

Delhi CM to meet Javadekar over steps to stop stubble fire

Kejriwal visits Pusa Agricultural institute to see the bio-decomposer technique

STAFF REPORTER ■
NEW DELHI

A day after his interaction with scientists at Pusa Technology to manage stubble causing air pollution, Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal on Thursday visited Pusa Agricultural institute to see the bio-decomposer technique developed by scientists at IARI. He termed the technique practical and doable for preventing stubble burning pollution.

Kejriwal said that this technique involves the spraying of Pusa decomposer capsules along with a liquid mixture. Pusa using readily available elements, that will help decompose the stubble into compost, decrease the use of fertilizers and increase the productivity of the farm soil. "I will meet the Union Environment Minister Prakash Javadekar in a day or two to discuss the efficient and effective implementation of this simple, doable, and practical technique to stop stubble burning."

"I will request him to speak to the neighboring states to take all measures to effectively implement it despite the crunch of time. We will surely implement this technique in a very efficient and effective manner in Delhi," Kejriwal said.

Briefing the media after his visit, he said, "Delhi and many other North Indian states are covered with smoke due to stubble burning in the neighboring states by the farmers. Pusa Agriculture Institute scientists have developed a new and innovative technique, under which they give four capsules, with the help of which the farmers can prepare a 5-litre of a liquid mixture with jaggery and chickpea flour, which is sufficient to cover 1 hectare of land. When the farmer mixes the 25 litres of the liquid mix on the stubble, the stubble softens and melts down in 20 days.

The farmer can then begin his sowing again and he does not need to burn the crop stubble.

The soil loses its richness due to stubble burning, and it also destroys the useful bacteria and fungi in the soil, apart from causing harm to the environment.

This improves the fertility and productivity of the soil as the stubble works as manure and compost for the crops and lesser fertilizer consumption will be required in the future. The cost of the capsule is very less, we will be getting a proposal mentioning all the important details such as cost per acre soon.

This is the result of many years of hard work and efforts of the scientists, and they have been running a pilot testing and projection. They have also given their technique a license for commercial exploitation.

On a question of why there is no action on stubble burning throughout the year, CM Kejriwal said, "I agree that no major efforts have been made the whole year on stubble burning. I do not want to blame anyone but the central government is also trying its best. The union has held meetings, initiated new schemes and implemented custom hiring sectors, and given subsidies on new machinery. The scientists have a presentation to me yesterday, and this is a very simple, doable, and practical approach. If we look at the net cost-benefit analysis, a farmer will get twice the profit of what he will spend. This is a new invention. Pusa Institute is one of the most reputed institutes in the country. We must implement this as soon as possible."

Taking to social media, he tweeted, "Farmers are also worried about the pollution that is caused due to stubble burning every year. A technique has been developed by the scientists of IARI burning every year. A technique has been developed by the scientists of IARI

- Bio Decomposer. I visited to observe the technique today. Scientists believe that because of this, farmers will not have to burn stubble, the stubble will turn into manure and the farmers' yield will also increase."

Don't deny admission to students in Govt schools under any situation: Punjab Govt to schools

PNS ■ CHANDIGARH

The Punjab Government on Thursday issued instructions to the authorities not to deny admission to the students in Government schools under any situation.

Notably, the enrollment in government schools has till date, increased by 15.61 per cent (3,44,986 students) and this is the highest increase in a single year till date.

"Some complaints have received from the parents that their wards have been denied admission in pretext of high enrollment and lack of infrastructure," said a spokesperson of the Punjab School Education Department. In this context the state School Education secretary Krishan Kumar directed all the District Education Officers (DEOs), secondary and elementary, of the State to give admission to the aspirants in the government schools in any case.

He also directed to make appropriate arrangements at the local level in the matter of lack of infrastructure. Schools have also been asked to make appropriate shifts where the strength of students is very high.

Earlier, the Education Department had also directed the school heads not to force the students for transfer certificates in connection with their admission in government schools and asked the school heads to admit such students at their own level. At the same time, the school principals have been directed to get a written request from the parents of the students who do not have the transfer certificate.

Capt appeals to all parties in Punjab to fight unitedly against farm bills

PNS ■ CHANDIGARH

Punjab Chief Minister Capt Amarinder Singh on Thursday appealed to all political parties to rise above petty considerations and come on one platform to fight unitedly against the "treacherous" Agriculture Bills that would destroy the farmers of Punjab.

Asserting his commitment to protect the rights of the farmers at all costs, the Chief Minister said that he was ready to lead the political fight against the unconstitutional anti-farmer Bills with all his might.

"I will do what it takes to save my farmers and my State from these dangerous new laws, whose implementation will cripple the farming sector and also destroy Punjab's lifeline of Agriculture," he added.

"The Congress has always stood with the farmers and will fight with them shoulder to shoulder, to scuttle the Centre's plans to ruin not just their own families and the labourers, who toil on the fields day and night to feed the nation, but the entire state of Punjab," said the Chief Minister.

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) led Union Government has stooped to a new low by bringing these Bills, and that too in a totally undemocratic and unparliamentary manner, said Capt Amarinder, adding that his Government, supported by the Punjab Congress, will oppose the legislations tooth and nail in the interest of not just the farmers and the State but the entire country.

Lambasting the Akalis for trying to change the narrative through their concerted and deliberate efforts to transform the 'Punjab V/S Centre' fight into a local political clash for their vested interests, the Chief Minister said that they have changed the Shromani Akali Dal (SAD) history of sacrifice, the pretense of fairness and honesty in pursuit of his party's demonic agenda.

In his desperation to promote the BJP-led NDA Government's conspiracy to ruin the farmers, Tomar had thrown all propriety to the winds, spreading disinformation against the Congress in general, and him in particular, by peddling shameless falsehoods, said Capt Amarinder.

Reacting to Tomar's latest remarks on the issue, the Chief Minister termed it a pack of outrageous lies. "The entire

Capt Amarinder dismissed SAD leader Harshmat Kaur Badal's resignation from the Union Cabinet as a mockery of the Akali history of sacrifices, before the Badals hijacked the party and converted it into their personal fiefdom for their own gains.

"Is giving up a berth in the Union Cabinet a sacrifice? The Badals clearly do not know the meaning of sacrifice," he quipped, ridiculing SAD president Sukhbir Badal's latest statement that Akali Dal can make any sacrifice for farmers. What are you still doing in the anti-farmer NDA government at the Centre, he asked the Akali leader.

Sukhbir's assertion that SAD will not let any corporate enter Punjab if the people make an Akali Dal Government in the State clearly showed that it was all about power, and the entire drama was being enacted by the party to get onto the saddle, said the Chief Minister.

Terming SAD's purported U-turn on the Bills as a desperate step taken under political compulsion, when faced with the threat of total eradication from Punjab's political arena, he pointed out that neither Sukhbir nor his wife Harshmat even once opposed the Farm Ordinances at any point till they were presented in the Lok Sabha.

In fact, the duo continued to actively defend the Ordinances as being supportive of the farmers," said Capt Amarinder, pointing to Sukhbir's stand at the all-party meeting and his decision to stay away from the State Assembly session at which the resolution opposing the Bills was passed.

All their claims now of being with the farmers in this fight against the Bills are a complete farce, which even the agitating farmers are taking with a pinch of salt, the Chief Minister said.

MAINTAIN LAW AND ORDER, ADHERE TO COVID NORMS DURING BHARAT BANDH: CAPT APPEALS TO FARMERS

Punjab Chief Minister Capt Amarinder Singh on Thursday appealed to the farmers to strictly maintain law and order, and adhere to all COVID safety protocols, during Friday's bandh against the Agriculture Bills.

"While the State Government is fully with the farmers in their fight against the Bills, and no FIRs will be registered for violation of Section 144, there should be no disturbance of the law and order during the bandh," the Chief Minister said.

He appealed to the farmers to ensure that the citizens of Punjab are not put to any inconvenience during the protest bandh, especially given the COVID-19 cases, and any violation of precautionary norms could lead to the situation spiraling out of control, he warned.

He exhorted the farmers to take full care that the lives and property of the people of Punjab are not, in any way, endangered due to their agitation.

Khattar launches video module of JJ Act, POCSO Act for hearing impaired

PNS ■ CHANDIGARH

Haryana Chief Minister Manohar Lal Khattar on Thursday launched a video module on Juvenile Justice Act (JJ) and the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) Act for hearing impaired persons.

After launching the video module, Khattar said, "It is a commendable step that Haryana State Commission for Protection of Child Rights is promoting sign language as well as making the hearing impaired persons aware about the Child Protection laws like JJ and POCSO Act. Through these modules, all the hearing impaired people will be able to understand the law and their rights properly."

The Chief Minister said that the Central Government has taken historic decision to introduce common sign language in the New Education Policy. On one hand, having a common sign language will make conversation easy for the hearing impaired persons, while on the other, it will also open the way for their success at the national level. He said that the rights given to the hearing impaired persons in the New Education Policy will open the way for their success and development in the coming time.

He said that the Central and State Governments are working for the upliftment of not only specially abled but for every citizen. The CM said that the Government will make a special policy for the children who are in need of special care and protection. Besides this, policy will also be focused on upliftment of differently abled children, who are living in the Bal Ashram, so that they do not face any problem in various tasks such as reading and writing.

Tomar peddling falsehood, deceitful assurances to promote Centre's conspiracy to ruin farmers: Capt

PNS ■ CHANDIGARH

Expressing shock at the Union Agriculture Minister Narendra Singh Tomar's atrocious lies over Punjab and the Congress party's stand on the controversial farm bills, the Chief Minister Capt Amarinder Singh on Thursday said that the BJP leader had clearly shed the pretense of fairness and honesty in pursuit of his party's demonic agenda.

In his desperation to promote the BJP-led NDA Government's conspiracy to ruin the farmers, Tomar had thrown all propriety to the winds, spreading disinformation against the Congress in general, and him in particular, by peddling shameless falsehoods, said Capt Amarinder.

Reacting to Tomar's latest remarks on the issue, the Chief Minister termed it a pack of outrageous lies. "The entire statement of the Union Agriculture and Farmers' Welfare Minister, as part of a reported interview, was nothing more than unsubstantiated allegations, false claims and deceitful verbal assurances, which provided neither any basis nor any reason for trust or belief," said Capt Amarinder.

On Tomar's question as to 'why did he (Captain Amarinder) keep it in his manifesto that APMC will be changed', the Chief Minister said that it was obvious that the Minister had not even read the Punjab Congress 2017 manifesto.

The manifesto had clearly promised that "update of APMC Act will be done to ensure direct access of farmers to the national and international markets through digital technology without tinkering with the existing MSP system" and "Government of India will not be allowed to tinker with the existing MSP system", he pointed.

He said that instead, they will be pursued to effectively implement MSP for other crops, that is Maize, Pulses also. Further, it had stated that Agriculture Marketing will be upgraded and digitized with a complete ban on utilization of Mandi Board Funds for purposes other than Agriculture Marketing, he added.

Capt Amarinder noted that there was a difference between changing the APMC for the better, which the Congress manifesto clearly promised in detail, and destroying the tried and tested APMC system to benefit a few corporate cronies, which the BJP-led Government's new farm Bills were designed to do.

Covid-19 claims 22 lives as 1, 698 fresh cases detected in Haryana

PNS ■ CHANDIGARH

Twenty-two more people died from coronavirus in Haryana on Thursday as 1,698 fresh cases took the State's infection tally to 1,18,554. So far, the State has claimed 1,255 lives in the State. A total of 2063 patients were discharged from different hospitals of the State after recovery.

