly undergo an additional test to confirm if they are free of the virus. The study, assessed 131 COVID-19 patients who met the World Health Organization (WHO) criteria for discontinuation of quarantine, and found that close to 17 per cent of them, who were considered fully recovered, tested positive for the virus in follow-up screening. "Our findings indicate that a noteworthy rate of recovered patients with COVID-19 could still be asymptomatic carriers of the virus," said study co-author Francesco Landi from Fondazione Policlinico Universitario in Italy.

US TO SCRAP COMPUTERISED LOTTERY SYSTEM FOR H-1B VISAS

The Trump administration has proposed to scrap the computerised lottery system to grant H-1B work visas to foreign technology professionals and replace it with a wage-level-based selection process, a move that is expected to counter the downward pressure on the wages of US workers. A notification on the new system is being published in the Federal Register on Thursday. Stakeholders have 30 days to respond to the notification, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) said on Wednesday, less than a week before the US presidential election. Replacing the computerised draw of lots to decide on the successful H-1B applicants, the DHS said it is expected to help counter the downward pressure on the wages of American workers that is created by an annual influx of relatively lower-paid, new cap-subject H-1B workers.

TS among top 5 states with lowest unemployment rate

NAVEENA GHANATE
HYDERABAD

The unemployment rate since the unlock process in the state has gone down to 3.3% in September from nearly 5.8% in August, as per the Centre for Monitoring Indian Economy. During the lockdown months - April, May and June, Telangana reported 6.2%, 14.7% and 10.6% unemployment rate. Post re-opening, the numbers in the state went down, as the unemployment rate in July and August were around 5.4% and 5.8% respectively.

Telangana has overtaken Gujarat in unemployment numbers. Gujarat, which had an unemployment rate of 1.9% in the past, registered 3.4% in October. Only Assam (1.2%), Chhattisgarh (2.0), Odisha (2.1%) and Karnataka (2.4) are ahead of Telangana as per CMIE. The unemployment rate in the state is much below the all-India estimate of 6.7% at the same time.

The unemployment rate is slowly coming down also in Andhra Pradesh, which was at 6.4% in September, though it was 7.0 in August and 8.3 in July. During April and May i.e. during the Covid-19 induced lockdown period, the unemployment rate in Andhra Pradesh was at 20.5% and 17.4% respectively. Krishank Manne, TRS leader said, "These figures from CMIE itself explain Telangana standing low at the unemployment rate faring exceptionally well than prominent states. It was achieved only because of the Government's focus on creating job opportunities and skill training."

Demand for contract jobs high in Hyderabad

HYDERABAD: Hyderabad is among the top three cities which recorded the highest postings for contract jobs between January and July this year. The city is preceded by Bengaluru and Mumbai in top three positions, according to a new report by job search portal Indeed.com. However, when compared to previous years, all three cities witnessed overall de-growth from last year. While the demand for contract workers has risen steadily since January 2020, month on month comparisons between 2019 and 2020 showed that hiring for contract jobs more than doubled in June and July this year, at 110% and 143% respectively.

'Dharani', a trendsetter: KCR Telangana to assign geographical coordinates to lands

PNS ■ HYDERABAD

Chief Minister K Chandrashekhara Rao said on Thursday that the path-breaking Dharani, one-stop portal for all matters concerning land transactions across the State, would emerge as a trend-setter for the nation.

Addressing a gathering after inaugurating the portal at Moodu Chintalapally in Medchal-Malkajigiri district, the Chief Minister said: "Gone are the days when people, particularly farmers, had to make the rounds of various offices for land transactions, including registration and mutation, often greasing the palms of corrupt officials."

Telangana had achieved tremendous progress in all sectors of the economy, including power, agriculture, industry and irrigation, KCR said. Dharani portal was an important step towards resolving issues pertaining to lands across the State.

Acting on a petition filed by a Telangana activist Gavinolla Srinivas, the green tribunal made it clear to the AP government that it should not go ahead with the construction of Rayalaseema lift scheme, unless it obtained all clearances from the Centre, including environmental clearance.

It also directed that the AP government submits a detailed project report (DPR) to the Ministry of Jal Shakti and unless the project report is approved, it cannot take up construction work.

Isn't Google violating users' rights by 'controlling' choices?

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

A parliamentary panel on Thursday questioned "neutrality" of Google when it is engaged in both advertising and content, and asked was it not violating fundamental rights of users by "controlling" their choices.

Top executives of the search engine appeared before the Joint Committee of Parliament on the Personal Data Protection Bill and responded to queries related to data security.

Gitanjali Duggal, Google's

director and head of legal in India; Aman Jain, head of government affairs and public policy; and Rahul Jain, manager of public policy and government relations, deposed before the panel, headed by BJP MP Meenakshi Lekhi.

"They themselves are the platforms, sellers and news agencies. And Google itself has the control button to which information will come first, which will come later or which news will flash and which will be suppressed. So how it can be a neutral platform?" Lekhi told PTI after the meeting.

Members of the panel, including Congress MP Vivek Tankha, BJP MP Rajeev Chandrasekhar and BJD MPs Bhartruhari Mahatab and Amar Patnaik, posed a number of queries to Google representatives.

EAMCET eligibility criteria relaxed for this year

NAMRATA SRIVASTAVA
HYDERABAD

The eligibility criteria for students who qualified in the Telangana State Engineering, Agriculture and Medical Common Entrance Test (TS EAMCET 2020) have been relaxed only for this year.

This is in response to Wednesday's orders from the Telangana High Court, which recorded the statement of State EAMCET-2020 counselling. The court had directed the authorities concerned and the Jawaharlal Nehru Technological University, Hyderabad (JNTU-H) to postpone the second phase of counselling, scheduled to be held between October 29 and November 5, to enable students (presently rendered ineligible) to appear for counselling.

AP slashes liquor prices, cites smuggling

PNS ■ VISAKHAPATNAM

In an interesting U-turn after exponentially increasing the prices of liquor, the Andhra Pradesh government has cut the prices of medium and higher category of Indian Made Foreign Liquor on Thursday in view of increased cases of inter-state smuggling.

The reduction in prices of these liquor brands ranged from Rs 50 per 180 ml to Rs 1,350 per bottle. The new rates will come into force with effect from Friday, a government order said.

The government defended its decision stating that it was aimed at smuggling of high-value brands from other states as pointed out by the Special Enforcement Bureau in its report.

Initially, the government drastically reduced the number of liquor shops and bars. The government also took over liquor business stating that this would eliminate the business of belt shops in rural areas.

Subsequently, the government abnormally increased the liquor prices up to 75 per cent, hoping that it would bring down the liquor consumption in the state. It also imposed restrictions on people stating that one cannot possess more than three bottles. However, the measures led to massive inter-state smuggling.

Covid-19 norms, the TS Health Department is focussing on prevention of the second wave.

Health Department officials emphasized the need to strictly follow Covid-19 norms to prevent another wave. They urged people not to roam in crowds. It is important to create awareness among people by taking the help of women organisations.

LIQUOR SALES DURING DASARA FETCHES RS 812 CRORE

PNS ■ HYDERABAD

Bringing much relief to cash-starved state government, the Excise Department's revenue crossed Rs 2,218.65 crore mark up to October 27 and is all set to cross Rs 2,500-crore mark by end of the month. Every month, the sale of liquor, beer and other alcoholic beverages is put at Rs 2,200-2,300 crore. The excise revenue that would have been earned by the state government in a month was earned up to October 27.

On account of Dasara, owners of liquor shops, bars, clubs, restaurants, tourism hotels have made heavy purchases from Telangana State Beverages

Development Corporation netting the state government revenue of at least Rs 812.24 crore in just four days. These establishments started lifting their stocks from the corporation from October 22 for Dasara, which fell on October 25. There are over 2,216 liquor shops, over 1,000 bars, clubs and tourism hotels in the state. The daily sale of liquor would be of the order of Rs 80-90 crore. However, on October 22, the corporation sold liquor and beer worth Rs 305.96 crore. As per the statistics available with the Excise Department, Telangana has a total of 2,211 wine shops across the State and had faced a loss of Rs 4,000 crore during the lockdown period from March 22 to May 5. However, after Unlock 1 phase, the State received an income of Rs 1,864 crore in May and Rs 1,955 crore in June in spite a 20 per cent hike in the liquor price. People of the State had earlier preferred consumption of beer compared to IML (Indian made foreign liquor) but after Unlock 1, the sales of beer had rapidly declined.

A total of 29.7 lakh beer cases were sold in August last year whereas only 16.8 lakh beer cases were sold this year. Telangana has a total of 19 liquor depots across the State from which liquor is distributed to all the wine shops in the State. The Nalgonda and Khammam districts located near Andhra border witnessed the highest liquor sales as liquor in Andhra had limited sale due to the pandemic. Wanaparthy district saw a 119 per cent rise in liquor sale while the Warangal urban saw 96 per cent growth in liquor sale compared to last year.

An analysis of the inflow of illegal liquor into State of Andhra Pradesh during the period of one month — from September 15 to October 15 — revealed that 1,211 cases of smuggling have been registered, out of which 630 cases were in respect of smuggling from Telangana, 546 cases in respect of Karnataka, 24 cases in respect of Odisha and 11 cases in respect of TN. The most smuggled liquor brands are in the category of medium and premium segments. The report points to the large difference between the MRPs of medium and premium liquor brands, observing that the prices of some brands of liquor in AP are more than double the MRPs prevailing in Telangana and Karnataka.

"The report therefore suggests reduction in the MRPs of medium and premium brands of liquor so as to prevent smuggling of liquor in these segments and consequent drain of the revenues of the State," the order said.

The government also reviewed the matter and noticed that apart from an increase in the smuggling of liquor into the State, there have been unfortunate deaths due to consumption of sanitisers and methyl alcoholic preparations.

"With this exercise, about 1.45 lakh crore acres of land in the State now have clear titles. This was not an easy task, but one which we had to take up," he said.

Developed by the Telangana State Technical Services (TSTS) Department, Dharani comprises two separate parts for agricultural lands and non-agricultural lands.

Going forward, the revenue portal was bound to have an impact across the country since both the Union and other State governments would be under pressure to introduce similar measures to ensure transparency in land dealings and simplify procedures, the Chief Minister surmised. "Even before the formal launch of the portal, during the trial run in the past three to four days, officials reported heavy traffic since thousands of people not just from the State but also from other countries were accessing Dharani as they were keen on knowing the functioning of the portal and its uniqueness," KCR said.

The portal would facilitate hassle-free transactions, be it registration or mutation, and everything could be done with minimum human interface. The entire process should not take more than 20 minutes, he pointed out. The Chief Minister claimed that there was no scope for fraud in registration and other matters as the

Pointing out that the State government had taken up various innovative measures to address problems and issues faced by Telangana immediately after achieving statehood in 2004, CM said he always disagreed with people who described Telangana as a backward region. "No, it is not a backward region. It has all the potential to lead the country on all fronts and we have proved this post State formation," he said, adding that the per capita income in the State had more than doubled from Rs 63,000 in 2011-12 to Rs 2.28 lakh now, indicating progress and prosperity.

new revenue system had taken away discretionary powers of the officials.

