Corruption has taken such deep root that it has become the bread and butter of most people in India, and whose policy makers are powerless to remedy the situation.

Corporate houses and politicians have perpetuated the system of patronage so firmly that one is hard-pressed to identify their differences. It is not that the corrupt politicians and corporate houses have not been punished in the past. They have been punished, but those punishments have not been enough to deter them from further acts of corruption. The corruption is systemic and it is not just the politicians and corporate houses who are involved in it. It is also the judiciary and the police who are involved in it.

The situation of corruption in India is alarming. The government has been trying to tackle the problem of corruption for a long time, but it has not been able to do so. The government has been trying to implement several anti-corruption laws, but they have not been effective. The government has also been trying to increase transparency in the functioning of government agencies, but it has not been able to do so.

The anti-corruption laws that have been implemented are not effective. The laws are too lenient and do not have enough teeth to punish those who are involved in corruption. The laws are also not implemented properly. The government has been trying to implement the laws, but it has not been able to do so.

The judiciary is also not doing its job properly. The judiciary is supposed to be the guardian of the constitution and the protector of the rights of the people. But the judiciary is not doing its job properly. The judiciary is also involved in corruption.

The police are also not doing their job properly. The police are supposed to be the protectors of the Constitution and the Constitution. But the police are not doing their job properly. The police are also involved in corruption.

No dignity of labour

Govt codsly denies compensation to dead migrant saying it's has data. Can it honestly deny facts or credible media reports?

Bijendra Chaudhry once said, “There are three kinds of lies: lies, damned lies and statistics.” Perhaps it is what the Government has internalised in dealing with the migrant labour issue. Since it does not have any kind of data collection that has not been commissioned by it, it denies that there has been any migrant death that it could account for. Knowing this, it becomes easier for the Government to claim that there has been no death because it has no death to account for. This was the stance when the concerned Minister, his office and bureaucrats had for so much reason believed the India toute court’s report, which the Government release minimised the number of deaths. The Minister’s explanation its admission that more than one crore migrants made their way back to their homes States from various corners of the country can it lethally assume, therefore, that no hazard befell them, considering most were daily wage earners and had nothing to fall back upon. Hungry, sick and walking for days, they were in an emergency test in a real show where their deaths could not be ignored. Hence, collateral damage? To the figure not an indication of the jobs lost in the country’s badly unravelled labour market? For once, Congress leader Rahul Gandhi has said it besting, “If you can’t account for the deaths not taken place!”

Also, how can the Government discount the deaths record directly to its own Raiyeministry? Consider the migrant workers who during their travels were asphyxiated on the busy roads between their cities. Why? Even this financial year a crores if each card holder can get a guaranteed 100 days of work this year. Still MGNREGA struggles. A World Bank report in April indicated that the livelihood of nearly 40 million internal migrants was under threat. The report was based on a study of 1,000 households in 10 states. The study found that nearly 50% of the households had at least one migrant worker, and that 40% of the households had experienced a decrease in income. The report also highlighted the lack of data collection on migrant workers, which is a problem that has been acknowledged for years. Without accurate data, it is impossible to provide effective support to migrants and their families. The Government needs to take urgent action to address this issue.

Equality in marriage

Going through courts will only harden extremist viewpoints on same-sex issues. There needs to be a public debate

When the Supreme Court struck down the provisional Section of 1937 that criminalised all same-sex activities in India, it was a landmark decision that paved the way for the legalisation of homosexuality. Now a group of judges has today overturned the Supreme Court’s decision, saying that marriage must be between a man and a woman. The decision is a setback for those who advocate for equality in marriage.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Crime graph shoots up in Goa

It is, however, like to criticise Prime Minister for being truth of all facts that remain the same. There needs to be a public debate on this issue.
The death of a credible media

Those in charge of public policies hardly realize that by attacking critics they are instigating an equally vitriolic counter-narrative.

India being buried under the weight of unending challenges, the citizens are no longer able to safely navigate the murky, false, and polarized information landscape that we have today. The credibility of public discourse is failing and the present-day media is beholden to the state. As a result, the Indian public discourse is characterised by one-sided narratives, selective reporting, and a lack of critical thinking.

The death of credibility is not just a result of the failures of the media, but also of the failure of the government to provide accurate and timely information. The government has been known to suppress critical news and engage in propaganda campaigns to control public opinion.

As a result, citizens are no longer able to trust the information they receive from the media. This has led to a decline in public trust in government institutions and a rise in conspiracy theories. The lack of credibility in the media has also led to a lack of accountability and transparency.

The current situation is a result of the government's failure to take responsibility for its actions and the media's failure to hold it accountable. This is a dangerous trend that must be addressed if we want to have a healthy democracy.

As citizens, we must be vigilant and demand transparency and accountability from our government. We must also support independent media that is able to hold the government to account. Only then can we hope to restore credibility to our public discourse.

World of Television Post COVID

Karunana Bhushan shares with us the need to repackage the shows from shooting as she doesn’t want to communicate the actor to her family or neighbours — “I am not weak, I am cautious! Neither am I scared, am seeking optimum as we can party on in fact, I am going to throw a huge reunion bash once the pandemic ends. COVID-19 has come like a teacher to us. I walked down the memory lane with my family, and got a special dose of love with my beloved son. My work won’t get affected because I am not bowing down in fact, a monster-like virus. With self-reliance in our hearts, let’s move forward with gratitude.”

New campaign on stories of India’s courage amid Covid

The launch of the programme is a direct result of Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s recommendation for introducing nutrition cards to the common man in the country. The Prime Minister had communicated this on August 30, 2020, keeping in mind the importance of focusing on quality and nutritious food intake, along with increasing awareness regarding this topic in the country, especially among the younger generation.

This is a step to address the gaps of micronutrients and deficiency. The Report Card is a compelling and engaging way of showcasing the entire initiative. It will also feature 12 whole foods that can be consumed in more ways that will elevate how its theme is conveyed. The launch of #Together Against COVID