Of the 22 fatalities on Thursday, four was reported from Kurukshetra, while three each from Kurukshetra and Ambala; two each from Rohtak, Sirsa, Yamunagar, Kaithal and Faridabad and one each from Karnal and Fatehabad, according to a Health department bulletin.

Among the districts which reported the maximum cases were Gurugram (288).

Punjab reports 1, 793 fresh cases, 76 Covid deaths

Chandigarh: Punjab on Thursday reported 1,793 fresh cases of the novel coronavirus besides 76 deaths, pushing the state's Covid-19 tally to 1,05,220 and death toll to 3,066. Of the death reported in the past 24 hours, highest nine casualties were reported from SAS Nagar (Mohali); followed by eight each in Bathinda, Jalandhar, and Kapurthala; seven in Ludhiana; six each in Amritsar and Hoshiarpur; five each in Gurgaon and Ropar; four each in Patiala and Sangrur; two each in Faridkot, and Tarn Taran; and one each in Mansa, and SBS Nagar (Nawanshahr).

Among the districts, Ludhiana reported maximum 206 fresh in the span of 24 hours, followed by Jalandhar (188), Mohali (169), Bathinda (158), Amritsar (146).

Rising dengue cases amid Covid in Haryana posing serious challenge to Health Deptt: DG Health Services

MANOJ KUMAR ■ CHANDIGARH

With increase in the number of dengue cases being reported amid the current Covid-19 pandemic, the Department of Health and Family Welfare, Haryana is facing a tough challenge.

Even as the State has around 20,000 active cases of Covid-19, dengue cases too have steadily increased from Gurugram, Faridabad, Sonapat, Bhiwani and other parts of the State. Both Covid-19 and dengue have symptoms such as high fever, headache and body pain. Till September 12, a total of 33 confirmed dengue cases were reported in the State but the number of such cases increased to 68 till September 24.

Talking to 'The Pioneer' over the phone, Haryana Director General of Health Services Dr Suraj Bhan Kamboj said that so far, no co-infection of dengue and Covid-19 cases has been reported from any part of the State. The Dengue test is being done free of cost in government laboratories and in all 27 Dengue Testing Labs are presently functioning. In addition, the sampling has been started at Flu corners for suspected Dengue cases in district Bhiwani and Rohtak as mostly cases are reported from these districts. He further said that most cases of Covid-19 and dengue are asymptomatic (about 80 per cent), and in a setting of co-infection one disease might enhance the severity of the other.

"As Doctors often find it difficult to differentiate between the two diseases, we have formed a set of protocols to help them. A new protocol has been developed to help medical professionals distinguish between Covid-19 and dengue, as both have similar symptoms. The protocols will also assist doctors to treat patients diagnosed with both the diseases effectively," he added.

When contacted, Dr Ursha

Gupta, director, Haryana Health services said that about 1,158 Dengue tests have been conducted in the State by the first week of September, 2020 and the sampling has been started at Flu corners for suspected Dengue patients. Mosquito proofing of wards and beds is being done in Civil Hospitals. So far, 68 dengue cases have been reported from different parts of the State, which include 29 from Faridabad and 14 from Bhiwani.

"Instructions have been issued to the authorities concerned in Gurugram, Bhiwani and others to ensure dengue cases do not increase in their districts. Moreover, Senior Health officers have been monitoring the prevalence Dengue effectively. To prevent mortality due to Dengue, new initiative, i.e. the provision of free Single Donor Platelets (SDP) has been made for dengue patients admitted in Government Hospitals as some dengue patients with severe thrombocytopenia requires SDP for immediate recovery," she added.

Gupta further said that disease incidence is monitored on a daily basis and a vigil has been kept on the trend of dengue and other vector borne diseases. The Dengue situation is well under control in the State despite the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic situation. She said, "We appeal to the general public to take up house-hold level activities to prevent mosquito breeding. For example, every Sunday should be considered as Drying Day i.e. emptying of water containers and check other probable mosquito breeding sites like cooler, overhead tanks, drum, discarded utensils, cups, bottles, tyres, pots, fridge tray etc., wear full sleeve clothes and use of mosquito repellents should be done."

Meanwhile, rising cases of dengue amid Covid-19 in Gurugram is posing a challenge to the district Health Department. The contagion of the disease has spread to the highest number of 18,814 Covid-19 cases and second highest, 167 casualties in Gurugram district where maximum 29 out of 68 dengue cases have been reported.

Gurugram district health officers agreed that dengue was a challenge, especially when they were fighting Covid-19. "We held a meeting with all stakeholders to discuss steps to check dengue. Apart from municipal corporation teams that are also working on checking dengue, we have also constituted teams comprising two members each that have an assistant malaria officer check breeding of mosquitoes by using larvicides. They have also started checking coolers and would ensure that water is not accumulated in the city," he said.

A senior Government Health officer said that most people with dengue and Covid-19 could have mild illness and can recover at home; symptoms usually last a few days, and people tend to feel better after a week. However, both dengue and Covid-19 can cause severe illness that can result in death. The clinical management for people who develop severe illness with either of these two diseases is quite different, often requiring hospital-based care. Anyone of any age can develop severe illness with dengue or Covid-19. Both infections are more likely to cause complications in adults with underlying chronic conditions, such as diabetes and heart disease.

He further said, "Both the viral diseases do not have any specific antiviral drug or vaccine and therefore treatment depends on clinical conditions and symptoms. Both Covid-19 and dengue have unpredictable clinical courses and both generally require hospital monitoring for management."

Most hospitals are busy managing Covid-19 and very little window is open for tackling another disease outbreak. Besides diagnostic and treatment challenges there is "limited experience" in tackling such situations and the "paucity of medical literature on management of such co-infection cases has kept everyone in dark."

Corporate houses will exploit contract farming: Minister

STAFF REPORTER ■ RAIPUR

Accusing the Prime Minister of telling lies, Chhattisgarh Agriculture Minister Ravindra Choubey on Thursday said that the new farm bills passed by Parliament will help corporate to exploit corporate farming.

There is no mention of the Minimum Support Price (MSP) in the bill and now corporates can open private mandis, he told the media, adding that restrictions have been lifted on the essential commodities.

These are the reasons for opposing the bills, he said.

Recalling the role of successive Prime Ministers in building the agriculture sector, he said India could feed its own population after subsidy was brought in to support farmers.

He said that considering the state of courts now, farmers will be unable to fight for payments legally as cases will take years to conclude.

Choubey pointed out that the bills will promote black marketing and there will be no control mechanism to control the price for consumers. The BJP government will break the backbone of the country through these bills.

He accused Prime Minister Narendra Modi of telling lies. Chhattisgarh farmers are already exporting toto Pakistan and Bangladesh and rice to Gulf countries. Last year the paddy production was 1.25 lakh tonnes which in the current Kharif season will reach 1.50 lakh tonnes.

With the opening up of the market, paddy from neighbouring states of Odisha, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and others will flood Chhattisgarh. This will have a direct impact on local farmers, he said, leading to economic slavery.

Opposition trying to sow confusion: Brijmohan

RAIPUR: The opposition parties are trying to create confusion among farmers although the new farm bills passed by Parliament will empower the farming community, former Chhattisgarh Agriculture Minister Brijmohan Agrawal said on Thursday.

Addressing the media virtually, Agrawal said Chhattisgarh has around 39 lakh farmers out of which 13-16 lakh sell their produce at the Minimum Support Price while the remaining sell through other sources.

The BJP leader said the bills mark a new beginning in the country and the Congress and other opposition parties are opposing it just for the sake of it. The bills will hit the middlemen the most. Private investment will further enhance the agriculture sector.

On contract farming, he said it is like the present system of rental farming. The industrialist or private player will enter an agreement with farmers to provide all inputs and materials for farming. If any loss of crops occurs, the total responsibility lies on the investor not the farmer, he said. The land of farmers will always remain with them.

The BJP will run a campaign to explain to the farmers the truth behind the bills, he said.

Nationwide campaign against bills from Sept 26: Punia

STAFF REPORTER ■ RAIPUR

The Congress will hold a march to the Governor's office in Chhattisgarh on September 29 unlike the rest of the country since there will be a total lockdown in Raipur on September 28, AICC General Secretary P.L. Punia announced on Thursday.

In other states, the protest will be held on September 28, with a memorandum addressed to the President opposing the bills submitted to the Governors.

Punia, who is in-charge of Chhattisgarh, told the media virtually that even the RSS and Swadesh Jagran Manch as well as NDAs until now ally Akali Dal have opposed the agricultural bills.

He added that on September 26, through social media, a 'Speak Up for Farmers' will be organized.

On October 2, a 'Kisan Mazdoor Bachao Diwas' (Save Farmer, Workers Day) will be observed in all Assembly constituency headquarters. It will be followed by a state-level convention of party cadre on October 10. A signature campaign will follow from October 2 to 31.

Chhattisgarh will submit around 20 lakh signatures while 2 crore signatures will be collected. These along with the memorandum will be submitted to the President on November 14, the birthday of Jawaharlal Nehru.

Accepting that the Congress brought up these issues in the 2019 election manifesto, Punia said the plan was to end the bigger Mandis which cover 450 sq km. Against it, the plan was to build 'Kisan Bazar' in each bigger village with total infrastructure and alternative mode.

He said the plan was to constitute a Commission having representation from farmers. It would recommend a MSP binding to the government. The C-2 formula of the Swaminathan Committee report where farmers' family labour and land rental will be included in fixing the MSP.

CR Prasanna is now Spl Secretary in Medical Edn Dept

RAIPUR: The Chhattisgarh government on Thursday gave the additional charge as Special Secretary in the Medical Education Department to the 2006 batch IAS officer C.R. Prasanna.

Presently, Prasanna is holding the charge of director in Veterinary Services in the state.

In an official statement earlier, R Prasanna was posted as secretary in Medical Education Department which was then modified.

CM for maximum work to rural families under MGNREGA

STAFF REPORTER ■ RAIPUR

Chhattisgarh Chief Minister Bhupesh Baghel on Thursday called for maximum employment every year to rural families under the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme (MGNREGA), leading to the formation of a committee to prepare a work plan.

The MGNREGA guarantees minimum 100 days of work for those residing in rural areas in a fiscal year, said Chief Minister. Chhattisgarh state has been providing 50 additional days apart from it, an official release said.

The statement said that in fiscal 2016-17, rural families in the state received 42 days average work. This rose to 52 in 2017-18 and 57 in 2018-19 on average.

Chhattisgarh has performed better compared to other states in maximum area there is only one crop system. So, there are more possibilities to increase the work, said Baghel.

A committee headed by the Chief Secretary will have Additional Chief Secretary (ACS) Finance, ACS Home, Principal Secretary Rural Development, Principal Secretary Forest, Principal Secretary Conservator of Forest and Secretary Agriculture as members.

The Chief Minister wants the committee to submit a work plan within 15 days.

International seminar on sickle cell today

RAIPUR: An international seminar (webinar) on sickle cell -- 'Advances in sickle cell disease' -- will be held here today.

The webinar is being jointly organized by the Sickle Cell Institute Chhattisgarh Raipur and the Indian Academy of Paediatrics.

Dr Irfan Noor, Clinical Haematologist from Amsterdam University, will be the key speaker. Dr Arvind Neral, Director General of Sickle Cell Institute Chhattisgarh Raipur, said in a press release.

Dr Noor is a renowned expert on sickle cell and his works have been published in various international journals, Dr Neral said.

Dr Neral said Chhattisgarh is among the worst sickle cell hit regions of India and the numbers of sickle cell patients run in lakhs.