A state-level control room would be set up to address technical issues. Similarly, a district level technical support team would resolve issues arising at the district level. Property buyers and sellers had also rushed for slot booking to eventually go ahead with property registrations.

There was huge traffic for slot bookings for property registrations on Day-1 across the state, since property registrations had been suspended in Telangana for nearly two months from September 8 to enable the launch of Dharani portal, which is designed to make all property transactions completely online.

KCR launched the Dharani portal at around 12.45 noon. Anxious property owners, buyers and sellers rushed to log on to the portal in no time. The portal failed to open till 7 pm. With much difficulty, some users could access the portal at around 7.30 pm. Even then there was no relief as initially none of the links could open as the portal had crashed.

Internet users were also anxious as they could see only 'Agriculture lands' link on the website and there were no details about 'non-agriculture properties'. However, officials clarified that it may take 10 to 15 days more to upload details of non-agriculture properties on the portal.

Upon clicking the agriculture link, the portal redirected users to the home page again, causing anxiety among users. Some thought they now have to go round the landing page and drop-down menus in circles, instead of going round revenue offices.

However, by 8.30 pm the portal started functioning effectively.

Upon clicking the agriculture link on the main page, users found four sub links: slot booking for citizens, land details search, prohibited lands, encumbrance details, view market value of lands for stamp duty. All these links opened faster and delivered details by 8.30 pm bringing respite to users. Chief Secretary Somesh Kumar said that the property registrations would resume from November 2 across the state through Dharani portal.

four revenue Bills.

The legislation paved the way for landmark reforms in the Revenue Department in the state, mainly by reducing human interface for land transactions. As part of the reforms, the government scrapped the posts of village revenue officers (VROs) and village revenue assistants (VRAs). The registration process, which was suspended on September 8 to facilitate the transition, will resume on November 2 when the offices re-open after Milad-un-Nabi and weekend holiday.

Dubbak victory no big deal for us: KCR

PNS ■ HYDERABAD

Exuding supreme confidence that the Telangana Rashtra Samiti would continue its winning streak, Chief Minister K Chandrasekhar Rao said on Thursday that winning the Dubbak bye-election was not a big thing for the pink party. Victory for TRS in Dubbak was a foregone conclusion, he suggested, while talking to media persons after launching Dharani portal. KCR said that the TRS candidate would win with a good majority.

The Chief Minister said that registration of non-agriculture assets would start within 15 days. He asked people to register their plot as non-agriculture asset. People had the option to hide details of their plot in Dharani portal, he said. The government would handle even complicated issues such as owners losing their conclusive titles, he assured. The government was setting up Dharani portal's back-up servers in various states. Dharani portal's back-up would be kept secretly at many places, KCR added.

EAMCET eligibility criteria...

The HC order concerned students of Telangana Open School Society (TOSS) and those who were to write the Intermediate Public Advanced Supplementary Examinations, but were instead promoted with 35%. Apart from those who secured 45% marks, the orders relaxing criteria will apply to students who have passed Intermediate examination and those who could not take the examination, but were awarded 35% marks.

This year, the state government promoted several students without conducting the exams and they were awarded minimum marks. Thus, many students who qualified in the EAMCET could not get the ranks as they failed to meet the eligibility criteria of 45 per cent marks in Intermediate.

As per rules, TS EAMCET candidates should obtain at least 45 per cent marks (40 per cent in case of candidates belonging to reserved category) in the subjects specified taken together at 10+2 pattern, except for B Pharmacy course.

This is a one-time measure in the wake of the ongoing pandemic situation.

According to sources, some panel members asked them the search engine is "controlling the choices of your users, isn't it violation of fundamental rights?"

During the meeting, MPs cutting across party lines asked how can Google be a "neutral platform" when it is engaged in both advertising and content, and how is it possible that it does not give "preferential treatment" to some advertisers in search results, sources said.

Some members also posed questions whether data being processed and stored in the country of origin or somewhere outside, sources said.

Noting that Google has a wider presence and available on different forms on the web, some members said it "has the power to affect the choices of its users" and that needs to be checked.

The members stressed that regulations are required for the safety and processing of data, according to sources.

A few MPs also posed queries about Google's linkages with public relations and image makeover agencies for positive public profiling of individuals on the web by suppressing critical content against them, sources said.

Besides Google, representatives of Facebook, Twitter, Amazon and Paytm have deposited before the panel.

Representatives of telecom operators Reliance Jio and Airtel and cab aggregators Ola and Uber have been asked to appear before it.

from the day of commencement till September 30. Over 13,500 domestic flights were handled during the same period. Sources say the growth rate of Hyderabad Airport post commencement has been impressive compared to other airports in the country.

Billed as the world's third fastest-growing airport in the category of 15 million passengers in the world, it is one of the busiest airports in the country and the best-connected in south and central India. In the first few weeks post commencement of domestic operations after a gap of two months, the daily passenger footfall was 3,000 but the same surged to over 20,000 in September.

Hyderabad Airport has also seen an uptick in the ATMs from about 40 daily ATMs in the first few weeks of the restart, to over 230 domestic flights daily. The RGIA regained its 52 destinations out of 55 destinations before Covid, thus restoring about 95 per cent domestic connectivity till August. The airport was handling 550 air traffic movements and about 60,000 passengers daily before the Covid-induced lockdown came into effect in March.

With a new domestic destination - Jagdalpur in Chhattisgarh from September 21, RGIA is now connected to 53 destinations in the domestic sector. Nagpur, Mangalore, Kozhikode/Calicut and Jabalpur are the latest destinations which recommenced in the last four weeks. Metro cities like Delhi, Kolkata, Chennai, Bengaluru and Mumbai remain the top five destinations. The top three airlines who are serving the domestic traffic from Hyderabad International Airport are IndiGo, SpiceJet and Air India.

Though all commercial operations were suspended in March with the imposition of lockdown, RGIA continued to handle evacuation flights operated by various countries for their citizens. It subsequently handled evacuation flights under the Vande Bharat Mission and the Air Transport Bubble agreements initiated among various countries. Under the Air Transport Bubble arrangement, Hyderabad International Airport is now connected with the United Kingdom, United Arab Emirates (Dubai, Abu Dhabi and Sharjah), Qatar and Bahrain.

6 arrested for trying to sell leopard skin

PNS ■ MANCHERIAL

In a joint operation, sleuths of Task Force, Special Branch and Devapur police arrested six persons for allegedly trying to sell leopard skin at Gunduguda village in Kasipet mandal on Thursday. The accused were identified as Gopathi Vamshi, Sikram Gangu, Jupaka Durga Prasad, Shaik Jameel, Wajid Khan and Avula Sai Krishna.

Gangu admitted that he contacted his friends Gopati Vamshi who in turn approached his cousin Murali for disposing the skin of the carnivore which was reportedly poached by Shankar in the forests of Mangi, a fortnight back. He confessed that Shankar then handed over it to him and Gangu.

The six revealed that Murali deployed his friends for checking the quality of the skin and whether it was with Gangu. Accordingly, Gangu, Vamshi, Prasad, Wajid, Jamil and Sai Krishna were detained when they were on their way to see the skin hidden in the forests.

Students tense with sodden books before exams

Many students are suffering as their notes and books have been spoilt in the floods. With exams final exams of last semester coming closer and no notes or text books, students fear if they will be able to clear the exams this year.

S Chandu, a III year mechanical engineering student of JNTU Hyderabad, whose house was affected in the floods, shares that his father won't be able to buy him another set of books now. "The pandemic took a financial toll on my family, so asking for new books from them would be a burden. During the floods all the notes I had prepared for this and last academic year have been spoilt. I have no text books left either. When I called my faculty, they said they can't help me.

The final exams of last semester exams are coming in November. We have mid-term exams for this semester in December as well. I am not sure what to do. I have asked my friend s for help, but I am not sure how many marks I can score now."

same issue." Balmoori Venkat, State President of NSUI, shares, "We have been asking the government to postpone exams. Even if one student is affected due to the rains it's unfair to conduct the exams. I hope they would listen to us at least once."

Teaching doctors agitate over delay in PRC changes, arrears

Teaching doctors are agitated over delay in rolling out PRC changes and arrears despite approval from Telangana cabinet. ‘Can excessive media reporting hinder justice?’

PNS ■ MUMBAI

Mumbai, Oct 29 (PTI)The Bombay High Court on Thursday asked the Union government to clarify whether "excessive" reportage by the press on an ongoing investigation amounted to interference in the administration of justice under the Contempt of Courts Act.

A bench of Chief Justice Dipankar Datta and Justice G S Kulkarni asked the government to state by November 6 if such reportage adversely affects the probe and subsequent trial, and if the court should lay guidelines on media reporting.

"If there is excessive reporting, that can put an accused on guard, and he may resort to destroying evidence or absconding. Or if that person is actually innocent, the excessive media reporting can damage his reputation," it said.

"We would not like the media to cross its boundaries

"We would not like the media to cross its boundaries and we would also like to be within our boundaries," the court said and asked the state if such reportage would amount to interference and we would also like to be within our boundaries," the court said and asked the state if such reportage would amount to interference and if the government thought the HC had the jurisdiction to frame guidelines.

"Whether excessive reporting by media in an ongoing investigation amounts to interference in administration of justice under Section 2(c) of the Contempt of Courts Act and should we lay guidelines? This is the issue before us,"

HC said.

It also asked the government's counsel, Additional Solicitor General (ASG) Anil Singh, to consider scenarios where such reportage on an ongoing probe, where a charge sheet was yet to be filed, influenced the investigating officer, or resulted in a witness being threatened.

It asked if the court must step in and formulate guidelines to regulate the press to avoid such scenarios.

"If media identifies that a person is a very vital witness, he could be won over, threatened, or he could be even physically harmed so that he does not give evidence," it said.

On the possibility of the press influencing an investigating officer, the HC said, "Think of a police officer. Can anyone guarantee that he will not be influenced?"

"He may be following a particular track. Media says no no this must be the track. He loses track and rounds up an innocent person," it said.

The alleged fake TRP scam came to light after ratings agency Broadcast Audience Research Council (BARC) filed a complaint with Mumbai police through Hansa Research Group, alleging that certain channels were rigging TRP numbers to lure advertisers.

Maha govt directs GRP to fine commuters travelling sans masks

In a bid to check the spread of COVID-19, the Maharashtra government has directed the Government Railway Police (GRP) to impose fine on commuters found without masks in local trains and on stations here, an official said on Thursday. In a letter to GRP Commissioner Ravindra Sengaoankar, state disaster management department director Abhay Yawalkar has said the fine will be in line with the circular issued by the Municipal Corporation of Greater Mumbai (MCGM) on September 9, or any further circular issued by the civic body. The MCGM currently imposes a fine of Rs 200 on people found without masks in public places. "The state bequeaths powers to the Government Railway Police to impose fines on commuters found to be travelling without masks in the local trains or inside the station premises," Yawalkar said in the letter. In order to avoid resurgence of COVID-19 cases, it is imperative that all related protocols are followed by commuters, the letter said.