Such seminars will help doctors in Chhattisgarh get the latest updates on this disease, Dr Neral said.

Minister for regular monitoring of home isolated patients

STAFF REPORTER ■ KORBA

Chhattisgarh School Education Minister and in-charge Minister of Korba district Premasi Singh Tekam on Thursday told health officials to regularly monitor the Covid positive patients in home isolation.

He also urged officials to strictly enforce the lockdown, an official press release said.

"As per the instructions of the state government, a patient should be allowed to be in home isolation only if the house has sufficient space for other members as well. If such arrangements are not available, then the patient should be kept in Covid care centre or Covid hospital," Tekam was quoted as saying.

He told officials to monitor the patients in home isolation and see if they were consuming the medicines given to them.

The Minister called for proper disposal of waste produced from the houses of such patients.

District Collector Kiran Kaushal told the Minister that currently there are 746 patients in home isolation in Korba district.

Doctors are regularly monitoring their health. So far 12 patients were shifted to Covid hospital after their health deteriorated, the Collector said.

Dr Tripti Nagaria named in-charge Dean in CIMS

STAFF REPORTER ■ RAIPUR

Dr. Tripti Nagaria has been appointed as in-charge Dean of the Chhattisgarh Institute of Medical Sciences (CIMS) in Bilaspur.

She was Professor-cum-HOD in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Pt Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Medical College (JNMC).

Among other appointments, Dr. PK Patra, who was Dean-cum-Professor in CIMS, has been posted as Dean-cum-Professor of JNMC in the state capital, a Chhattisgarh government order said on Thursday.

Dr. Ramesh Murthy has also been appointed the in-charge Dean of Ambikapur Medical College, it added.

Following a directive of the Chief Minister, the Dean of CIMS Bilaspur and the Civil Surgeon of Bilaspur were removed on Monday on charges of carelessness, failure to follow Covid control protocols as well as mismanagement.

Be positive to keep good mental health amid Covid

STAFF REPORTER ■ RAIPUR

The Covid crisis has put people under immense pressure, adversely impacting their mental health. A positive attitude and regular exercise can help one keep calm, said Dr Manoj Sahu of Pt Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Medical College in Raipur on Thursday.

"Students are unable to go to schools and colleges, people cannot move out, meet their friends or relatives and the fear of disease is making a serious negative impact on people's mental health," Dr Sahu said in a press release.

The symptoms of mental trouble caused by Covid-19 include irregular sleep, urge to cry, irritation, problem in taking rest, worry, feeling physically exhausted, weakness, guilt, problem in smiling or being happy and trouble in following a daily routine, Dr Sahu said.

He said that some cases physical symptoms like stomach ache, dysentery, headache, body pain, decreased appetite or excessive eating, sweating or cold, shock or muscle cramps and increased heart-beat have been noted.

"In some cases, the patient has trouble focusing, has excessive negative thoughts and in a few cases they even lose interest in life," Dr Sahu said.

In these conditions, people should adopt a positive mental attitude and focus on solving problems with available resources, he said, adding people should take care of their food habits and do not hesitate to consult a psychologist if needed.

Chhattisgarh police bust IPL betting racket, 7 arrested

STAFF REPORTER ■ RAIPUR

Chhattisgarh Police on Thursday busted an IPL 'satta' (betting) racket operating inside two separate moving cars in the state capital and arrested seven persons.

Senior Superintendent of Police Ajay Kumar Yadav told the Pioneer that ₹12,00,000 in cash as well as betting records detailing transactions of around ₹1 crore were seized from four of them.

Those arrested were identified as Chhote Dewangan (53) of Bilaspur city and Gaurav Sabarwal (37), Mahendra Dewangan (37) and Mohammad Raees (24), all from Janjig-Champa district.

Police seized 10 mobile phones, a laptop and a car (CG-11, 8293).

In another racket, the police arrested three persons, identified as Ritesh Govindani (26), Jitendra Premchandani (23) and Jagdeep Singh (22), all residents of Gudhiyari locality in Raipur.

Police seized nine mobile phones, a laptop, a car (CG-04, 5554) and betting records of ₹10 crore.

The police conducted the raid on Wednesday night after getting a tip about the betting racket inside moving cars in the capital city on the Mumbai Indians and Kolkata Knight Riders, the officer added.

The arrested men said they were operating the betting racket inside cars as they did not get a room in any hotel or any other safe place due to the lockdown, Yadav said.

Empty Streets: The prominent streets of capital city Raipur are deserted during the lockdown imposed since September 21 due to a spurt in Covid-19 cases. Minimum movement of vehicles is seen on the roads. The lockdown will end on September 28.

In 2013, the state set up two tiger-tourism safaris in buffer and core areas of tiger reserves, aiming to reduce tourist pressure on the key areas of these reserves.

As per the guidelines 70 per cent of earnings from safaris will be ploughed back into tiger reserves while 30 per cent will go into the management of such safaris.

Such safaris are allowed only in tiger reserves that have achieved full carrying capacity of the tourists in core and critical areas.

The guidelines also clearly state that for such safaris, "no tiger shall be taken from a zoo" and only animals such as injured and orphaned tiger cubs (which are allowed for re-wilding) would be selected and that too from the same landscape as that of the tiger in the tiger reserve where the cub was established.

Mamata announces monetary aids for Durga puja organisers

SAUGAR SENGUPTA ■ KOLKATA

Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Thursday announced liberal largesse to the clubs organising Durga Puja prompting the Opposition BJP and Left to link her actions with next year's Assembly elections.

The Chief Minister's latest announcement include a grant of ₹50,000 to the clubs organising Durga Puja. This apart, Banerjee also announced a 50 percent rebate in electricity charges for the Puja committees and requested the private-owned Calcutta Electricity Supply Corporation to follow suit. Last year the State Government had allowed only 10 percent rebate in power charges for the Durga Puja committees.

There are about 28,000 Durga Puja committees in Bengal and the dole could cost the Government about 200 crore, sources said.

Besides, she said that no tax would be charged by the municipal authorities including Kolkata, Howrah, Asansol and Siliguri Municipal corporations and panchayats were. The Fire Brigade Department too would not charge any fees from the Puja organisers, Banerjee said.

Monsoon may start withdrawing from west Rajasthan Mon onwards

New Delhi: The India Meteorological Department (IMD) said on Thursday southwest monsoon is likely to start withdrawing from west Rajasthan

Monday (September 28) onwards. Hot and humid conditions are also likely to reduce thereafter. Widespread and heavy rain will continue in parts of Bihar, sub-Himalayan West Bengal and some northeastern states till September 26.

Conditions are likely to become favourable for withdrawal of southwest Monsoon from West Rajasthan and adjoining areas around 28th September. The Low Pressure Area lies over central parts of East Uttar Pradesh and the neighbourhood. The associated cyclonic circulation extends up to mid-tropospheric levels. It is likely to move east-northeastwards to Bihar during next three days," the IMD said. It's been delayed by a week compared to the normal date for commencement of monsoon withdrawal.

This year, monsoon rain over the country is 9% in excess as on Thursday. In September, northwest India recorded a 46.8% rain deficiency while south peninsula received 67.7% surplus rain; east and northeast India received 12.8% surplus rain, central India recorded a 6.1% rain deficiency.

The normal date for commencement of monsoon withdrawal from northwest India is September 17 and for complete withdrawal from the country is October 15, as per the new monsoon onset and withdrawal dates issued by IMD in April this year.

Bengaluru violence: NIA conducts searches at 30 places, arrests key conspirator

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

A day after registering two cases in connection with the large-scale violence in Bengaluru in August, the National Investigation Agency (NIA) on Thursday conducted searches at 30 locations and arrested an alleged key conspirator related to the incident.

The arrested conspirator Sayed Sajid Ali, 44, resident of Bengaluru, alleged to have been involved in the attack on KG Hall Police Station in Bengaluru that took place late in the evening on August 11 resulting in "huge" damage and destruction of public and government property, including damage to the police station building and vehicles parked in its premises and nearby areas.

All works as a recovery agent with a bank and has been absconding since August 11, immediately after the riots.

In addition, Ali's arrest, searches were also conducted at 30 locations in Bengaluru city to unearth the conspiracy behind the attacks on DJ Hall and KG Hall police stations.

"During the searches, airgun, pellets, sharp weapons, iron rods, digital devices, DVDs, many SD cards and PFI-related incriminating documents and materials have been seized," the NIA said in a statement. On Wednesday, pursuant to Union Home Ministry's directions, the NIA took up the investigation of two Bengaluru violence cases registered by the State police at DJ Hall and KG Hall police stations on August 12.

The local firm could not able to show any document related to this design. Currently, the stock has been seized and further action is in progress.

Madras High Court quashes Palani Temple's move to appoint contractors CHENNAI: The Madurai Bench of the Madras High Court on Wednesday delivered a verdict with respect to the holy shrine of Lord Muruga at Palani Hills in Tamil Nadu by cancelling the tender issued by the executive officer to appoint contractors for providing house architectural services to the temple and establishments attached to the temple.

Justice G.R. Swaminathan, who heard a writ petition filed by T.R. Ramesh, president, Indic Collective, challenging the executive officer's move to float tenders for the same approved the contention of the petitioner that devotees were authorized with the maintenance and cleaning of the temple and its premises as per "Uthavara Pami", an age old voluntary service. T.R. Ramesh also argued that the executive officer by entrusting the cleaning and maintenance works of the temple to outsiders on a commercial basis was infringing on the rights of the devotees.

Salman Khurshid named in Delhi Police chargesheet on riots but there are no specifics on provocative speeches

This is more than a witch-hunt, it is a theatre of the absurd, this partisan investigation into the Delhi riots. One cannot even blame the police anymore, trotting out as it does the script that is handed down to it by the Home Ministry, having long lost the spine to stand up to its constitutional mandated functions and bending instead to the political masters of the day. The message, however unpalatable to our Indian ethos and civilisational DNA, is clear — there can be only one ideology that works, anybody else choosing the other end of the divide just won't be tolerated. And that the democratic right to dissent, even one in defence of the Constitution, is as good as treason. In this case, challenging the new law that makes grant of citizenship conditional on religion and tears asunder the secular rights of all Indians. What else can explain the names in the outrageous chargesheet of the Delhi Police on the February riots? Congressmen, Leftists, scientists, filmmakers, civil society activists, students, basically everybody who agreed to disagree with the Government. Take the case of Salman Khurshid. Forget that he has been a Congress veteran, a Union Minister handling key portfolios, an educationist, a legal eagle, a liberal Muslim who refused to be cardboarded into stereotypes or become an apologist of his faith. Forget his pedigree and lineage as the grandson of our third President Zakir Husain. Has there been any precedent of his anti-India intentions or has there been any visual footage of him delivering divisive and hate speeches? Or having an aggressive tenor of words? Yet he has been listed for instigating the riots in the city this February through provocative speeches and a studied design. No specifics have been mentioned. He has been named with his party colleague Udit Raj and CPI(M) leader Brinda Karat for fanning sentiments during the protests against the Citizenship Amendment Act. The police claims to have "protected" witnesses, who were conspirators themselves and perhaps needed intense "security" to spill the beans on the complicity of senior leaders. And to indicate the weightage and seriousness of the statements, the police said they had been recorded before a Magistrate under Section 164 of Code of Criminal Procedure. Other big names in the disclosure statements include those of Left leader Kavita Krishnan, student activist Kawalpreet Kaur, scientist Gauhar Raza and advocate Prashant Bhushan. The bigger question is what then does one do with the stronger visual evidence of incendiary speeches by ruling BJP leaders, like "goli maaro, saalo ko," that were repeatedly played out on news television. The likes of Anurag Thakur and Kapil Mishra have been spared, the latter spawning vitriol and issuing barely veiled threats under police watch. There were videos of a group of people cheering and chanting "Jai Shri Ram" as bricks and stones were unloaded. It was clear that violence was being planned and frantic appeals were made to Delhi Police to act. Later shops were set on fire in Muslim localities in Maujpur. So why was no action taken against the BJP motormouth for his hate speech and disruption of peace and communal harmony? Simply because he held rallies in favour of the new citizenship law and was the Government's mouthpiece? If hate begets hate, then there ought to have been two guilty parties, not one.