EC orders removal of Munger SP, DM over violence

The Election Commission Thursday ordered immediate removal of the District Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police of Munger over violence during goddess Durga idol immersion that had left one dead and scores injured, officials said. The poll panel has also ordered an inquiry into the entire incident by Magadh Divisional Commissioner Asangba Chuba Ao, an election commission statement said. The probe has to be completed within a week. Rajesh Meena is District Magistrate and Lipi Singh is SP of Munger. The EC statement said Munger will get a new DM and a Superintendent of Police Thursday itself. One person was killed and over two dozen others, including security personnel, were injured in firing and stone-pelting during goddess Durga idol immersion late Monday night.

HM Amit Shah condoles death of Keshubhai Patel

Union Home Minister Amit Shah on Thursday condoled the death of former Gujarat chief minister Keshubhai Patel and said his long public life was devoted to the service of the people of the state. Patel died in Ahmedabad after prolonged illness. "I have received the sad news of the death of former Chief Minister of Gujarat Keshubhai Patel. His long public life was devoted to the service of the people of Gujarat. With the death of Keshubhai, a void has been created in the politics of Gujarat which is not going to be filled easily. My condolences to his family," Shah tweeted in Hindi. The home minister said Patel, while in the BJP, played an important role in strengthening the party in Gujarat and as a trustee of the Somnath Temple, he always supported the development of the temple.

Mayawati suspends seven rebel MLAs

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

BSP leader Mayawati suspended seven of her party's rebel MLAs who had opposed the nomination of its official candidate Ramji Gautam for the elections to the Rajya Sabha. Amid speculation that the MLAs could switch sides in Uttar Pradesh, Mayawati also said that to ensure defeat of Samajwadi Party candidates in future MLC elections, her party will vote for BJP or any other party's candidate.

She said as soon as the rebel MLAs join any party, the BSP would take action against them under the anti-defection law. She said the party organisation has been informed that the suspended legislators should not be invited to any party function.

SC stays summons to Delhi resident over objectionable post

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court has granted an interim stay on summons issued to a Delhi resident, accused of allegedly making an 'objectionable' Facebook post against the West Bengal Government, by an investigating officer in the state.

A bench of Justices D Y Chandrachud and Indira Banerjee said the court should restrain the exercise of judicial review in the matter of police investigation. However, it must safeguard the fundamental right to the freedom of expression under Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution.

There is a need to ensure that the power under section 41A CrPC is not used to intimidate, threaten and harass, the bench said. Section 41A of

CrPC deals with notice of appearance before a police officer. "We are, however, of the considered view that to require the petitioner at this stage to comply with the summons under Section 41A during the pendency of the proceedings before the High Court would not be justified in the facts as they have emerged in this case. "Hence we grant an ad-interim stay against the implementation of the direction of the high court requiring the petitioner to appear before the Investigating Officer at Ballygunge Police Station," the bench said. This is subject to the condition that the petitioner undertakes to respond to any queries that may be addressed to her by the Investigating Officer and, if so required, attend to those queries on the video conferencing platform with sufficient notice of twenty-four hours, the apex court said.

Senior advocate Mahesh Jethmalani, appearing on behalf of the petitioner, stated that the petitioner would cooperate in all respects though after the order of 5 June 2020, no query was addressed to the petitioner, despite five months having elapsed since then.

Venkaiah bats for stronger, greener India

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Vice President M Venkaiah Naidu on Thursday said development and environment conservation should go hand in hand as "we not only need a stronger India but also a greener India".

He also urged finance commissions and local bodies to encourage green buildings through tax incentives.

The vice president said it is time to consider making all new buildings to mandatorily go green and environment friendly.

Inaugurating CII's Green Building Congress, he said existing buildings too should be retrofitted to make them environment friendly by adopting green practices that promote energy efficiency and water conservation.

He termed sustainable buildings as an important component in building resilient communities and called for extensive use and promotion of low carbon technologies. "We not only need a stronger India but also a greener India," he said according to an official statement.

Drawing attention to the increasing number of extreme climate events such as droughts, floods, and wildfires, Naidu said climate change is as real as daylight and countries all over the world must adopt drastic and revolutionary measures to mitigate the problem of global warming.

Calling for the sustainable approach to development, the vice president said the challenge is to marry development and environment.

"If we take care of nature, the nature in turn will take care of the mankind," he said.

Left govt on the backfoot after Sivasankar's arrest

PNS ■ Thiruvananthapuram,

The arrest of suspended IAS officer M Sivasankar by the Enforcement Directorate has put the Left Democratic Front government and the CPI(M) in Kerala in a spot at a time when the state is getting ready for the crucial local body and assembly polls.

The Left party and its leaders cannot simply wash their hands off the development by saying Sivasankar, said to be a close confidant of Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan and once the most influential official in the CMO, was just one among the several civil service officers in the state cadre, according to political observers. Sivasankar, the former principal secretary to Vijayan, was on Wednesday arrested by the Enforcement Directorate in connection with the controversial gold smuggling case, after over six hours of interrogation by the ED, probing the money trail in the case. The arrest has given the opposition - Congress and BJP - an unexpected political weapon to attack Vijayan, heading the lone Communist government in the country.

Breaking his silence, actor Rajinikanth on Thursday said he has been advised against entering politics by doctors as he had undergone a kidney transplant and due to the coronavirus pandemic.

Rajinikanth said on his twitter handle that though a statement - that hints that he may reconsider his political entry given his health condition - doing rounds in social media was not from him, the content related to his health status and doctors advise to him "is all true."

PDP leaders stage protest; arrested

PNS ■ SRINAGAR

Several PDP leaders were on Thursday detained by police as they tried to stage a protest against the new land laws notified by the Centre for Jammu and Kashmir. PDP leader

Khursheed Alam, party spokesman Suhail Bukhari and youth president Waheed Parra were among those detained by police as they came out of the party's Srinagar office at Sher-e-Kashmir Municipal Park, officials said. The party leaders wanted to hold a protest rally against the amendments made to the land laws of the Union territory by the Centre on Tuesday which allow people from other parts of the country to buy land in the region. The mainstream parties of Kashmir have decried the amendments and termed the move akin to putting Jammu and Kashmir up for sale.

PDP president Mehbooba Mufti tried to reach the PDP office, but was asked by the police to return to her residence.

Delhi court closes defamation complaint against Kapil Mishra

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

A Delhi court has closed a criminal defamation case against BJP leader Kapil Mishra after he tendered an unconditional apology to AAP leader and Delhi Health Minister Satyendar Jain.

The complaint was filed by Jain against Mishra in 2017 for his defamatory statements against him and Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal.

The case was closed on Wednesday after Mishra agreed to tender an unconditional apology before Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Vishal Pahuja.

"It is submitted by the accused (Mishra) that he is ready to make a statement before the court tendering unconditional apology. Complainant (Jain) also submitted that in case the accused gives his statement before the court, he shall withdraw the present complaint," the Court recorded.

After recording the statement of Mishra, as well as Jain, the Court disposed of the defamation complaint as withdrawn.

In a press conference held in 2017, Mishra had accused Jain of handing over a bribe of Rs 2 crore to Arvind Kejriwal.

Jyotiraditya's test

The MP bypolls would prove if he can indeed get even with former CM Kamal Nath and earn his stripes in the BJP

The byelection in Madhya Pradesh may have got swamped by the Assembly polls in Bihar and its results may not threaten the ruling BJP Government in the State. But it is significant in deciding the political future of stalwarts both within the BJP and the Congress. The number game is fairly settled. The BJP currently has 107 seats in the 230-member Assembly, with the support of Independents, Samajwadi Party (SP) and Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) MLAs. So, given its ambition to do without props of any kind and consolidate its position as the single largest party, it would just about need to win nine of the 28 seats going to the polls and cross the half-way mark. The Congress has 88 MLAs after Jyotiraditya Scindia revolted and took 22 loyalists with him to the BJP, toppling the Kamal Nath Government. It would need to win all 28 seats to cross the halfway mark, a tall order, though party hopefuls are arguing that even 20-plus seats could keep it in the running as it could manage the deficit by co-opting smaller parties. This presumptive logic isn't much to bet on. The desperation of the Congress is understandable considering it wants to prove a point to Jyotiraditya that his exit hasn't really affected the party's grassroots matrix. In one word, therefore, the bypolls are his test. He may have defected with his loyalists but can he ensure vote transference with such ease? Particularly when the Congress is relentlessly calling him a traitor, even drawing on his family history to show how the Scindias betrayed Rani Laxmibai. Besides with most of the seats going to the bypolls being located in the Gwalior-Chambal region, which has the highest number of caste atrocities and violence and where the Dalit vote swing matters politically, Jyotiraditya has to have an umbrella appeal to win and not just depend on his legacy. His being in the BJP could actually be a liability as this is a BSP bastion and its people were at the forefront of protests against the dilution of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act in 2018. Besides, the BSP is contesting all seats here this time and unless, as a kingmaker, its chief Mayawati decides whom to side with in the event of a mixed verdict, the going could be tough for Jyotiraditya. Of course, his staunch follower and Dalit candidate, Imarti Devi, whom Kamal Nath insulted, could mop up some of the sympathy votes from the community at the expense of the Congress. The BJP has obliged Jyotiraditya for catapulting it back to power by giving tickets to the rebel MLAs loyal to him. This has not been to the liking of its Chief Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan, who wouldn't want Jyotiraditya to challenge his stature. So the latter has to prove his mettle in his adopted party by ensuring the maximum wins. If he does, his stakes will rise but if he fails, then he could be badly marginalised. As it is, the State BJP campaign is still pivoted around Chouhan and has hardly taken note of the new entrant. This is Jyotiraditya's big chance to prove his political currency and if he fails, he will be of no use to any party. Not even Congress. In fact, if Jyotiraditya succeeds, it would be the most effective message of getting even with Kamal Nath and convincing the grand old party of the need for a generational change. If he does really well, he could even get a Central Ministry, something he has been wanting since he crossed over.

Though the BJP needs single digits to coast home, Chouhan wants to win at least half of the seats to show that he is not dependent on Jyotiraditya's clout. Having conceded tickets and ministerial berths to the young leader's group following Central pressure, the Chief Minister wants to show he is in command. But Chouhan is caught between the criticism of his handling of COVID-19 and the challenge from Union Agriculture Minister Narendra Singh Tomar, who has the blessings of the Central party leadership to undercut him. As far as Kamal Nath is considered, the bypolls are his last chance to take another shot at chief ministership. But with below the belt attacks and scolding a woman legislator, he may have just scripted his own downfall. Kamal Nath has an axe to grind with Imarti Devi, who is a Jyotiraditya Scindia loyalist and defected with him to the BJP. In fact, the sexist remark against her came days after and probably as a hitback to her accusation that Nath bribed MLAs when he was Chief Minister, that he gave cash doles of ₹5 lakh to Congress MLAs who could not be granted ministerial posts. In retrospect, her needless victimisation only drew attention to his greed for power by managing numbers. Of course, the seasoned politician he is, he knows how to work the arithmetic in case of an adverse scenario. But the old-style politics may not work at a time when the BJP won't be sparing any resources either to ensure that one party-rule flows from the Centre to other States.