The brutality of targeting is even more evident as names uncomfortable to the establishment are circled out while provocateurs friendly to it are let off. Earlier, too, there was a motivated leaking of information about noted civil society activists figuring in a supplementary chargesheet based on disclosures of the accused. While the police had then claimed that the disclosure was not the sole basis of further action, and needed to be backed up by corroborative evidence, cross-checking and information, why were their names listed? CPI(M) leader Sitaram Yechury was labelled as an instigator for representing an ideological polarity. Riots probes by their very nature are sensitive and it is all the more necessary for the police to sift fact from fiction, identify the perpetrator and the victim, regardless of fear or pressure. For a society needs healing and by the Government's own figures, the minority communities have been affected more in the arson and violence that followed. What makes the Delhi riot probe a dangerous precedent is that there is nothing that separates the protester from the rioter, the dissenter from the conspirator and the citizen from an arsonist. If this is going to be the template going forward, then there would be no need for a trial by court. By deriding and selectively targeting some of the best educated and informed minds in the country, the new India is about using knowledge and wisdom to be a qualified conformist than a disgruntled critic. Disproportionately and sadly, the Government narrative of stereotyping the riots as another volatile expression of communal angst has swamped every logical argument on why citizenship should not be selective. Most disturbingly, such actions prove that the Government can well do without civil society which might either become a voiceless and rare species or be coopted. But dangerously, we are also losing the Muslim intelligentsia to hate politics. One dreads to imagine its fallout.

Rafale under fire again

CAG says offset obligations under jet deal yet to be fulfilled; LCA project could be hit

The ruling BJP might have capped the Rafale deal as a non-issue during the general elections and there was general acceptability of the acquisition of the fighter jet for improving our strategic competence. But now the ghost of murky deal-making has returned with the Comptroller and Auditor-General of India (CAG) finding that French aerospace major Dassault Aviation and European missile maker MBDA have defaulted on off-set clauses. The report says that till date they have "not confirmed" the transfer of technology for the indigenous development of the engine for the Light Combat Aircraft

(LCA) by the Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) under the off-set policy relating to the nearly ₹60,000 crore deal for 36 Rafale fighter jets. Under the off-set policy, a certain percentage of the deal value with foreign firms should flow into India as Foreign Direct Investment (FDI), which would eventually include technology transfer, local manufacturing of advanced components and creating jobs. Most vendors over-commit to get the contract and breaches of this nature aren't new. But such a lapse could prove costly for the Government. According to the CAG report tabled in Parliament, as the vendor has not confirmed the transfer of this technology till date, the targets for doing so had already been delayed badly and could not be met before deadline. In its defence, Dassault Aviation has said it will eventually meet its obligation, which has slowed down in the last few months due to the pandemic. If Dassault does not make good on its commitment, then the Kaveri engine project will continue to hang fire. For the DRDO, which has been involved in the LCA project for long and has been unable to give its engine the kind of performance and thrust that it had planned, had to choose one made by the US firm GE. However, hopes of indigenisation of the project were raised again when during the Rafale negotiations, France agreed to help India work on an upgraded Kaveri engine.

Worryingly, the CAG also warned against the efficacy of our off-set policy, saying it did not find a single case of foreign vendors transferring high technology to Indian industry, particularly in the defence sector, which ranked 62 out of 63 sectors receiving FDI. The failure on the part of Dassault to keep its end of the bargain would give more ammunition to the Opposition, which has also opposed and questioned ANI Ambani's Reliance entering the deal as an off-set partner for Dassault Aviation. The CAG report further said that "non-fulfilment of off-set obligations by the vendor, especially when the contract period of the main procurement is over, is a direct benefit to the vendor." This questions the Government's ability to drive a bargain. Would this report be a can of worms?

When babu becomes neta

Restrictions need to be placed to account for situations where the independence of the judiciary and of the civil services could be threatened

AJOY KUMAR

Like most people, I enjoy listening to music in my free time. Other than singing an expression of art, songs are often a great medium to get a message across. Some are subtle where you have to find understated and intelligent references to the message that is hidden. However, at the same time you have songs with lyrics like "Sushant superstar, you're Bihar's treasure... The DGP came, he faced attacks but he took the case to the CBI (The DGP) is the pride of the nation..." It is safe to say that this music video, which was released on the same Court as the very entry retirement of the DGP, can be a lot of things but "subtle" is certainly not one of them.

The release of the music video and the reports of Gupteshwar Pandey (the DGP in question) making a foray into politics, do however, give us an opportunity to examine the situation in the country and the question of ethical conduct by certain individuals from the Indian civil services and the judiciary, two pillars on which the modern Indian state stands. The title of this week's piece may seem a tad ironic, especially considering that the writer himself was one time a "babu" and is now in active politics. However, having joined politics close to a decade after leaving the civil services, I believe that I have a unique perspective on the topic.

To be clear, this is far from the first questions regarding the ethics of appointment or nomination of individuals who come from the civil services or the judiciary have been raised. Even a meeting of the Constituent Assembly, this issue was discussed. Professor KT Shah moved an amendment, which contemplated restricting judges who had served for more than five years in the High Courts, from being appointed to any executive office or Ministers in a Government. The intent, as explained by a supporter of the amendment, was imperative because "if the temptation of being appointed to other high positions after retirement is not removed, it will also be liable to be abused by the Executive or by any party in power and they may hold out such temptations which might affect the independence of the judiciary." The amendment was ultimately rejected by Dr BR

Ambedkar because at the time he believed that this was only a theoretical protection as the "opportunity for the executive to influence the judiciary is very small". While there is no such restriction, the Constitution of India does lay down administrative details like retirement of judges and remuneration in the Constitution. Similarly, civil servants are granted privileges like pension after retirement. Furthermore, removing a civil servant from service is an extremely difficult proposition. The intent of such protections is to ensure that both civil servants and judges carry out their duty as contemplated under the Constitution without fear or incentive to act otherwise.

Dr Ambedkar, in all probability, believed that the individuals, who would form part of the judiciary or the civil services, would exercise their personal ethical framework and to this extent the issue of independence of these institutions would not be tarnished. However, it is becoming increasingly obvious that there is a need for us to legislate ethics and punish its abidance.

Most recently from the judicial sphere, you have the case of the former Chief Justice of India, Ranjan Gogoi, getting nominated to the Rajya Sabha. This move drew sharp criticism from judges and lawyers alike, pointing to the fact that his appointment came barely months after his tenure as Chief Justice ended. Such is the criticism around the appointment that a news personality noted that the DGP's move to take voluntary retirement and possibly join politics would be akin to "doing a Gogoi." Another move that attracted criticism was of a Central Vigilance Commissioner joining a large corporate house immediately after retirement. But like I said, this is not about one particular instance. According to a study done by Vidhi, a legal think tank, close to 70 out of over a hundred retired judges have taken up assignments after their retirement. Unfortunately, this is inevitable considering the number of statutory authorities that require a retired judge to hold office under their parent statute.

Therefore, what is the way ahead? It is obvious that relying on the integrity of individuals to take the right call every time is not a tactic that has worked. While there are a number of individuals who have displayed and continue to display courage, integrity and a strong conscience, the damage by a few to the institutions that they have served can be so scarring that its impact would be felt on the core foundations of a democratic republic such as ours. Therefore, there is a need to legislate to do away with post-retirement posts and to appoint only senior personnel who are currently serving as judges or civil servants. Another option is to legislate like the US has done, where in case of former senior civil servants (in certain departments) there is a permanent ban on appearing before Government authorities on matters where they may have participated personally or substantially. An alternative restraint could be establishing a separate authority like the Union Public Service Commission (UPSC), as former civil servant Anil Swarup talks about in his book Ethical Dilemmas of a Civil Servant. Swarup suggests that the UPSC can be tasked with shortlisting candidates for post-retirement assignments instead of leaving such decisions to the whims and fancies of any Government in power. I would add that the criteria for such appointments should be made public and be through a points system. There are many possible solutions but in order to implement any solution, we need to first accept that there is a problem and that there is a dire need for a structural solution.

As said by Dr Martin Luther King, "The arc of the moral universe is long but bends towards justice." Therefore, I am hopeful that in the long run our institutions will survive, not least because of the many righteous individuals who serve these institutions. I am hopeful that the examples that exist today will only serve as examples to future generations to keep their guard up, similar as to how examples from the Emergency serve as examples for today. However, with the benefit of hindsight, if Dr Ambedkar had a chance to discuss Professor KT Shah's amendment in the Constituent Assembly today, I have a feeling that the outcome would be quite different.

Labour-friendly laws

Sir — The Constitution allows migration across the country for employment needs. However, there has been no comprehensive legal framework to protect the workers from exploitation. More than one crore migrant labourers returned home on foot during the lockdown and around 29,415 lost their lives in the process. This is the harsh reality of how safe the workers are under the present labour laws. Adding to the problem are the recently passed three key labour reform Bills that further dilute workers' rights than the present laws. A more pragmatic approach with a full understanding of the problem must be put in place to alleviate labourers' underlying distress due to the Government's apathy.

The actual beneficiaries of farm Bills

The Central Government claims that farmers will have unfettered freedom to sell their produce at higher prices in any market in India hereafter, under the "revolutionary" Farmers' Produce Trade and Commerce (Promotion and Facilitation) Bill and Farmers' Agreement of Price Assurance and Farm Services (Empowerment and Protection) Bill. However, the fear of traders and corporates dictating procurement terms is not altogether unfounded. With the dismantling of Agricultural Produce Market Committee (APMC) mandis and the Government having no power to keep a watchful eye on the deals struck between farmers and traders, there is a greater chance of the farmers being exploited by the heavily cartelised corporate giants. Also, the State Governments stand to lose the revenues from the APMCs, which fund the various farmers-related welfare measures.

Another claim made by the Government is that there will be an explosion in infrastructure in the agricultural sector with the inflow of massive private investments.

It would be dishonest to construe that the modern markets and the infrastructural facilities created with private funds will be available to the farmers at even nominal, if not free of charge. The Bills in no way give any freedom to the farmers, rather it is the private industries that will be benefitting.

Fair and responsible

Sir — It is a matter of deep concern that some media houses are using their platforms to create communal disharmony and spread hatred. Sudarshan News' Bindass! Bol programme, that was aired on August 28, targeted the Muslim community and questioned the credibility of the UPSC. The Central Government allowed the channel to air the show again on September 10 in the name of freedom of speech. It was only later on that Supreme Court barred the channel from going ahead with the telecast of the remaining episodes. Hate speech should not be allowed to be disguised as freedom of speech. And media being the fourth pillar of democracy should act responsibly and not further the communal agenda of the Government.