DU imbroglio

The power tussle between the Vice-Chancellor and the Pro-VC only harms the most prestigious university

Delhi University (DU) is not only India's largest and most prestigious Central university, home to several top colleges of the country, it is also the most politically active. However, what is happening in DU right now is unprecedented in its 98-year history as President Ram Nath Kovind has ordered an enquiry against Vice-Chancellor Yogesh Tyagi on the grounds of "misconduct" and "dereliction of duty." Tyagi has been suspended till the probe is completed since he can influence the investigation while in office. Much of this has been precipitated by the health of the Vice-Chancellor, who had to be admitted to AIIMS on emergency grounds back in July and a Pro-VC, Professor PC Joshi, had to be appointed. However, after Tyagi returned to work, he tried to invalidate several appointments made by the Pro-VC, even those that had been cleared by DU's Executive Council. The row escalated when Tyagi appointed Professor PC Jha as the interim Registrar despite the Union Ministry of Education's claims that the new order was not effective as the VC was still on leave while issuing it. However, the Executive Council resolved that Professor Suman Kundu would continue as Director, South Campus and acting Registrar till a permanent Registrar was appointed. This was followed by Tyagi removing Professor Joshi as Pro-VC and appointing Geeta Bhatt in his place. Meanwhile Joshi had notified the appointment of a new Registrar, Vikas Gupta, whose interview had been completed and appointment cleared by the Executive Council. This is a truly bizarre and ridiculous situation, particularly when the 2020-2021 academic year is about to start. By initiating an enquiry against Tyagi and completely clipping his wings, his term is as good as over. However, the Ministry should take its fair share of the blame here. When the V-C was admitted to hospital in an emergency condition, it should have stepped in to put a system in place. At the same time, it has consistently overlooked past lapses flagged against Tyagi, including not filling vacant positions, delay in redressal of sexual harassment cases and vigilance complaints in university, mishandling of the issue of ad-hoc teachers, which led to a massive agitation, and non-submission of detailed plans for implementation of the Institution of Eminence (IoE). The last straw came in the form of certain appointments he made while being on medical leave.

This mess needs to be immediately rectified by the Ministry and if Tyagi is to be removed, a new V-C must be found post-haste. This is a situation that is unprecedented and if elections and a pandemic were not ongoing, this would be the top headline of the day. This development is not surprising after decades of Ministers and bureaucrats striking at the autonomy of Central universities. Institutions of higher learning thrive when they are allowed to function independent of the Government and where the V-C is prided for his integrity and not seen as a political appointee.

REENA AMOS DYES

In mid-October, a 17-year-old girl, Neema (name changed) was found by the Uttar Pradesh (UP) Police in a dazed state, hungry and delirious. Sold to traffickers by her poverty-stricken parents, on the advice of "well-meaning" neighbours in her village in Madhya Pradesh, the teenager had escaped from her tormentors in Delhi. Neema walked and hitch-hiked for three days to cover a distance of 200 km before she was spotted by concerned passersby and the police in Hathras. Unaware of her whereabouts and determined to reach home, she was still 794 km short of her home in Mandla district when she was rescued. The girl told the police that there were 12 other minors like her, confined to one room in Delhi. Fortunately, they all managed to escape.

Neema is not the only child from her village to have been trafficked. Several others like her have been sold by needy parents. This story is repeated over and over again in India, particularly in rural areas. India is starving and its children are bearing the brunt of this hunger. They are being sacrificed at the altar of the crippling poverty that has worsened because of the sucker punch delivered to the already tottering economy by the Coronavirus. As feared by the experts in the field of rescue and rehabilitation of trafficked children, the number of minors, particularly girls, sold to traffickers for as little as ₹10,000-₹50,000, has grown alongside the number of people rendered jobless by the pandemic. As a result, desperate parents, having to choose between survival of the family for a little while longer and their love, chose the former. So many girls and boys were sold to traffickers across the country.

This is despite the fact that Articles 23, 39, 14 and 21 of the Constitution guarantee every child freedom from exploitation in any form. The Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956 was enacted in pursuance of the International Convention signed at New York on May 9, 1950 and it was amended in 1986 to widen its scope to cover all citizens. However, according to rights advocates, the Act has glaring lacunae as it fails to define the term "traffic" or "trafficking" and aims to penalise those who aid and abet commercial sexual exploitation. Therefore, its focus on the def-

Nobody's child

Fuelled by a pandemic-hit economy and the lack of personal accountability, India's child trafficking problems have further worsened initiation of the term brothel leads to the inference that commercial sexual exploitation takes place only in a brothel and not in other places, such as in a house. The Act is clearly not victim-centric as women and children, who are forced into prostitution, are also treated as criminals and arrested when raids are conducted.

Similarly there are several other laws to protect the rights of children, such as the Commissions for Protection of Child Rights Act, 2005, the Right of Children to Free and Compulsory Education Act, 2009, the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences Act, 2001. The rights of child labourers can be adequately secured only if the monitoring and controlling provisions contained in the said statutes are fully implemented. However, they are not despite the Supreme Court insisting upon their applicability.

In 2013, the top court lamented that despite its directions, little or no progress was made by the States in protecting the rights of children. Thus, we have horror stories emerging from across the country. Desperate children, sold to traffickers by impoverished parents, making hopeless bids to return home to the same parents who pushed them into the hell in the first place.

Though Neema and several others like her have escaped for now, not everyone is so lucky. Thousands of children are being trafficked globally for initiation into the sex trade, to be recruited as bonded labour, drug runners, child terrorists or human shields. The International Labour Organisation has predicted that with the pandemic ravaging economies globally, the world may witness an increase in child labour for the first time in 20 years and there is a huge risk of years of progress in this arena being reversed. First, it was hunger induced by the lockdown that fuelled the trafficking. And now that the economy has opened up, it is the demand for cheaper labour and bigger margins by businesses. Closer home, ever since the lockdown was imposed and then eased a few months later in phases, Delhi-NCR has become a hub of trafficking as more and more children are being rescued from factories and brothels.

The Delhi Commission for Protection of Child Rights rescued 93 children from gold and jewellery factories in Karol Bagh in May. Of them, 57 were below the age of 14 and some were even 10-year-olds. The rest of the children were between 14 and 18. Then in July, nine child labourers were found working at several scrap shops in North East Delhi's Mustafabad. But these rescues are like a drop in the ocean as the lockdown slowed down such initiatives as well. There was a time when only 27 per cent of the Anti-Human Trafficking Units were functional. Thankfully, in September, 36 children under 14 years were rescued from bangle-making units in West Delhi's Jahangirpuri area where they were made to work for 15 hours a day and sleep in the same dingy room. All lured or sold on the promise of food and a roof over their heads.

Nobel laureate Kailash Satyarthi, Chairperson of NGO Bachpan Bachao Andolan, estimates that in Delhi, "at least five lakh children are in full-time jobs. That means every sixth child is out of school and working somewhere."

Every time we hear such statistics, we are shocked and angry. Even more disturbing is the fact that these children are there in our midst, suffering abuse, hardship, deprivation and long hours of work in dingy, dark and polluted places where they have no business to be. We are blissfully ignorant of this invisible, silent and hapless workforce. The tiny factory workers, who are well hidden from our sight, toil to pander to our penchant for buying things at discounted prices, the cheaper the better. But we are content sweeping our collective guilt under the carpet, simply because they do not torment us visibly.

We do know that certain industries traditionally employ children. Like bidi factories, the carpet industry, the garment sweatshops, incense and firework factories, brick kilns, the farm sector and so on. But when buying these products, do we ever take the pain to ensure that the brand that we are purchasing has nothing to do with child labour? It is our demand for cheaper products that in turn creates the demand for child labour as businesses then can keep the cost of production down and their margins up. We don't bother to boycott goods over unethical trade practices. If we did so, the factory owners would have revised their norms. So, by extension, we are as guilty as the perpetrators of the crime of trafficking and hiring child labour.

And what about child labourers, who are staring us right in our faces? What of the minor hired to "baby-sit" children? Or the ubiquitous chotus (apprentices/assistants) all over India, selling chai at the local tea shop and even delivering it to our offices and at the railway station? What of the little boy cleaning the car in the neighbourhood, his little hands and muscles straining to carry a heavy bucket full of water? Or the shoeshine boy, the child manning a roadside dhaba, serving food to customers? Have we ever bothered to question the people who hire them or even inform the law enforcement authorities about their presence? Clearly we do not want to get out of our comfort zone and easily attribute it to a societal crime, without realising we form the society that condones it. We could have picked up the phone and called the NGOs and rights activists who can help the child in distress. But we don't do that either.

And what about children caught in the sex trade? If people stop watching child pornography, there will be no market for it. If men stop violating minor girls for a price, there will be no market for it again. So, on all counts, society is as guilty as the criminals who traffic children.

Apart from a mindset change, there has to be community alertness and personal accountability by each citizen. There must be non-Governmental and Government intervention to ensure that hapless parents do not take the extreme step of trading their children for a dole. There is no time to be lost, else a nation will forget the meaning of bachpan.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Poor football

Sir — As per the Centre's guidelines, many cinema halls are re-opening. However, the football remains in single digits. Currently, the halls are permitted to operate with 50 per cent capacity; one seat between two persons is to be kept empty to ensure social distancing. Other mandatory norms include wearing of masks, applying sanitisers, compulsory thermal scanning, adequate ventilation and freezing temperature settings of all air conditioning at 23 degree Celsius or above. Even with strict guidelines in place, people are extremely hesitant to visit the theatres. Also, no big-time releases are slated for now as it is preposterous to imagine a producer or an actor risking his/her fortune during such crucial times. Over the months since the lockdown, the loyal film audience has adapted to online streaming apps. Adjusting to big screens again might take some time. Also many are cutting on expenditure owing to their financial stress.

The cinema hall owners, too, are in a quandary because of the financial losses they have been bearing due to the complete clo-

Punjab makes a point for its farmers

The Punjab Assembly has passed three farm Bills as the farmers' protests against the recently passed farm Acts intensify. The Central laws are silent about the Minimum Support Prices (MSP) for agricultural produce. Sale of produce to the private traders, companies, corporates and other agencies cannot take place in the Agricultural Produce Market Committees (APMC) mandis anymore, and levy of fee for trades has been prohibited. Thus, farmers have no option but to approach the courts for dispute resolution. The thought of a takeover of the agriculture sector by traders using their financial power is haunting the farmers.

According to the State Bills, "no sale or purchase of wheat or paddy shall be valid unless the price paid for such agricultural produce is equal to or greater than the MSP" announced for the two crops. And if an individual or a company or any other agency compels or exerts pressure on a farmer to sell the agro-produce at a price below the MSP, then such person shall be deemed to have committed a punishable offence. The Bills also have a provision to levy a fee on trade platforms outside the markets established under the Punjab Agricultural Produce Markets Act 1961 to fund welfare activities. These proposed amendment Bills are not just meant to counter the Centre's laws but to save the peasantry of Punjab.

Defence agreement

Sir — On October 27, India and the US signed the Basic Exchange and Cooperation Agreement (BECA) to further military ties between the two countries. India will now be able to keep an eye on the movements of Chinese warships in the Indian Ocean Region (IOR). BECA will help us get real-time access to American geospatial intelligence that will enhance the accuracy of automated systems and weapons like missiles and armed drones. Sharing information on maps and satellite images will help us gain access to topographical and aeronautical data. The signing of the long-negotiated defence pact comes against the backdrop of a tense border standoff with China in eastern Ladakh. The increasing defence and security partnership between the two nations will help monitor the situation in the Indo-Pacific at a time when China is attempting to expand its economic and military clout in the region. In June, India and Australia had signed a pact allowing their militaries to access each other's bases. A similar agreement with Japan also came to fruition last month after years of negotiations. It is also hoped that the sharing of technology will contribute significantly towards bringing India closer to the lofty goal of atmanirbharta in the defence sector.

Make the right policy choices

A continued prosperity for nations will only be achieved by allowing and championing a global open market for trade, goods and digital services

KUMARDEEP BANERJEE

It is festival time globally, and not just the religious and fun variety but also the vital festival of democracy or elections. It is for the first time in our lifetimes that festivities, mostly associated with huge crowds jostling to reach the ballot box or bedi (the pedestal on which the idols of deities are kept), are taking place in the shadow of a raging global pandemic. Forced departures from well-known rituals associated with festivals make these times a case study for future generations. Many would have seen a video on social media of an idol being immersed using mechanised trolleys, with least human intervention, in the recently-concluded Durga puja festivities. Now switch to the theatre of democracy in Bihar, where Assembly elections are being held. The common thread between the two festivals is, technology. Bihar, would perhaps be the first State in the country where technological interventions played a key role in the elections.

First, the Election Commission (EC) allowed online filing of nominations for candidates and many political parties chose to reach out to their constituents through virtual rallies and put up huge LED walls for public viewing. Given the absence of many veterans active in Bihar elections for at least three decades, most of the young scions of the colourful, vociferous and politically-influential families were suddenly catapulted to the centrestage of a new narrative. This young brigade of Biharis, technologically more versatile than their parents, sought votes on issues. Something hitherto unheard of in a State, known for its divisive caste and religious biases. It was surprising to see rival candidates promise lakhs of jobs to young voters in a State grappling with the problem of the jobless migrant labourers.

The most welcome aspect of this election has been the reliance on technology in a State which could well be a case study on the digital divide between India and Bharat. Many statisticians will point to a survey which revealed that more than half of Bihar's women and around 40 per cent men have no access to mass media. This, when extrapolated over digital media, means a significant part of the population can either be completely insulated from the impact of technology or could be the next addressable unconnected millions, who need to be put on the information technology expressway of prosperity.

Now let's jump across the Pacific to the US, which, too, is about to witness one of the fiercest and cacophonous elections on November 3 amid the COVID threat, deaths and economic destruction. The common binary binding Bihar elections, Durga Puja festivities and US elections is again, technology. After all, the new dominance game and the race to be a global superpower is now increasingly getting defined by your first tap on a smartphone, first digital payment/electronic transaction, first contact-free shopping for world-class brands from the comfort of your home and perhaps the first digital date after months of trying to understand each other's typos and abbreviated texts.

Therefore, restrictions on digital applications, depending on the country of origin, to applying the same principles to hardware solutions in technical infrastructure, to forming an alliance of like-minded technology fraternity of nations were some of the key highlights in the election campaign of the two presidential candidates of the world's richest democracy. What it also highlighted was the fact that increasingly, the physical restrictions (read policies) of trade and commerce dominating economic relations between a bunch of nations will now be enthusiastically copy-pasted in the digital arena to prevent loss of sovereign powers and dominance at the global high tables.

COVID has put the spotlight on public policy issues, which, till February, were still in advanced stages of intellectual discourses. It has challenged our ability to adapt and eventually recover from the disease. And the only sector which has truly helped this advancement is technology. It reacted quickly and ensured teachers, parents and children were handed online course materials for seamless academic learning and doctors were given online tools for initial digital health interventions for patients. It gave the Government effective platforms for interaction and empowered it to push critical policy goals. Technology enabled digital live darshans of beautiful but deserted pandals and online delivery of prasad for the religious, too. If the human race has been pushed ahead by three decades in one stroke by the lockdown and technology has taken centrestage, it is also time to think and refresh many global policy challenges and perhaps release an update. Policymakers have to realise that imposing strict restrictions, based purely on case-by-case models, and having a physical worldview of digital policy issues can be self-defeating in the long run. A continued prosperity for nations will only be achieved by allowing and championing a global open market for trade, goods and digital services. It must be kept in mind that the new normal for policy-making at sovereign-level negotiations must be dictated by a set of principles. This must be compulsory in all digital agreements between consumers and technology providers, governments and their counterparts across borders. A multi-lateral approach must be championed. It is time to click on the right button.

Graft-free governance

A metrics-based system for oversight over governmental processes will bring transparency and spur digital innovation to make any administration robust without inhibiting public interest

RAJESH RANJAN

Among the issues in public discourse that have caught the attention of the country is the problem of corruption, which elicits strident criticism. The issue has triggered a slew of reforms aimed at strengthening the fabric of integrity, like the enactment of the Public Procurement Bill, the Lokpal Act incorporating, inter alia, the public disclosure of assets by public servants, reforms in higher judicial appointments and so on. While anti-graft activists differ in terms of strategies and focus areas, there is a unanimous acceptance of the fact that technology and e-governance promote greater transparency. The rationale is very simple. Deny the opportunity for manual manipulation and replace it with technology, crafted around well-defined protocols and legal safeguards with minimal human intervention.

It has been five years since India adopted the UN's 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Corruption in general and venality in public life in particular adversely affect the fulfilment of these SDGs. Therefore, a proactive and preventive vigilance regime forms the backbone of good governance and is critical to their realisation. How then do we make governance more effective without inhibiting its objectives? Today, administrative affairs grapple with leakages in public delivery of welfare and development goals on account of manual processes that can be manipulated. But by leveraging technology, these leakages can be plugged. Incremental improvements to technology should continue to be the mainstay of advancements in administration.

In the recent discourse on procurement methods, transparency of policy, procedure and practices is increasingly being seen as an imperative of using public monies to remove any allegations of opacity and inconsistencies in decision-making. Achieving transparency ensures that procurement is open to public scrutiny, which results in best value for public monies. For example, the transparency of procedure as achieved in online applications is one of the simpler yet effective features of digitisation, as it shifts the onus of submitting correct information and data to the applicant. This, once verified by the public servant, retains the maker-checker wedge in a direct way.

In an effort to plug leakages in procurement systems, the Government launched the Government E-Marketplace (GeM) in 2016 as an end-to-end marketplace for goods and services required by Central and State Governments as well as Public Sector Undertakings. As per an assessment by the Centre for Public Impact, the savings impact of GeM has been substantial, wherein a maximum price reduction of approximately 56 per cent of goods and services, coupled with demand aggregation, has already led to savings to the tune of ₹40,000 crore annually. Given the fact that the public procurement economy constitutes about 20 per cent of India's GDP, it is imperative to build on this initiative through amplified efforts and bring as many goods and services on board as possible. And in order to make the platform more robust, addressing the issue of quality control should be the next level of sophistication that GeM should aspire for.

In the next 10 years, the business of Government will experience massive disruption. This comes on the back of technological enhancements that reduce the need for intermediaries and ensure that the sanctity of process remains unimpeachable. One such technology which has been discussed widely in recent times is blockchain. A NITI Aayog discussion paper has identified use-cases where the technology can potentially improve governance, ranging from tracing of drugs in the pharmaceutical supply chain to verification of education certificates. The three key principles of the blockchain technology are: Transparency, decentralisation and accountability.

“HOWEVER, A SIGNIFICANT FACTOR IN BLOCKCHAIN'S SUCCESS WILL BE A COUNTRY'S ABILITY TO DEVELOP/REFORM LAWS AND BUILD ROBUST DATA PROTECTION AND MAINTENANCE REGIMES. TILL SUCH TIME WE ADDRESS THESE ISSUES, BLOCKCHAIN IS NOT LIKELY TO HAVE A MONUMENTAL IMPACT IN CREATING AN INTEGRITY-FIRST GOVERNANCE ECOSYSTEM”

One of the most interesting areas of intervention for this technology would be in the space of land records. Ever since the Permanent Settlement of Bengal in 1793, the issue of land records has occupied the administration and citizenry with its complexities, misgivings and fraud. The system is riddled with inefficiencies that reduce trust in the Government. Currently the UNDP is involved in certain Proof of Concept (POC) pilots across India. The underlying theory intends to create an immutable history of transactional records that helps in checking authenticity; a tamper-proof system to avoid forgery; a distributed ledger so that all stakeholders see the same information; and a secure encrypted environment, where updates are available in near real time. The NITI Aayog paper also identifies this value proposition. For example, the paper notes that, in order to ensure that transactions are not fraudulent, the physical presence of witnesses is mandated at the time of sales deed registry. Deployment of blockchain would potentially eliminate the need of these processes while maintaining the sanctity of the transaction.

This helps create a tamper-proof audit trail that allows for tracking decision-making and ensures that they are in accordance with anti-corruption principles. It addresses concerns around cyber security. Currently there are interesting pilots being conducted across the world, where deployment of blockchain is being tested for public procurement, wherein systems are being built in to identify graft with a view to disincentivise corrupt actors from accessing the system at the outset.

From the perspective of Internal Controls and Governance (Vigilance), it is strongly recommended to employ a five-part test while assessing such deviations from process: Whether the issue being pursued has corrupt connotations; the general reputation of the employee involved; whether better options were available and ignored without valid reasoning; whether the situation inhibited the selection of any other option but the one finally chosen and finally, whether the larger interest of the organisation was safeguarded or not.

Deployment of technological solutions like blockchain can potentially remove the need or significantly reduce the time taken for making such assessments. In a recent paper released by Denmark's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, titled Code to Integrity, the authors have highlighted how blockchain can be a powerful tool in the fight against Government corruption. The report cites case studies of countries like Kenya, Rwanda and Ghana where Government records pertaining to court systems, education and land rights are migrating to distributed ledgers.

However, a significant factor in blockchain's success will be a country's ability to develop/reform laws and build robust data protection and maintenance regimes. Till such time we address these issues, blockchain is not likely to have a monumental impact in creating an integrity-first governance ecosystem.

The general environment now is in favour of a regime which ensures that companies not only do profitable business but do so in a manner which is ethical. The United Nations Convention against Corruption, ratified by India in 2011, as well as the anti-corruption principles expounded by the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) cover a wide gamut of vulnerable areas and aspects of business operations, including anti-bribery, public procurement and conflict of interest. More and more countries in the coming years will be obliged to establish laws and mechanisms in place to ensure clean business operations as well as seize and confiscate assets derived from corrupt practices.

India, too, needs to review its existing legal framework to address issues around data security, corrupt practices and corporate governance with a view to address our anti-corruption objectives and provide the necessary guidance to well-intentioned officials in the Government.

The Centre made a significant change to the Prevention of Corruption Act in 2018. The element of intention has been added under definition of criminal misconduct. Similarly, broadening the definition of "unfair advantage" and introduction of corporate criminal liability will go a long way in apprehending or deterring bad actors on both sides from indulging in bribery. The amendments also have ensured that our obligations under the UN Convention against Corruption are adequately addressed and bring us closer to leading anti-bribery legislations in the world such as the UK Bribery Act.

While these amendments will go a long way in guiding the work of internal control agencies, it would be important to institutionalise a system, wherein compliance against said legislation and established processes can be checked and quantified. A metrics-based system for oversight over governmental processes will bring transparency, build trust and spur further digital innovation to make any administration more robust without inhibiting public interest-oriented decision-making.