Rising COVID cases

Sir — COVID-19 cases in India crossed the 57 lakh mark with 86,508 new cases and 1,129 deaths reported in the last 24 hours. There are 9,66,382 active cases and 91,149 people have died. Meanwhile, Prime Minister Narendra Modi has emphasised the need to increase focus on "effective testing, tracing, treatment and surveillance" to bring the coronavirus outbreak under control. In his virtual review meeting with Chief Ministers of seven states with the highest number of coronavirus cases in the country, he spoke of the need for clear messaging to dispel rumours about testing. However, the initiatives taken by the Government don't seem to help curb the crisis. It is, therefore, important that the people take the utmost precautions and follow WHO's guidelines.

The threat posed by hospital waste

Efficient bio-medical waste clearance is as important as efficient handling of the Coronavirus crisis. Else we will have to face a secondary wave

KOTA SRIRAJ

Imagine a public health epidemic of colossal proportions that also doubles up as a threat for the environment close on the heels of the devastating COVID-19. This is a possibility that can well turn out to be true if the mounting bio-medical waste generated while battling the pandemic is not managed and disposed properly. At the last update, COVID-19 had already caused a loss of 90,000 lives in India with a further 5.6 million active cases. This state of affairs can get considerably worse if a callously disposed bio-medical waste triggered a secondary wave of infections across the nation. Countless hospital premises, morgues, cremation grounds, ambulance parking lots and even garbage dumps in residential locations are replete with carelessly discarded PPE kits, gloves, suits and masks. This is in spite of the Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB) guidelines that clearly state that COVID-19 related waste must be double-bagged and labelled. However, looking at the waste lying around, it is clear that this is not being followed and needless to say, these items carry the virus that can spread to healthy people, especially sanitation workers and those involved in sorting waste at landfills and waste incinerators. Delhi has two biomedical waste treatment facilities that can handle 63 tonnes of medical waste per day. But a study by Toxic Links noted that much of this waste is being disposed of as municipal solid waste. To make matters worse, many of the facilities generating this waste were not registered with the Delhi Pollution Control Committee (DPCC).

The study's findings also revealed that 27.9 per cent of the hospitals did not have mandatory needle cutters whereas 34 per cent of the facilities did not have wheeled transportation for medical waste. As a result, the same was carried by hand for disposal through patient areas. Adding to this dismal state, a further 26.4 per cent of the facilities were also found to be disposing liquid medical waste into the public sewage system. With disturbing conditions such as these, India surely is not in a fit condition to handle the contagion-generated bio-medical waste. The gravity of the condition of bio-medical waste generation and its disposal can be gauged by the fact that the Union Home Ministry had to answer queries for the same in the Rajya Sabha recently. According to a paper published in ScienceDirect, India, the country currently generates approximately two kg of medical waste per bed, which includes anatomical, cytotoxic and sharps, but this is set to increase manifold due to the pandemic. Before the impact of the outbreak became acute, Delhi on an average generated 25 tonnes of medical waste but this output jumped to 349 tonnes per day in July. Similarly, Mumbai's per day waste generation went up from 12,200 tonnes in June to 24,889 tonnes in August. This deluge of waste has caused the already creaky waste management infrastructure to be stretched to its limit. There is an urgent need to address the issue before the metro cities become overwhelmed with biomedical waste and there is a need to follow the Government's guidelines on this.

As per the rules, the waste needs to be segregated into recyclable and non-recyclable bins and then isolated for 72 hours so that its infectious intensity is neutralised. Medical institutions must be inspected from time to time to ensure that they have the requisite equipment needed to safely dispose biomedical waste. More importantly, the liquid medical waste needs to be sent by authorised biomedical waste collection companies for requisite treatment and not dumped in the sewage system.

Western nations are setting high standards in Coronavirus waste management and a peek into their practices also tells us why these nations are getting back on their feet faster as far as biomedical waste management is concerned. Some of the best practices being followed in France and Germany include keeping a very strict record of the waste generated by each medical facility and ensuring the same quantity is actually and properly incinerated. Other advanced measures being followed include the usage of sodium hypochlorite solution in regularly cleaning the waste bins in the medical facilities.

France has moved a step further by focussing on the households where quarantined patients are. Waste is being collected at source by the authorities so that no inadvertent cross-contamination occurs. The quarantined residents are able to procure free sealable waste bins from pharmacies on producing their prescriptions, which they can then use to dispose their waste by handing over to the authorities. Germany on the other hand has set up specialised waste incinerating facilities in Bavaria. These measures have helped these nations save themselves from the booming effect of bio-medical waste and its harmful impact. Efficient bio-medical waste generation is as important as efficient handling of the crisis. This alone will prevent a secondary wave of infection and contamination.

Corona paints a bleak picture

Art talks to us like nothing else does. It re-awakens our senses and reminds us of the power of imagination in the face of the death and economic destruction brought about by the pandemic

UMA NAIR

The pandemic has brought the art world to its knees. The cinema is on the verge of collapse and the webinars and online propaganda are somewhat stifling when you think of how suddenly it is only about talking and voices and voices and talking. Amid the many cancellations of fairs, exhibitions, films, plays, performances and dances globally, we must ask ourselves questions about the value of art and culture at a time when humanity is under great stress. When it is fighting for its very survival as the virus throws up a kind of socio-economic disparity and devastation we have not witnessed in recent times.

At a time when people tell us that there are much more important things to worry about in this world than art, one would beg to differ. Art talks to us like nothing else does. It re-awakens our senses and reminds us of the power of imagination in the face of the death and destruction brought upon us by the pandemic.

The New York Times states that though fairs have been cancelled and galleries have closed, the wealthy are still buying. In India it's difficult to get true stories of buying and selling from art galleries/dealers/consultants/artists. The physicality of looking at a work and buying is something that needs to be worked upon. An image does not do justice to a work of art. Perhaps private appointments by clients are the way to go in the new pandemic scenario. But there are hectic announcements of online shows and galleries coming together to host prized possessions on the internet and social media. Some galleries are stating that they have a few sales but it's not as much as they would like in a stagnant market.

In the West, a report of 795 galleries representing 60 different national markets, called The Impact of COVID-19 on the Gallery Sector, written by the cultural economist Clare McAndrew, is the first major survey of how the contagion has hit art dealers globally. Until sales statistics are shared by galleries all over India, it's difficult to add a percentage of propensity to the real figures. But one scene that has remained buoyant is that of the art auctions.

Pundoles looking West: Pundoles Mumbai ruled the roost the past month with its Looking West auction split into two parts, featuring a part of the collection of fish baron Masanari Fukuko, who decided he wanted Pundoles to handle the sale rather than international houses like Christie's, Sotheby's or even Saffronart. With blue chip names on its avant-garde list, the auction threw up some magnificent numbers. VS Gaitonde, the abstract master, was top draw. His untitled 1967 work set a new record at ₹32 crore as the selling hammer price. Two sculptures also set their own highs. The first was a 'Bull's Head' (1988) by Tyeb Mehta, who created this sculpture as his tribute to the trussed bull (he used to hear their heart-wrenching cries when he lived next to a slaughterhouse in Mumbai). It sold at a new record of ₹3.2 crore.

The second sculpture was printmaker and sculptor Sonnath Hore's 'Goat' (1988) that sold at ₹65 lakh, a new high for the artist. India's greatest figurative painter, Jogen Chowdhury's 'The Couple' (1999) sold for ₹1.7 crore, setting a new record for the 80-year-old Kolkata artist.

“ INSTITUTIONS LIKE THE LALIT KALA AKADEMI HAVE A GREAT ROLE TO PLAY IN OPENING THEIR SPACES TO AS MANY SOLO SHOWS AS POSSIBLE TO LIFT THE DARKNESS IN THE WORLD OF THE LONELY ARTIST WAITING IN THE WINGS. THE INDIA INTERNATIONAL CENTRE AND AIFACS DO YEOMAN'S SERVICE FOR THE ARTS. BIG ARTISTS, TOO, NEED TO GET OUT OF THEIR COCONOS AND HELP OTHERS IN NEED ”

Saffronart's success: The next auction high was Saffronart's Evening Sale. The highly-anticipated online live auction — the first since the pandemic — closed at 88 per cent lots sold, achieving a total sale of ₹66.4 crore amid enthusiastic bidding. The 300th auction in Saffronart's 20 years, this sale was a unique hybrid experience that allowed bidders from across the globe to participate virtually.

The sale was led by VS Gaitonde's masterpiece painting of 1974 from the collection of Sabira Merchant, which sold for ₹35.5 crore, making it the second-highest price achieved for the artist, as well as for a work of Indian art to be sold in an auction worldwide. Among the best works Gaitonde ever produced, this ethereal, luminous work embodies his preoccupation with Zen Buddhism as well as his associations with the sea.

Among the top highlights of the sale were two exquisite works by modernist NS Bendre, including a figurative work from 1971 which sold for ₹1.56 crore, more than tripling its pre-sale estimate, and an untitled work (possibly a view of Mandu), 1982, which sold for ₹1.14 crore. Jehangir Sabeti's 'The Cactus Wave', 2006, sold for ₹2.63 crore.

Artists in studios/homes: Across the land in homes, in studios that belong to them as well as others, artists are still pouring out their imagination. Those who have computers and laptops are busy doing Zoom webinars and the like but my heart goes out to artists who have no technology. They continue to be inspired in their own small rooms with minimal media and materials. Questions arise as to how they are eking out their living.

The buyer's market is not so well laid out. Galleries have their own list of collectors and buyers but it is only established artists who can share in that bouquet of well-being. One of the greatest contributions to an artist's life can be through corporate houses, hotels, Government and private offices and complexes that can use art works and help artists to thrive in a market that has fallen to the Covid climate.

Take for instance Tom Vattakuzhy, a brilliant artist in Kerala who lost out on a historic series of illustrations in the Malayala Manorama because of a misunderstanding with the Church. His works echo his solitude. They make everyone empathise with him and stir their inner recesses. Vattakuzhy, a Masters from Shantiniketan and then Vadodra, is a prime example of a brilliant artist waiting to be shown by a curator, gallery or promoter who will not throw him to the sharks. Let's face it, the art world thrives on profit margins and cut-throat competition. India needs more institutions and philanthropies to help artists all over the country.

Institutions like the Lalit Kala Akademi have a great role to play in opening their spaces to as many solo shows as possible to lift the darkness in the world of the lonely artist waiting in the wings. The India International Centre and AIFACS do yeoman's service for the arts. Big artists, too, need to get out of their cocoons and help others in need.

Black Lives Matter: The most beautiful example of an artist helping others has been that of the great artist Banksy. The British street artist financed a boat to rescue refugees attempting to reach Europe from north Africa. The vessel, named Louise Michel after a French feminist anarchist, set off in secrecy on August 18 from the Spanish port of Burriana, near Valencia, and was in the central Mediterranean Sea, where on August 30 it rescued 89 people, including 14 women and four children.

It was looking for a safe port to disembark the passengers or to transfer them to a European coast guard vessel. Since setting off from Burriana, the boat, registered in Germany and manned by a crew of activists from across Europe led by Pia Klemp, rescued more than 150 people off the coast of Libya. The majority of the passengers were transferred to a larger rescue vessel a few days ago, after European authorities appeared to ignore Mayday calls from the Louise Michel, which had become too overloaded to steer. The survivors finally arrived in the port of Palermo, Sicily.

Underscoring the hypocrisy of governments shouting out for racial equality while simultaneously taking a hardline anti-immigration stance, Banksy's video of the rescue mission, posted on Instagram, concluded with the words: "All Black Lives Matter." Perhaps in a blanket equation of everyone in the world, we could tweak it to say "All Lives Matter." Maybe the virtual world is here to stay until the virus is tackled with a vaccine that says: "Get thee behind me."