It would be incorrect to end this discussion without addressing the well-intentioned public servant who finds the processes leading to greater transparency and ensuring value for taxpayers' money cumbersome and time-consuming and who is, therefore, tempted to short-circuit it. Well-intentioned though it may be, but any attempt to overwrite the processes, despite even demonstrable honesty of purpose, carries the major risk of opening up the system to misuse by corrupt players and would lead to eventual loss of public trust and decimation of the structure of public procurement. Thus, the intent of processes involved is to keep the proverbial Caesar's wife above suspicion. Through robust yet streamlined procedures, a bureaucrat can achieve the intended outcome and avoid unintended consequences.

Nurture e-retail in a post-pandemic world

This approach would be in keeping with the Centre's focus on a Digital India where citizens are able to leverage their connectivity into better opportunities

MOHIT CHAUDHRY

Most nations imposed some form of shutdown to limit the spread of the Coronavirus. India's lockdown, which involved a near cessation of all movement and economic activity, has been rated as one of the most stringent across the world. Not surprisingly, it had a severe impact on our economy.

A sector that was hit particularly hard is retail. This is due to several reasons. First, shops and warehouses were closed during the initial phases of the lockdown. This brought the operation of both physical and digital retailers to a standstill. Second, restrictions on inter-State movement of goods and the opening of only specific industries disrupted supply chains. For instance, the Centre recognised both medicines and processed foods as essential goods and allowed their sale. However, similar status was not granted to units which manufacture the packaging for medicines and processed foods. Hence, sellers of these goods found it difficult to operate. Third, the system of issuing passes and permits to personnel working for physical and digital retail was not well-implemented. It was unclear which authority would issue the passes and for how long they would remain valid. Further, personnel having to travel across districts were required to obtain separate passes from the authorities for each district. Fourth, the Ministry of Home Affairs issued an order directing all employers to ensure full payment of wages to all employees even if they were unable to work.

As a result of the order, several migrant labourers returned to their towns and villages once restrictions on movement of persons were lifted. A survey of retailers selling their products online, conducted as part of the Esya Centre's report on e-commerce, shows that nearly 60 per cent of such entities will be unable to recover losses suffered because of the lockdown. Given that people are likely to be wary of entering shops and stores even after lockdowns are eased, it is important to explore different avenues through which retail outlets can avoid further losses.

One such avenue is e-retail. A report by Global Trade and Regional Integration Unit of the World Bank highlights the utility of e-commerce in the post COVID normal. Not only can e-commerce help reduce the risk of new infections and preserve jobs, it can also increase the acceptance of prolonged social distancing measures among the population. Further, previous research has shown that there are numerous benefits for MSMEs that adopt e-commerce, in the form of better price discovery, access to new consumers, support with logistics and inventory management. It is in recognition of the above that several nations, such as the United Kingdom and New Zealand, have given preference to digital forms of retail both during and after the lockdown. However, India is one of the few countries that has not leveraged the numerous benefits that e-commerce brings, particularly during a lockdown.

Policy-making towards e-commerce, both before and during the lockdown, may have hindered the operation of e-commerce entities. Prior to the lockdown, legacy government rule-making on e-commerce presented several barriers to the growth of the sector. These included ever-changing FDI rules, unresolved issues of data localisation and source code disclosure as well as the over-regulation of platforms. During the lockdown, the Government failed to adopt a clear and consistent approach to policy formulation vis-a-vis retail. As an example, both physical and digital retailers were only allowed to sell essential goods in the initial phase of the lockdown. This continued till about mid-April, when the Government issued a notification which allowed e-retailers to deliver non-essential items from April 20. In conformity with this order, e-commerce firms began to make predations to resume their full scale of operations. However, on April 19, the Government withdrew its notification, seemingly under pressure from industry organisations that represented small and medium traders. Subsequently, relaxations regarding delivery of non-essential items were first given to physical outlets while e-retail continued to be limited to essential items for 8-10 days thereafter. The zonation framework introduced by the Government additionally preferred physical outlets in Red zones, as they could sell a wide range of merchandise while e-retail tasks were limited to essential goods.

As pointed out, e-commerce enjoys numerous advantages over physical retail, particularly in a situation where social distancing continues to be important. Hence, there is a need to provide a policy environment that fosters the uptake and adoption of e-commerce by both consumers and sellers. To achieve this, we recommend a five-step recovery process. The first steps are geared towards fostering an atmosphere of trust and credibility between the Government and market entities.

This can be achieved by holding regular consultations, opening avenues for feedback and providing sufficient notice before major changes. Further, policy actions should not skew competition between physical and digital business models. Instead, both models should be allowed to leverage their respective strengths. Finally, the Government must reassess what it seeks to achieve through its proposed e-commerce policy. In the current scenario, a policy framework governing e-retail or e-commerce in general, should look to assist small enterprises in capacity-building for a digitally enabled future through the provision of finance, skill development and underlying infrastructure. There is, therefore, a need to move away from legacy regulatory institutions, based on licensing and control, to an entity that actively participates in capacity-building and development of small and medium retailers in India. In this context, it is worthwhile to explore the role being played by digital economy development authorities in countries such as Malaysia and Vietnam, which actively promote the adoption of digital solutions and e-commerce for SMEs as well as consumers. This approach would be in keeping with the Government's focus on a Digital India where citizens are able to leverage their connectivity into better opportunities and prospects.

Eight core industries' output contracts 0.8 pc in September

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Contracting for the seventh consecutive month, the output of eight core infrastructure sectors dropped by 0.8 per cent in September, mainly due to decline in production of crude oil, natural gas, refinery products and cement.

The production of eight core sectors had contracted 5.1 per cent in September 2019, data released by the Commerce and Industry Ministry showed on Thursday.

The decline in output during the month under review was lowest since March.

Barring coal, electricity and steel, all sectors -- crude oil, natural gas, refinery products, fertiliser and cement -- recorded negative growth in September 2020.

During April-September, the sectors' output dropped by 14.9 per cent as compared to a growth of 1.3 per cent in the same period of the previous year. The output of crude oil, natural gas, refinery products, fertiliser, and cement declined by 6 per cent, 10.6 per cent, 9.5 per cent, 0.3 per cent, and 3.5 per cent, respectively.

On the other hand, the coal, steel and electricity sector output grew by 21.2 per cent, 0.9 per cent and 3.7 per cent, respectively, during the month under review.

Commenting on the numbers, Icria Ltd Principal Economist Aditi Nayar said, the substantial improvement in the core sector performance in September 2020 was driven by the base effect-led uptick in coal production, related to heavy rainfall and labour issues in some mines in September 2019. With improved mobility of people and goods, the contraction in refinery products halved in September 2020, an encouraging trend that may continue in the immediate term, she said.

"While many lead indicators have displayed signals of a strengthening economic recovery in September 2020, we caution that the sustainability of the upturn may not be universal, and await signs of its durability," she added.

BP pitches for infra sharing with cos like ONGC

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Ahead of starting the next wave of gas production from the KG basin, UK-based super-major BP Plc has pitched for oil and gas producers sharing their infrastructure to help cut costs and monetise small and marginal discoveries.

BP, which in partnership with Reliance Industries Ltd is investing USD 5 billion in developing three sets of discoveries in the Krishna Godavari basin block KG-D6, also wanted sanctity of contracts to be honoured and policy stability.

Speaking at the India Energy Forum of CERWeek, BP's India head Sashi Mukundan said policy and decision making must support raising domestic oil and gas production by adopting best international practices. He also made a case for offering incentives for doing better than targeted production rather than imposing penalties.

One of the things that surprised me when I came to India was that you don't see upstream companies working together and sharing infrastructure," he said, giving an example of a hub called Nikara that BP and Royal Dutch Shell have created in the Gulf of Mexico.

PLEXCONCIL targets $25 bn shipments

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Plastic export promotion council PLEXCONCIL said it expects positive growth in the sector's outbound shipments in the coming months on the back of global demand and government support to boost local production and looks to achieve exports of USD 25 billion by 2025.

He said that exports recorded positive growth in September, "so we expect this trend to continue and plastics exports will post much better results. The council intends to target plastics' exports of USD 25 billion by calendar year 2025, while posting 20 per cent growth in the exports during this fiscal and next".

He added that the government is supporting to increase domestic production by setting up of 18 plastic parks.

Talking about challenges faced by the sector, he told PTI

Plastics Exports Promotion Council of India (PLEXCONCIL) Chairman Ravish Kamath said that exports are growing as customers in Europe and the US are looking at India as a reliable supplier that finished goods are waiting in factories and cannot be exported due to shortage of containers, which is leading to expiry of LC's (letter of credit) and breaching of delivery schedules.

"This will greatly affect credibility of Indian exporters if not corrected very quickly. Similarly, as India is import dependent on polymers, import shipments are not getting loaded at ports in Europe, and the US for India due to which a panic situation has arisen doubting the availability of raw materials on time," he said.

This has led to an unprecedented hike in polymer prices, specially for PVC Resin wherein India produces only 45 per cent of its mammoth consumption, he added.

Kamath suggested the government to continue with the export incentive scheme -

MEIS (merchandise export from India scheme) and fixation of liberal refund rates for the sector under RoDTEP (Remission of Duties or Taxes on Export Product (RoDTEP)).

He also stated that availability of polymers at competitive prices in India is a challenge for the sector boosting its domestic production would help adequate availability of polymers in the country at competitive rates.

"India does not have any trade agreements with any of these regions / countries due to which our exporters are unable to compete. If the government can forge a trade agreement with these regions / countries, our exporters would be able to increase exports," he said.

TALE OF THE BANARASI BABU

Few actors in the entertainment industry have always mesmerised the audiences with their outstanding performances! Fewer of them have successfully created a huge impact. One such actor, who has proved his dedication towards the craft by delivering a flawless performance is Gagan Anand. Tinsel town's rising star Gagan has been enthralling viewers all over the country with his charming looks and versatility ever since he released the teaser of his upcoming web series Bicchoo Ka Khel. This multi-talented actor, through his different qualities, has left the audience wanting for more. He talks to SHIKHA DUGGAL on his journey, his latest projects, dream role and more

What made you take up this project?

Dark roles always fascinated me. This is a very complex character with unlit undertones of revenge, sexuality and politics. Apart from my character, the overall story and dialogues are so cool that I couldn't say no to it. Ashish Shukla is the director of the series and he's as humble as can be. I saw Undekhi earlier, it really made me want to work with him. His main focus has always been to extract incredible performances from his actors.

How was the shooting experience post an extensive lockdown?

With proper precautions and norms laid by the government, we started shooting. I was extremely happy to resume shooting. We've come back with even more positive energy for the shoot. Everybody is taking precautions and wearing protective gears, sometimes leading to confusions about who's who. We are very positive and I hope everything will go smoothly. We are coming to meet our audiences!

Tell us something about your character and how you prepped for it?

I am playing an assassin who is hired to kill people. In real life, I am a man of few words but reel life differs, I was asked to adorn a Banarasi accent. I did a couple of readings with the dialogue writer and worked religiously on my physique. Due to the lockdown, the gyms were shut, so I had to work extra for my body and maintain a balanced diet. There will be disputes and money etc., with some startling action sequences. Hopefully, this series will stand out! Will I succeed? To know more about it, wait for me to nail it in Bicchoo Ka Khel.