A double whammy to the girl child's survival

The rising crime against women has emerged as yet another factor for augmenting the traditional preference for sons

FOREIGN EYE

PAKISTAN MUST LEARN FROM INDIA

Numerous factors have been identified to ascertain the reasons behind the huge Corona outbreak in India. The lockdown was hastily imposed and the resultant mass return home of workers from the cities led to the virus' spread. The stories from across the border, raise a question that crops up frequently in the history of Pakistan-India affairs: Is there something that one neighbour could learn from the other? They could if they so wish. (Dawn editorial)

SWAPNA MAJUMDAR

Last week, a six-month pregnant woman in Badaun, Uttar Pradesh (UP), was attacked by her husband with a sharp-edged weapon. Her family alleged that she slit her stomach to find out the gender of the unborn baby. They told the police that the father of five daughters was so desperate for a son that he resorted to this brutal way to check if the foetus was that of a boy or a girl. Although a First Information Report (FIR) has been registered and the husband arrested, this gruesome crime underlines once again the deeply-entrenched preference for sons in our culture. Despite the best efforts of the Union Government, States and non-governmental organisations over the years, there seems to be very little change in attitudes towards the girl child in the country. This is not just deeply worrying but also frightening. It is not, however, surprising that girls are less valued than boys in UP, a State that has recorded the most crimes against women in the country. The latest 2018 National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB) data ranked the State as the worst for women's security with 59,443 crimes against them. Incidentally, in 2018, the crime rate was the highest for cruelty by husbands and relatives. Although the NCRB data for 2019 has not been released as yet, media reports of crimes against women in UP during the last two years do not inspire confidence in the possibility of any turnaround.

But do the rising crimes against women have any bearing on the preference for a son? Yes, says a new study conducted in UP and Haryana. Its objective was to examine discrimination against the girl child and its linkages with the declining child sex ratio and violence against women. The report states that the responsibility of security and maintaining the chastity of daughters in the context of rising sexual violence in the country has added to the larger concern of wanting a son. In other words, the increasing crime against women has emerged as yet another factor for augmenting the traditional preference for a son. Supported by the Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR), the study was conducted by Bijaylaxmi Nanda, Nupur Ray and Ritwika Mukherjee. The preliminary findings indicate that perceptions about crime play a pivotal role in the increasing preference for a male child. Thus, as long as women continue to remain insecure in the nation, chances that girls will be unwanted by families will be high.

Further, with three out of every 10 women, who had more daughters than sons, reporting that the husband/family members express dissatisfaction at the birth of a girl child, the study also reinforces the fact that gender inequality remains at the heart of violence against women in UP. The male offspring is preferred because he is culturally perceived as a protector and provider during the old age of the parents. An earlier study to understand the intrinsic relationship between masculinity, son preference and intimate partner violence came to similar conclusions.

The 2014 study by the International Centre for Research on Women (ICRW) and United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), found that in UP, the two most important reasons for having a son were to carry on the family name and to provide support to parents in their old age. Six years later, as the ICSSR study shows, little seems to have changed on the ground.

The ICRW-UNFPA report found that of the seven States studied, UP had the largest proportion of men reporting high control over their intimate partners and the largest proportion of men displaying gender equitable attitudes.

Education is a big tool to engender transformation in beliefs, attitudes and practices. It is an equally important predictor of son-preference attitude. In UP, the ICRW-UNFPA study found that 55 per cent of men with no education had a high preference for sons compared to 39 per cent of men with graduation or higher degrees.

Studies have shown that spouses of men with no or little education are unlikely to have ready access to sexual and reproductive health services. In the Badaun case, the fact that the woman had five children and was pregnant with her sixth child indicates she may have faced barriers in accessing family planning services. The fourth National Family Health Survey (NFHS 2015-16) states that the unmet need was 18 per cent for currently married women aged between 15 and 49 years. This means an estimated 8.2 million women have been denied access to family planning. In Badaun, which has a more than 70 per cent rural population, the total unmet need is almost 14 per cent. This is higher than the national average of 12.9 per cent.

Low literacy preference for sons puts women under so much pressure to produce a male heir that many times they are forced into numerous pregnancies and a series of abortions until they do so. The preference for a son has led to around 4,60,000 girls going missing due to sex selection at birth each year between 2013 and 2017, according to the UNFPA's 2020 State of the Population Report.

Last month, noted researcher Fengching Chao of King Abdullah University of Science and Technology (KAUST), Saudi Arabia, and his colleagues projected an even darker future for girls in India. According to their research published in the journal PLOS ONE, the average annual number of missing female births between 2017 and 2025 was likely to be 4,69,000 per year and would increase to 5,19,000 per year for the time period between 2026 to 2030. This research singles out UP as the Indian State most likely to have the maximum missing female births due to the preference for a boy and accounting for almost a third of the total number projected.

But girls don't just go missing at birth. India also has the highest rate of excess girl child deaths at 13.5 per 1,000 births. This critical data suggests that post-birth sex selection is one in nine deaths of girls below the age of five may be attributed to post-birth sex selection, says the UNFPA report. So, while gender-biased sex selection accounts for about two-thirds of the total missing girls, post-birth sex child mortality accounts for about one-third.

UP lags behind on many indicators of gender equality, including early marriage and crimes against women.

If Yogi Adityanath really wants development, the Chief Minister must make greater investments in improving gender indicators. Prejudice against girls can be countered by programmes that focus on engaging boys and instilling values of gender equality in them at an early age. Comprehensive sex education in schools could help redefine notions of masculinity and foster respect for women.

If Trump loses, he may refuse peaceful shift

PTI ■ WASHINGTON

US President Donald Trump has refused to commit to a peaceful transfer of power if he loses the November 3, 2020, election to his Democratic rival Joe Biden.

Trump, a Republican, also said he believed the election result could end up in the US Supreme Court, or he might doubt on postal voting. Many American states are encouraging mail-in voting, citing the need to keep Americans safe from the coronavirus pandemic that has killed over two lakh people in the country.

"Well, we're going to have to see what happens," Trump said when asked whether he would commit to a peaceful transition, one of the cornerstones of American democracy. "I've never said anything very strongly about the ballots, and the ballots are a disaster..." Trump told reporters at a White House news conference on Wednesday when asked about a peaceful transition of power after the presidential polls in November irrespective of the outcome.

"President, real quickly, wins, lose or draw in this election, will you commit here today for a peaceful transfer of power after the election? And there has been rioting in Louisville, there has been rioting in many cities across this country — red and so-called red and blue states — will you commit to making sure that there is a peaceful transfer of power after the election?" he was asked.

Not satisfied with Trump's answer, the reporter again asked, "Do you commit to making sure that there is a peaceful transfer of power?"

Trump exuded confidence that there will be a continuation of power. "We want to get rid of the ballots and we will have a very peaceful — there will be a transfer. Frankly, there will be a continuation. The ballots are out of control, you know it, and you know who knows it better than anybody else? The Democrats know it better than anybody else," the president said as he refused to entertain any other question from the same journalist.

"Go ahead. Please go ahead. Yes, go ahead. You asked a question. Go ahead please," he said. Trump's reluctance to commit to a peaceful transition was noted about ballots, extending his assertion that widespread mail-in voting is rife with fraud.

In 2016, Trump also refused to commit to accepting the election results in his contest against the Democratic candidate, Hillary Clinton, which she characterised as an attack on democracy.

Trump was eventually declared the winner, although he lost the popular vote by three million, an outcome he still questioned. Meanwhile, Senator Mitt Romney, a Utah Republican who has stood at odds with the President in the past, slammed Trump's remarks.

"Fundamental to democracy is the peaceful transition of power; without that, there is Belarus," Romney tweeted.

"Any suggestion that a President might not respect this Constitutional guarantee is both unthinkable and unacceptable," he said.

US: Growing cooperation with India vital to free, open Indo-Pacific

Washington: Underlining that the scope of India-US partnership continues to expand, US State Department on Wednesday (local time) said that Washington's growing security and diplomatic cooperation with New Delhi is vital to a free, open, and inclusive Indo-Pacific region.

"The pace and scope of the #USIndia partnership continues to expand! Whether it's at #UN or with Quad partners, our growing security and diplomatic cooperation with India is vital to a free, open, and inclusive Indo-Pacific," tweeted State Department for the Bureau of South and Central Asian Affairs (SCA).

Indian-Pacific region is largely viewed as an area comprising the Indian Ocean and the western and central Pacific Ocean, including the South China Sea.

China's territorial claims in the South China Sea and its efforts to advance into the Indian Ocean are seen to have challenged the established rules-based system.

Amid China's growing assertiveness in the Indian-Pacific region, foreign ministers of Quad — India, Japan, the US and Australia — are planning to hold a meeting in Tokyo next month. The officials are likely to affirm their countries' cooperation to realise the "Free and Open Indo-Pacific" vision upheld by Japan and the US.

Trump-appointed judges under an election-year political lens

AP ■ NASHVILLE

US District Judge Eli Richardson, a Trump administration appointee who backed the President's conservative base by blocking a Tennessee law that restricts mail-in voting, had an appointment to make before wrapping up his decision: it had nothing to do with politics. The declaration dropped as lower-court judges, like Richardson, face greater scrutiny over their perceived ideological purity. Richardson even took a step to clarify his decision, stating that he was not making a political statement.

Richardson ruled in favor of expanding the ability of first-time voters in this reliably Republican-leaning state to cast mail-in ballots in this election. But first, the lifetime-appointed judge said, he had to "address head-on the proverbial elephant in the room," declaring his own impartiality in the case.

In his September 9 ruling, Richardson wrote that he was "not concerned about how his decisions could aid one side or the other on the political front." The judge from Tennessee's Middle District also said his personal opinions on election laws have "simply no bearing" on the constitutional questions brought before his bench. For months, President Donald Trump claimed without proof that there could be widespread voter fraud in November, even as officials in states that have relied on mail-in ballots cited little evidence of such.

Trump, Biden clash on handling of coronavirus

Washington: US President Donald Trump and Vice President Joe Biden have clashed on the coronavirus pandemic, both putting forward their plans to bring America out of the worst health crisis it faced to date.

The US is the worst-affected country in the world, with over 200,000 Americans losing their lives to the disease. The virus has also battered the country's economy with millions of people losing their jobs.

Trump, a Republican, and Biden are pitted against each other for the November 3 presidential election.

"Our plan will crush the virus. And actually, Biden's plan will crush America, if you think about it. You can't lock down. Again, we're growing at levels that nobody has ever seen before. Our plan is unleashing a rapid recovery. Our opponent's plan would hurt America very badly. It would send us into depression," Trump told reporters at the White House on Wednesday, asserting that his Democratic challenger would not have been able to handle the pandemic.

"Our approach is pro-science. Biden's approach is anti-science. I don't think they know what their approach is, although a lot of it's copied from what we've done," Trump said. Talking about Johnson & Johnson announcing that their vaccine candidate has reached the final stage of clinical trials, Trump said, "this is record time. This is the fourth vaccine candidate in the United States to reach the final stage of trial. So, we have our vaccine candidates already at a very late date. 'Late' being a very positive word, in this case," he said.

Trump also announced that his administration is awarding $200 million of CARES Act funding to all 50 states to prepare to distribute the vaccine to high-risk residents.

UN rejection of sanctions marks 'victory' over Trump: Iran

AFP ■ TEHRAN

Iran's President Hassan Rouhani declared "victory" over the United States after the UN Security Council rejected the US demand to reimpose UN sanctions on the Islamic republic.

"The Iranian nation has achieved great political, legal and diplomatic success at the United Nations," Rouhani told a televised weekly meeting of his cabinet.

"The reason for this victory lies mostly in the support and resistance of the people," he said.

"America's greatness has collapsed (just like) the global hegemony they thought they had."

In May 2018, US President Donald Trump withdrew from a landmark deal that gave Iran relief from UN sanctions in return for UN-verified guarantees that it is not seeking nuclear weapons.

London: Several Indian students are among over 200 overseas student signatories of a letter delivered to UK Prime Minister Boris Johnson at Downing Street in London on Thursday, seeking justice in the wake of being accused of cheating in a compulsory English language test six years ago. The scandal, believed to have impacted around 34,000 international students, relates to the Test of English for International Communication (TOEIC), a compulsory requirement in some student visa cases.

Mkt tanks on slow eco recovery fear

FIANS ■ MUMBAI

Dangers to an overall international economic recovery such as rising Covid-19 cases, along with possible re-imposition of lockdown measures in some European countries, pushed the global and the Indian stock markets deep into the red on Thursday, with the BSE Sensex losing 1,100 points, its worst performance in six months.

Besides, no new stimulus measures for the US, combined with a slower growth forecast for the world's largest economy, also impacted global sentiments.

Not just equities, but crude oil and precious metal prices fell, leading to a chaos across asset classes. However, the US dollar made the most of the gloom. The dollar index of such massive downside resulted in the Indian stock markets witnessing a gap-down opening on Thursday. The BSE Sensex lost 1,100 points and the NSE Nifty50 fell well below the psychological 11,000 mark.

Post Thursday's selloff, Sensex lost 2,292 points in the last four sessions. This was the sixth consecutive session of losses for the Indian indices, as well as the biggest single day fall for the BSE Sensex in four months and the biggest losing streak (6 sessions) in seven months.

The Nifty50, on the other hand, lost 166.42 points, fell well below the psychological 11,000 mark.

The recent bear run has been due to resurgence in coronavirus cases across the world, largely in Europe, and anticipated gradual lockdown restrictions across several countries of the continent, including the UK and France.

The BSE Sensex closed at 36,553.60, lower by 1,114.82 points, or 2.96 per cent, and the Nifty50 closed at 37,282.18 and touched an intra-day high of 37,304.26 or a low of 36,495.98 points.

The Nifty50 closed at 10,805.55, lower by 326.30 points or 2.93 per cent from its previous close.

Manish Hathiramani, technical analyst, Dorn Patal Investments, said: "The support level of 10,900-10,950 has been disrespected during today's trading session. We have also pierced 10,882 which was made on August 3, 2020. This opens a new target of 10,750. Any bounce can be utilised to short the Nifty for this target."

Among the sectors, auto, banking, metal and IT indices lost the most.

"European stocks and Asian stocks dropped following a rout in tech shares in the US on Wednesday and as investors have largely given up on the idea that the US Congress will provide a new stimulus, while worrying about a recent rise in Covid-19 cases," said Deepak Lakshminarayanan, Head of Research at HDFC Securities.

"Economists at Goldman Sachs cut their US growth forecast for the fourth quarter in half, to 3 from 6 per cent. Investors are bombarded by a perfect storm of problems including rising virus infections, new lockdowns, a slowing economic recovery, steady US stimulus bills and election uncertainty. Investors also fretted that a second wave of coronavirus cases during the northern hemisphere's coming winter will derail the economic recovery."

Head of Research at Geojit Financial Services: "Indian benchmark indices had a gap down opening and kept losing ground as the day wore on, to finally end the day around 2.8 per cent lower. Markets tracked weak global cues as the uncertainty witnessed in the last few days gave way to negativity, with broader markets also underperforming."

The uncertainty regarding an economic recovery has been exacerbated by the virus infections, and today being derivatives expiry day, all contributed to the negativity. With volatility expected to be high, traders are advised to remain cautious."

₹ tumbles 32 paise to nearly one-month low against USD

PTI ■ MUMBAI

The rupee dove 32 paise to touch a near one-month low of 73.89 against the US dollar on Thursday, following massive sell-off in equities and concerns over the US market sentiment.

Besides, stronger dollar against key rivals currencies and robust outflows of foreign funds from domestic markets weighed on the rupee. The rupee opened at 73.92 and traded in a range of 73.75 and 73.96 a dollar during the session.

Harley-Davidson plans to close India manufacturing facility

FIANS ■ NEW DELHI

Cruiser bikes giant Harley-Davidson on Thursday said that it plans to close its manufacturing facility in Haryana's Bawal and significantly reduce the size of its sales office in Gurugram.

The development comes as part of 'The Rewire' initiative which intends to overhaul the company's operating model and market structure.

The company said that it is changing the business model in India and evaluating options to continue to serve its customers. "Harley-Davidson plans to close its manufacturing facility in Bawal and significantly reduce the size of its sales office in Gurugram," the company said in a statement.

"The company is communicating with its customers in India and will keep them updated on future support. The Harley-Davidson dealer network will continue to serve customers through the contract term."

According to the company, these actions are aligned with the company's strategy to continue through the end of 2020, leading to 'The Hardwire', a new strategic plan for 2021-2025 aimed at building desirability for the Harley-Davidson brand and products.

Primary issuances attract most FPI inflows

FIANS ■ MUMBAI

Inflow of foreign portfolio investments (FPI) surged last month, according to a report by ICI Securities.

Interestingly, last month, India outperformed other emerging markets in terms of inflows.

The report also said that domestic institutional investments (DII) too had positive flows towards primary issuances, although the secondary flows continued to be negative with an outflow of $1.5 billion.

GOOGLE TO DELHI HC

Allowed to share GPay customer transaction info with third parties with NPCI permission

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

Google India Digital Services Pvt. Ltd., which operates the GPay app, has told the Delhi High Court that it is allowed to share customers transaction data with third parties with the prior permission of NPCI and payment service provider (PSP) banks.

The submission has been made by Google in its affidavit filed before a Bench of Chief Justice DN Patel and Justice Prateek Jain in response to a PIL seeking action against "Google Pay" (GPay) for allegedly violating the RBI's guidelines related to data localisation, storage and sharing. The High Court on September 24 listed the matter for hearing on November 10 at the Centre and Reserve Bank of India (RBI) have not filed their responses yet.

Google, in its affidavit, has contended that under the Unified Payments Interface (UPI) procedural guidelines issued by the National Payments Corporation of India (NPCI), apps like GPay are permitted to share customers transaction data with third parties and group companies (GPay) for the purpose of NPCI and PSP banks.

It has also said that GPay only stores ordinary customer data — like name, address, email and transaction related details — in accordance with the NPCI guidelines and not payment sensitive data like debit card number or UPI PIN.

A customer's payment sensitive data is stored only on the servers of the PSP bank, it has claimed. The affidavit was filed in response to the petition by advocate Abhishek Sharma who has sought a direction to Google not to share any data from its UPI switch with any other party.

Banks sanction loans worth ₹1.77 L cr to 44 L MSMEs under credit guarantee plan

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

New Delhi: The Finance Ministry on Thursday said banks have sanctioned loans of about ₹1.77 lakh crore to 44.2 lakh business units under the ₹3-lakh crore Emergency Credit Line Guarantee Scheme for the MSME sector reeling under the slowdown caused by the coronavirus pandemic. However, disbursement against the sanctioned amount stood at ₹1.25,425 crore to 25.74 lakh MSME units till September 21. The scheme is the biggest fiscal component of the ₹20-lakh crore Atmanirbhar Bharat Abhiyan package announced by Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman in May to mitigate the distress caused by the lockdown due to COVID-19 by providing credit to different sectors, especially micro, small and medium enterprises. The total amount sanctioned under the 100% Emergency Credit Line Guarantee Scheme by #PSBs and private banks to #MSMEs and individuals stands at ₹1,77,353 crore, of which ₹1.25,425 crore has already been disbursed; the finance minister said in a tweet.

Govt extends suspension of fresh insolvency proceedings for 3 months

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

The Government has extended the suspension of fresh insolvency proceedings under the insolvency law for another three months, a senior official said on Thursday.

In the wake of the coronavirus pandemic, the corporate affairs ministry decided to suspend initiation of fresh proceedings under the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code (IBC) for six months starting from March 25. The nationwide lockdown came into force on March 25. The six-month period was to end on Thursday. The official told PTI that the period has been extended by three months.

RBI announces special OMOs of simultaneous sale

Purchase of G-Secs worth ₹10K cr each

PTI ■ MUMBAI

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) on Thursday announced it will conduct simultaneous purchase and sale of government securities under open market operation (OMO) for an aggregate amount of ₹10,000 crore each on October 1.

"On a review of the current liquidity and financial conditions, the Reserve Bank has decided to conduct simultaneous purchase and sale of government securities under open market operation (OMO) for an aggregate amount of ₹10,000 crore each on October 1, 2020," it said in a statement. The RBI further said it will continue to monitor evolving liquidity and market conditions and take measures as appropriate to ensure orderly functioning of financial markets.

On October 1, the RBI would purchase three securities totaling ₹10,000 crore and selling two securities of the same amount.

The result of the auctions will be announced on the same day. Simultaneous purchase and sale of government securities under OMOs, popularly known as Operation Twist, involves purchasing G-Secs of longer maturities and selling equal amount of G-Secs of shorter maturities. The central bank further said it reserves the right to decide on the mode of purchase and sale of individual securities.

Non-Personal Data Policy Citizens cite risks of targeting, surveillance, data misuse

New Delhi: The citizen feedback to the Non-Personal Data draft policy is not positive as people say there is very little to gain and the risk is of increased targeting, surveillance and data misuse.

According to Local Circles, Non-Personal Data draft policy has gotten the dialogue started amongst citizens and businesses, it needs to be revisited considering the findings of a survey. "From a citizen standpoint, there is very little to gain and the risk is of increased targeting, surveillance and data misuse," it said.

The nine-member committee set up by the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology, released a draft non-personal data policy in mid-July giving the public two months to provide feedback. Per the policy, any data which does not contain any personally identifiable information of an individual is termed as non-personal data.

For example, while order details collected by an e-commerce platform will have name, age, address and other contact information of an individual, it will be considered non-personal data if specific identifiers like name, address and contact information are removed.

NPD also classified non-personal data into three main categories - public non-personal data, community non-personal data and private non-personal data. Although many experts say that this policy is a forward looking step and will create a culture of data sharing of non-personal data which will bring overall benefits to the country, MSME and startups as well as citizens do not seem to be in favour of the policy in its current form.

Centre allows add borrowing of ₹ 9,913 crore by five States

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

The Centre on Thursday permitted five States to go for additional borrowing of ₹9,913 crore through Open Market Borrowings (OMBs) to meet their COVID-19 related needs amid falling revenues due to the COVID-19 crisis.

These States are Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, Goa, Karnataka and Tripura. The permission has been accorded after these states successfully met the refinancing condition of implementation of 'One Nation One Ration Card' system, an official statement said.

The Department of Expenditure under the Finance Ministry, has accorded approval to Karnataka for additional borrowing of ₹4,509 crore, followed by Telangana (₹2,508 crore) and Andhra Pradesh (₹2,525 crore).

Goa intends to raise ₹223 crore, Tripura ₹148 crore, it said. In view of the unprecedented COVID-19 pandemic, the Centre had in May allowed additional borrowing limit of up to 2 per cent of Gross State Domestic Product (GSDP) to states for the year 2020-21 with certain conditions. This made an amount up to ₹4,27,302 crore available to the states. Of the extra 2 per cent, only 0.5 per cent is unconditional. After that, states will be allowed four increments of 0.25 per cent subject to implementation of four specific state-level reforms, where weightage of each reform is 0.25 per cent of GSDP.