How was it working with Mirzapur-fame Divyendu Sharma?

Amazing fun — he is a great actor and we all know it. Outdoor shoots were even more fun with him. Though we were running on a busy schedule in Banaras, he always managed to find time to chill after pack-up. We were balancing work with fun!

What's your dream role?

Referred to as the tale of lust and valour, my dream role has always been to play Allauddin Khilji from Padmavat because I look to raise the bar. The character comes across as very royal, opulent, grand and breathtaking. I would love to experiment with an eye-catching look like that, similar to one of the characters from Game of Thrones.

How do you think OTT platforms are changing the dynamics?

Thanks to OTT, I didn't sit at home for even a second in these last two years apart from the lockdown. It has changed our lives drastically! We all have become so busy because of it. Talking about creativity, OTT has given us the liberty to express our thoughts and present it in our own uncensored manner. OTT is absolutely the new flavour of the season and has already been accepted by the audiences.

Fashion Forward 2020

Earlier this week, Hyderabad's upscale restaurant Olive Bistro hosted a dining experience of a different kind. With social distancing being the new and accepted norm for in-house dining, as well as fifty percent occupancy, what better way to ensure it than getting mannequins to occupy a couple of tables? "While mannequins are being used globally at the finest restaurants in Paris, London and New York to ensure social distancing, we at Olive took the trend a step ahead by dressing the mannequins in haute couture," shares Shaaz Mehmood, partner Olive Bistro Hyderabad.

So, couturier Gaurav Gupta, who opened the India Couture Week 2020 conducted digitally this September, (India's first-ever virtual fashion show of this scale) gets to showcase his ethereal wedding gowns in all their drapy silhouettes for a fortnight from now. "We are planning #TheBistroRunway as a bi-monthly affair, so it will be designer duo Shantanu & Nikhil who will get to showcase their collections and going forward, we will be perhaps continuing with other designers," adds Shaaz.

Perceived as a win-win situation for both the designer and the restaurant, it is the closest one can get to a physical fashion show, minus the models and the ramp walk, of course, in this Covid era.

"It is a brand collaboration of the best kind, the designer gets brand visibility which might get converted to orders and for the restaurant, it adds to both visual quotient and the footfalls, hopefully," opines Rajveer Kaur, marketing and PR professional.

For diners who were invited to this select preview, sipping on their G&T's and chomping Prawn Fritti, fashion zoomed into focus, with the city's best fashion bloggers getting a preview of the season's collections.

For fashionpreneurs like Kamini Saraf, online customisation and fittings are the way forward, although Angasutra, the high-end designer store, which she partners, recently launched physically, the hugely popular online designer shopping portal Pernia's Pop-Up

Studio and is now currently hosting a high-end jewellery showcase by Raj Mahtani. "In the US and Europe designer brands are held liable for size misfits etc. In India, perfection in brands is yet to be realised, therefore I would always prefer physical shopping and customised fittings, wherever possible. Having said that, I don't think I have shopped as much online in all these years as I have done during the pandemic," adds Kamini, who had to forego hosting the triannual Fashion Yatra, for the first time in fifteen years.

"We had a sale of Manish Malhotra's collections at Angasutra, which did fabulously well, but I thought we should also practise some business ethics by not hosting physical exhibitions, especially in cases like Fashion Yatra, which has designers participating from across the country, and in this situation I could not even think of hosting it at all this year," adds Kamini.

But what about recession and the loss of jobs and business revenues, isn't that impacting high-end designer brand sales? "I think the biggest takeaway from Corona is that we are perhaps learning the more humane values of life, like compassion and patience. We have seen bigger struggles this year, people struggling to hold onto their jobs and lives, migrants to their homes etc. And working from home has meant that we are prioritising comfort and our ego of how I should dress up and look my best, has taken a backseat," shares Shivani Mohan, brand hostess of dining app Dineout Passport, and a spiffy dress-bar on socialising and big-ticket events has meant that shoppers like me who feel tempted to buy for every occasion have learnt to rein in temptation and make do with one's wardrobes, recycling and revamping," adds Shivani.

"Online shopping is certainly the way forward and is here to stay," agrees marketing consultant Shailya Mehta Bhandari, who helped design and curate The Pink Flamingo, an online luxury shopping extravaganza, which was hosted by the Ladies Circle of the Round Table, Rotary Club of India recently this month.

The portal offered a great platform for displaying skill sets of locked-down, creative women who had stuff ranging from clothes (both for men, women and children), lifestyle accessories to edibles for showcasing. "Interestingly, we had participants from outside Hyderabad too and while it was initially slated for 3 days, we eventually had sellers exhorting us to extend it for two more days, as they were doing very well. The sale proceeds, which came from the exhibitor's fees went towards a NGO in Domakunda, which offers vocational training to women," adds Shailya.

With Diwali and the marriage season round the corner, can fashion designers still afford to be high-end? "My friend in Hyderabad shopped for an Anamika Khanna outfit from her store in Mumbai and got a whopping 50 percent discount after the designer's team did extensive video calling and back and forth," shares Shailya.

"For any wedding, be it Telugu or Marwari or Punjabi, there is a given budget for brideswear. But I guess the pre-wedding events this year like sanget, mehendi will see recycled wardrobes not just for the families, but also for the bride and groom. Also, fashion industry is hugely labour-intensive and this year, there are fewer collections, and even in pret wear, like Zara and H&M, you see the same old stuff being recycled," adds Kamini.

Clearly this year is not the best place to ve for designers, as prudence will rule for a while, till the vaccine comes along and the economy bounds back. Till then, happy window-shopping for not-so-urgent shoppers and prudent negotiations for the serious buyers!

CHANDINI TO HEADLINE A THRILLER ON LINGUISTIC FORENSICS

The Vizag girl, who is basking in the glory of Colour Photo, will be seen in a challenging and interesting role in the untitled film written by lyricist-filmmaker Krishna Chaitanya, reports NAGARAJ GOUD

Besides being a prominent lyricist who has penned some blockbuster songs, Krishna Chaitanya has proved his range and depth as a script writer with his directorial efforts, Rowdy Fellow and Chal Mohan Ranga. Before he embarks on the ambitious journey of directing his two-part high-voltage political drama, Power Peta, with Nithiin from early next year, the director, The Pioneer has exclusively learnt, has penned a story, which has been picked up by a new production house headed by Charan.

A source close to the development tells us, "It's a female-centric thriller on linguistic forensics. The subject matter is something new to the Telugu audience and Charan is upbeat about it. He has roped in Chandini Chowdary to spearhead it, while debutant Kalyan, a mass communications student who has been an assistant director on multiple films in the recent past, has been signed on to helm it. Chandini has got a challenging and interesting role. She needs to prep extensively for it before filming."

Sam thanks uncle Nag for helping her 'overcome hosting fears'

Samantha Akkineni, who hosted an episode of popular reality show Bigg Boss 4 last week due to the unavailability of her superstar uncle Nagarjuna, dubbed the experience as something she will remember. Taking to her Instagram space on Thursday, the actress, who hasn't watched a single episode of the show before taking over the hosting duties, extended thanks to Nagarjuna for helping her overcome her jitters. "An experience to remember... Never thought I'd be on the Big Boss stage as host! Only because I was given this responsibility by my Mamagaru.. I could find the strength to overcome my fears... the fear that I had no experience hosting, the fear of Telugu.. I had never even watched an episode before.. Thankyou mama for helping me overcome my fears and trusting me with this (sic)," she wrote. Although the critics may have been divided on her hosting skills, she is happy for all the love she received after the episode. "I was jumping with joy And GK Mohan garu for handholding me through a very demanding Maha episode of #bigbossseason4," she wrote further.

Flaunting bridal glow

The wedding festivities of Kajal Aggarwal, who will tie the knot with entrepreneur Gautam Kitchlu today in Mumbai, are at full-swing at her house. On Thursday, she posted a picture from the mehendi ceremony, flaunting the deep colour of henna on her hands. She was dressed in a mint green salwar suit with golden chandbais, while being all smiles for the camera. She captioned the picture stating, "#kajgautkitched".

Balayya-Boyapati film back on sets

Nandamuri Balakrishna's untitled next with Boyapati Sreenu has resumed in Hyderabad on Thursday-nearly eight months after its shoot was put on pause mode due to the pandemic. While the makers confirmed the same, they refused to reveal information about whether Balayya had joined the sets on Thursday or not. The film's team, however, is following safety protocols. The present schedule will go uninterrupted until December 3, with majority of the filming set to take place at Ramoji Film City, Hyderabad.

In the action-entertainer with an underlying social message, Balayya will be seen in dual roles — of which one role is that of an aghora. Expectations are high on this untitled film as it marks the reteaming up of the actor and Boyapati after successful ventures like Simha and Legend in the past. Produced by M Ravinder Reddy, the film has music by Thaman.

Colour Photo wins Jagapathi's heart

Streaming on aha since last week, Colour Photo, fronted by Suhas, Chandini Chowdary and Sunil, continues to be a beneficiary of positive feedback from the industry. After the likes of Ravi Teja, Nani and Sai Tej, the latest to have raved about the film is actor Jagapathi Babu. Taking to Twitter, the senior actor said that the film's success is a testimony to the fact it is heart and soul that makes a film to succeed but not stardom and money. "I am glad this film once again proves that it is not just the currency and stardom that makes movie a hit..it is more heart and soul...most of the times I wonder about what am I doing here when the youngsters are pacing far more ahead in creativity and naturality (sic)," the actor posted on Thursday. Lauding the efforts of the principal team, he added, "Seeing what I believed in. I am totally impressed by watching #ColourPhoto. super kid @SandeepRaaajdid a great job for his age. @ActorSuhas a good actor proved to be a hero, @kaalabhairava7 whom I am really fond of as a person and his sensibilities of music always impresses me (sic)," Jagapathi wrote. Actor Satyadev too posted an appreciation message on Thursday. "Been some time since I've watched a touching love story. Edipinchesaru! Love you my darlings for making a beautiful film. Every department excelled and thus we have a smile," he wrote on Twitter tagging the film's key team.

Allari Naresh completes Naandhi

The filming of Allari Naresh's next, Naandhi, with debutant director Vijay Kanakamedala has been wrapped up, film's producer Satish Vegesna said on Thursday. Before the pandemic forced the unit to take an extensive break of six months, the film was 90 percent wrapped up.

Inspired by a true story, the film follows an undertrial (played by Naresh) brought to Chanchalguda prison, Hyderabad, for a crime that he didn't commit. A hard-hitting social drama, it will draw attention to the torture he faces at the hands of cops and how he finally comes out of the prison. The film, which is Naresh's 57, co-stars Varalakshmi Sarathkumar, Priyadarshi, Praveen, Harish Uttaman, and Devi Prasad in supporting roles. A Sri Charan Pakala musica, it has dialogues by popular writer Abburi Ravi.

Backing experience over youth backfired for Chennai: Lara

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

Chennai Super Kings' unflinching reliance on experience over youth has been their undoing this IPL season, said West Indies batting icon Brian Lara, urging the franchise to give its younger lot a chance in the remaining games. One of the most successful sides in the history of the tournament, CSK are languishing at the bottom of the points table. While most sides nurture youngsters, that has not been the case with the Mahendra Singh Dhoni led side, often referred to as Dads Army.

"I think they (CSK) have got a lot of older players. There are not any young players coming through the line-up. You look at it. Even their overseas players, they have been around for a long time," Lara said on Star Sports' Select Dugout.

"So, they have backed experience over youth, and this has really turned upside down for them," he added.

It is the first time Dhoni and his men have failed to clear the league stage, having managed only eight points so far after four wins.

The three-time champions' poor run this season has put a question-mark on their approach, leading to heavy criticism of Dhoni, who has been accused of not showing enough faith in the youngsters.

"It's just an unbelievable season so far. You know, every time they turn up, we're very hopeful that CSK is going to turn it around," Lara said.

"We all came here thinking this was going to be the time when Dhoni turns things around with his team. And game after game, it just went, and they just kept hoping."

"But it's a situation where they can just try to build from next year. In the few coming games that they have, see what they can do with the younger players they've got," Lara said.

CSK SPOIL KKR'S PARTY

PTI ■ DUBAI

Opener Nitish Rana's 87 and a late burst helped Kolkata Knight Riders get to 172 for five against Chennai Super Kings in an IPL match here on Thursday.Following Rana's 61-ball effort, cameos from skipper Eoin Morgan (15 off 12) and Dinesh Karthik (21 not out off 10) allowed KKR to put up a competitive total. CSK, who pulled things back in the middle overs after a fine start from KKR openers Rana and Shubman Gill (26 off 17), leaked 66 runs in the last five overs.Lungi Ngidi (2/34) was the best bowler for CSK while Sam Curran also bowled well early on.

The KKR innings was built largely on Rana's knock which comprised 10 fours, four sixes.The southpaw mixed caution with aggression and overcame a sluggish period in the middle overs with some lovely shots.Rana hit three consecutive sixes off Karn Sharma in the 16th over to up the ante as KKR looked for quick runs.Sent in to bat, KKR got off to a solid start with Gill and Rana putting on 53 runs for the first wicket.Gill looked in good touch and hit four boundaries before falling to leggie Sharma.Sunil Narine (7), sent in at number three, smashed the second ball for a six and fell four balls later, unable to clear a Mitchell Santner delivery with Ravindra Jadeja taking the catch.KKR decided to send Rinku Singh, who was picked for the first time this season, ahead of Morgan at number four.

Won't be surprised if MS leads CSK in 2021: Gambhir

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

Mahendra Singh Dhoni and Chennai Super Kings owners share such mutual trust and fabulous relationship that he could be retained as captain of the side in 2021 despite enduring an abysmal IPL season in the UAE, says former India opener Gautam Gambhir.

"I keep saying that why CSK is CSK is because of the relationship between the owners and the captain. They have given all the freedom to MS, and MS has received all the mutual respect from the owners as well," Gambhir was quoted as saying by ESPNCricinfo.

"So I would not be surprised if they continue with MS and MS plays till the time he wants to play. And then next year he still continues to be the captain and have a much different squad than what he has this time around."

"He deserves that much of appreciation from the owners."

The 39-year-old Dhoni's future has come under scrutiny in the wake of CSK's mediocre performances in the ongoing IPL.

Gambhir, who flourished under Dhoni's captaincy in international cricket, pointed out his overall record as CSK skipper.

"What he has done for the franchise and how the franchise actually deals with MS and treats MS is a fabulous relationship.

"And that is how every franchise should deal with their captain, who has delivered for them."

Gambhir said, "MS has won them three (IPL) trophies, couple of Champions Leagues, he has made them one of the top successful sides in the IPL after Mumbai Indians.

"So CSK saying they are going to continue with MS — it is just the relationship, it is just the mutual respect.

"That's why MS has been so loyal (to the Super Kings). That's why MS has given everything: heart and soul, his sweat, sleepless nights — I'm sure he must have had sleepless nights while he has continued captaining CSK."

Earlier, the CSK management has said that Dhoni would be retained at the next mega auction, which is likely to be held in 2022.

KXIP meet Royals in must-win game

PTI ■ ABU DHABI

Rampaging Kings XI Punjab would look to extend their exceptional run and inch closer to a Play-offs berth while Rajasthan Royals would be desperate to stay alive in the tournament when the two sides clash, here on Friday.

It has been a dramatic turnaround for the KL Rahul-led side after a string of losses earlier in the tournament.

They have managed to weave together five consecutive wins against the top four sides in the tournament, infusing life into their campaign. They are in fourth position with 12 points from as many games, while the Royals have slumped to the penultimate spot with 10 points having suffered seven defeats from 12 outings.

It's a mad scramble for the play-offs. With Mumbai Indians all but through, six teams are in the hunt for the remaining three spots.

The Royals can't afford to slip up, if they lose on Friday they will be out of the reckoning while a defeat for Punjab will dent their chances for a top-four finish.

They would expect their skipper Rahul, the leading run-scorer of the tournament, to fire in the crucial game after three underwhelming performances with the bat.

The addition of Chris Gayle has done wonders for the team's confidence.

It is to be seen if Mayank

Agarwal, who missed two games with a bruised knee, returns to the side. In his absence, Mandeep Singh revelled in the role of an opener with a match-winning unbeaten 66 in the win against Kolkata Knight Riders.

Punjab's bowling, which has been their weakest link throughout the tournament, has been exceptional in their recent wins, choking the opposition for runs.

The Royals will also be high on confidence after their morale boosting win over table toppers Mumbai and would be desperate to keep the winning momentum going.

The biggest positive for the Royals is Ben Stokes roaring back to form after rusty displays in previous five outings. The English all-rounder, who has been elevated to the role of opener, smashed an unbeaten 107 to help seal a seven-wicket win over Mumbai. Sanju Samson is also back among runs, while Jos Buttler has looked erratic. That skipper Steve Smith is in the middle of a lean patch will augur well for KXIP.

The Jofra Archer-led bowling attack has looked ordinary. The Barbados-born English pacer, who is having a stellar individual season with 17 wickets from 12 matches with an economy of 6.71, has done most of the heavy lifting with the ball without adequate support from the rest of the bowlers.

Jayaram, Subhankar seek to return after withdrawal over Covid-19 contact

SAARBRUCKEN: Indian shuttlers Ajay Jayaram and Shubhankar Dey were on Thursday forced out of the SaarLorLux Open after being put in isolation owing to contact with Covid-19 positive father-cum-coach of defending champion Lakshya Sen, who has already withdrawn.

The 19-year-old Lakshya withdrew on Wednesday after his father D K Sen returned a positive test for the virus.

"BWF can confirm three players have been withdrawn from the SaarLorLux Open 2020 as a precautionary measure for all participants after they were in contact with a member of their team entourage who tested positive for COVID-19," the BWF said in a statement. "The three players: Lakshya Sen, Ajay Jayaram and Subhankar Dey will not compete further in the tournament, which began on Tuesday," it added.

Later, Jayaram, in a Twitter post tagging sports minister Kiren Rijiju, the national badminton federation and BWF, said that he and Dey would like to return to India as the organisers have not given them any information or assistance apart from asking them to isolate.

The Sports Authority of India assured that it will pay for the expenses to be incurred by the two players "for the length of their quarantine in Germany from October 30 to November 10, on humanitarian grounds." "SAI will be paying a total of ₹1.46 lakh for their hotel stay and food expenses and will release 90 percent of the amount immediately," SAI said in a statement.

Pakistan leave out Haider Ali for 1st ODI

Rawalpindi: The Pakistan team management has left out the promising duo of batsman Haider Ali and uncapped Abdullah Shafique in its 15-member squad for Friday's first ODI against Zimbabwe in Rawalpindi.

Vice-captain Shadab Khan was not considered after being ruled out of the first match due to stiffness in his left upper-leg.

Senior batsman Mohammad Hafeez and young fast bowler Mohammad Hasnain were also not picked even though they were named in a preliminary squad, like Haider and Shafique, last week for the white-ball series against the visitors.

Pakistan's top batsman, Babar Azam, will be leading the team for the first time in an ODI series and said he wanted to start his tenure on a winning note.

"I'm keen on winning the ODIs as this is my first series as captain," said Azam.

Marcus Rashford was again the star for Manchester United in the Champions League with a hat-trick in a 5-0 thumping of RB Leipzig on Wednesday as Barcelona put their off-field troubles to one side to win 2-0 away to a Juventus side deprived of Cristiano Ronaldo.

Rashford's late goal earned United a 2-1 victory away to Paris Saint-Germain last week and at Old Trafford, the England striker came on as a second-half substitute and scored three times from the 74th minute on in what was a fine win against last season's semi-finalists.

Paul Pogba released Mason Greenwood to open the scoring in the first half, before the youngster made way for Rashford after the break and Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's side ran away with the game to make it two wins from two in Group H.

Anthony Martial also netted from the penalty spot as United ruthlessly exposed the side who currently top the German Bundesliga and went clear at the top of the section.

"We looked dangerous throughout and that we could score every time we went forward," said Rashford. "It was a real team performance."

Meanwhile PSG got their campaign up and running by beating Istanbul Basaksehir 2-0 in Turkey, although they lost Neymar to an adductor injury in the first half.

Both PSG's goals were scored in the second half by Moise Kean, the on-loan Everton striker heading in Kylian Mbappe's corner in the 64th minute and then turning to fire in the second late on.

BARCA BOUNCE BACK

In Turin, Barcelona bounced back from their week-end defeat in the Clasico against Real Madrid and shut out the boardroom crisis which led to president Josep Maria Bartomeu resigning on Tuesday.

Ronald Koeman's side had luck on their side as they took the lead through a deflected Ousmane Dembele strike and then saw Alvaro Morata have three goals disallowed for offside for the hosts.

The absence of Ronaldo because of a positive coronavirus test meant no chance to see him renew his on-field rivalry with Lionel Messi, but the Argentine got his name on the scoresheet late on, netting a stoppage-time penalty to seal Barca's second victory in as many Group G outings.

"This was our best game all season," said Koeman.

Juve had Turkish defender Merih Demirel sent off late on as their underwhelming start to the season under novice coach Andrea Pirlo continued.

Their next game is away at Ferencváros, who came from behind to draw 2-2 with 10-man Dynamo Kiev in Budapest.

ZIVECH IMPRESSES

In Group E Chelsea were comprehensive 4-0 winners away to Krasnodar in Russia, with Jorginho missing a penalty before Callum Hudson-Odoi opened the scoring.

Timo Werner smashed in a spot-kick on 76 minutes to double Chelsea's lead, with Hakim Ziyech and Christian Pulisic adding late goals.

Sevilla beat Rennes 1-0 in the same section with Luuk de Jong scoring the only goal.

Borussia Dortmund claimed their first points in Group F with Jadon Sancho's 78th-minute penalty and Erling Braut Haaland's stoppage-time strike securing a 2-0 win over Zenit Saint-Petersburg.

The Germans are a point behind Lazio and Club Brugge, who drew 1-1 in Belgium with a Hans Vanaken penalty securing a draw for the hosts.