The four reforms are -- implementation of 'One Nation One Ration Card' system; ease of doing business reforms; urban local body/utility reforms; and power sector reforms by privatising power distribution. "The remaining additional borrowing limit of 1 per cent was to be released in two instalments of 0.50 per cent each - first immediately to all the States as united, and the second on undertaking at least 3 out of the above mentioned reforms," it said. The Government of India has already granted permission to states to raise the first 0.50 per cent as OMB in June 2020.

Single platform for social startups from Delhi-NCR

Delhi: As Delhi-NCR has been recognised as "the largest startup ecosystem in India", a village, one of leading incubators in India, has come with the 4th edition of its social startup discovery platform "iPitch 2020" to boost the growing culture of social entrepreneurship.

iPitch 2020 aims to bring together country's top incubators and impact investors to gain access to India's most innovative and impactful startups. Social entrepreneurs will benefit from a unified platform for funding, incubation, and mentorship through a single platform.

The application is open till September 30.

'Glad to do some memorable comedies'

Actor PANKAJ TRIPATHI, who is loved for his versatility on screen, says he is glad that he got a chance to essay several interesting comic roles in Bollywood.

Tripathi's comic streak as an actor has been particularly popular in films such as Stree, the Fukrey franchise, Bareilly Ki Barfi, Luka Chuppi and Angrezi Medium.

"Every piece of work has to make a point. That's the whole point of art. Although the nineties had a certain brand of comedy, new-age films demand that we poke fun more responsibly and use comedy to say something effective. In such a scenario, comedy films have to offer more than just about laughs and fun," Tripathi said.

'I think it's unfair. Right now, they are talking about the consumption of drugs. It is the choice of an individual, not of an industry. So do not blame the industry. Whether it is in politics, fashion or in the corporate world, there are people who are doing drugs. We should not generalise the situation.'

—Karan Kundra

Actor SHWETA TRIPATHI SHARMA believes it is essential to discuss mental health as the unlock process continues all over India.

"A detailed conversation around mental health must ensue during the unlock phase. Considering people are stepping out to work amid the fear of COVID-19, it's important to conduct systematic counselling sessions," she said.

"Lockdown experiences are different from case to case but the phase has been riddled with existential questions," she added.

Mariah felt not worthy of existing Singer MARIAH CAREY has recalled the time when she did not feel worthy of existing.

The pop star was a guest on Oprah Winfrey's show The Oprah Conversation. In a short video of the episode, Carey and Winfrey can be seen discussing topics ranging from the time the singer was held in the back-seat of a police car to a moment in her life when she didn't feel "worthy of existing."

"I wouldn't have gone here if I hadn't been treated as an ATM machine with a wig on," Carey says in the clip.

It's unclear what or who Carey was specifically referring to but Winfrey responds, "The loneliness and sadness behind the facade, I now understand it."

The illegal tiger trade is threatening the survival of one of nature's most beautiful beasts. Exposing the shocking secrets of illegal tiger farms and the power players who profit, former Royal Marine Commando ALDO KANE uncovers key trafficking routes connecting Malaysia, China, Thailand, Laos and Vietnam, covertly filming the traffickers and meeting those trying to conserve tigers. He calls the series, Tigers: Hunting the Traffickers, a gripping, fearless and an action-packed investigation into the sickening network of ruthless, organised wildlife crime. It's also a crusading film, with enough clout to ignite a campaign for real change, before a majestic species is wiped out completely. Excerpts:

What is the film about?

We look at how the growth in illegal tiger farms throughout Southeast Asia and China is stimulating a demand for tiger products like tiger bone, wine and glue. Tiger trafficking is now big business and this rise in demand is having a devastating effect on the world's wild tiger population as a premium is now paid for its wild provenance. This film investigates the murky underworld of the illegal tiger farms feeding this demand. It is about the complex issues that surround the trade and tries to raise awareness of the immediate threat to these endangered animals. I, alongside a team of investigators, try to expose and piece together the shocking secrets of the illegal tiger farms and those who profit. Numbers of wild tigers in much of Southeast Asia are declining and wild tigers risk getting extinct if this illegal trade continues and is left unchecked.

What attracted you to this project?

Since I first joined the Royal Marines at the age of 16, I have spent many years travelling the globe and a huge amount of time in the jungles of Southeast Asia. I still remember the exhilarating feeling of sharing the dense forests with the wild tiger — for me, the most majestic Apex predator. Since then, I have been fascinated by these beautiful creatures and acutely aware of their plight as an endangered species.

A few years ago, I was talking with director Orlando Von Einsiedel from Grain Media about such risky stories which needed to be told. And this opened the list. Telling a story of a species closer to extinction partly due to man's desire to turn it into "luxury" products would require intricate storytelling, investigative journalism and a healthy dose of risk-taking. It felt like the perfect project to me.

You have spent the last few years working with anti-poaching patrols. What motivated you to expose tiger trafficking?

I have been working over the years with a charity that offers former service

Another kind of hunter

Presenter and former Royal Marine Commando ALDO KANE's forthcoming series, Tigers: Hunting the Traffickers, is a secret investigation into the destruction of the apex predator in Southeast Asia, providing an insight into how the commodification of a farmed product is pushing an entire wildlife species towards extinction. By TEAM VIVA personnel the opportunity to play a critical role in conservation and the prevention of wildlife crime around the world. As highly military trained individuals, our work on the ground is very much focussed on training and mentoring anti-poaching units to deal with illegal poaching. The poachers, who are risking their lives for very little in return, are very often the ones with the least options. The real issue is the organised trafficking networks across Southeast Asia and the increasing demand for illegal products. Poaching happens because there is a demand for an illegal animal product.

It soon became very clear to me that all anti-poaching operations were being continually undermined by this growing demand, high-tech trafficking syndicates and endemic governmental corruption. Where there is a demand, there will always be someone willing to risk their life to supply. That is why I wanted to try and find out more about the networks, the organised crime and the government complicity in this illegal and lucrative trade.

What were the on-ground challenges?

Carrying out this investigation was fraught with challenges. The trade spans nearly all across Southeast Asia — from Malaysia right up through Thailand, Laos, Vietnam and further into China. Due to the nature of the trade in these countries, trafficking can also be linked to other illegal activities such as drug smuggling, illegal logging and human trafficking. So the level of risk and danger is quite high. But the biggest challenge and risk was to the investigators we worked alongside because in some of these countries they could risk their lives for exposing these illegal trade operations. For me, the biggest challenge was feeling quite helpless at the industrial scale of the trade.

You have put yourself in some extremely risky situations to make this film. How has your former life as a Royal Marines Commando Sniper equipped you to deal with them?

My background turned out to be valuable throughout the filming. I was able to use many of the skills I was taught in the Marines like collecting useful information for the investigation. Often, it was just myself and my director Laura out on the ground, gathering information. We had to plan operations as if they were a military tasking, taking into account vehicle moves, communications, actions and worst-case scenario planning. Flexibility is the biggest asset to any live investigation. Sometimes, we would be out on the ground for 18 hours and then all of a sudden, we had to follow a different lead into a different country, the whole time being aware that what we were doing was incredibly risky and dangerous.

Any memorable or shocking moment...

One of the most memorable parts about the filming was spending time with the Counter Tiger Poaching units in the Taman Negara National Park, Malaysia. We spent weeks in the jungle tracking down tiger poachers. They have dedicated their lives to the protection of the few wild tigers left in Malaysia. It's frustrating that their efforts are being completely undermined by the industrial scale poaching taking place in their own backyard. The wild tigers are being trafficked North into Vietnam and China where a premium is fetched as the dead or butchered ones are worth more than those alive and wild. It was truly great to spend time with these dedicated and loyal teams, learning how they operate and what their biggest challenges were. This gave me the background knowledge and drive to find out more about the illegal trade.

For me, the most shocking scenes revealed how large some tiger facilities were. I also visited some places where hundreds of tigers were locked up in cages. The tiger trade is hidden from sight, unlike the ivory or rhino trade where the brutality is on show for the world to see. The world is largely unaware of the brutal way in which they are farmed and ultimately slaughtered for their bones. Breaking into these facilities to expose the cruelty these tigers are exposed to is a vital part of bringing the truth to the wider world.

Why should people watch the film and what do you hope they'll take away from it?

Anyone with an interest in conservation should watch this film. It is an investigation into the destruction and extinction of an apex predator, an insight into how the commodification of a farmed product can affect an entire wildlife species. It is an action-packed, thrilling shocker of an investigation that will take the viewer to some unexpected places. I hope that this film will make a small difference and add to the weight of work that international and local NGOs are doing in the field of tiger protection and conservation.

(The series premieres on October 3 at 9 pm on Sony BBC Earth.)

The Nissan Kicks 1.3 Turbo CVT proves the adage 'the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak'

First things first, this new 1330cc turbocharged petrol engine the Nissan Kicks and on the Renault Duster is a blast. It is by far and away the most powerful small engine available in India right now. Its 156PS of power is 10 per cent greater than the 1.4 dCi turbo on the Creta and Seltos. When you press the throttle pedal, you realise that it is not just a number, the Kicks can move. With this car, you genuinely need to be constantly wary of the hundreds of speed cameras that the Delhi Traffic Police have been installing across the city since you get the hang of the power band, you just ride the engine and transfer the power on this car. The Continuously Variable Transmission (CVT) is not bad either. It does ensure that you stay within a proper engine range for fun if that is what you want and is conservative at lower urban speeds as well.

However, then you show this car a corner. Of late, I have become quite accustomed to even mass-produced small hatchbacks having good handling at higher speeds. Some small cars have even surprised me with handling that you would have thought is far above their price band, the Hyundai Grand i10 comes to mind here. The Kicks on the other hand, feel old. That is because it is old, based on the first-generation Duster platform. In fact, the Duster and Kicks have been upgraded with this engine and transmission at the same time. Initially, I thought this car did not have traction control as there was no 'off' switch for that feature. But later, I discovered that it did have a permanently enabled TCS. Maybe the TCS needs a bit of fine tuning but it is a good thing that owners cannot switch it off at the push of a button. It's because the Kicks will teach you understeer if you hit a corner a bit aggressively. But at speeds that the Korean twins and even the S-Cross can manage fairly nonchalantly. However, in a straight line, the Kicks Turbo is fabulously fun. The other issue I have with this car, in addition to the silly card-like keys that Nissan and Renault keep using, are the quality of the interiors and the plastics. The seats with their quilted leather are very comfortable but the instrument cluster feels rather like a low-end display, given the display on competition cars. The Kicks' remarkably tiny pedal area still feels small even with one pedal removed. The plastics also feel a bit low-end and you feel that on the bare plastic steering wheel in particular and with the blanked out area for steering controls. You can get better interiors for the price, even though the mid-spec Korean twins that the Kicks goes up against (in price) are not as fancy as their top-spec versions. On the XV CVT that I was driving, Apple CarPlay and Android Auto came as standard through the touchscreen but I did find the factory-fitted speakers a bit off the mark. Rear-seat comfort while cruising is no better nor worse than the competition but the sharply raked rear means that storage space might feel a bit compromised.

That said, if you like driving and most importantly, you understand some nuances of cornering and dealing with power, the Kicks is amazing albeit it might prove to be unforgiving and can easily catch you out. But 150+ horsepower at 13 lakh on-road, if you buy the manual, is stunning value for power!

The BMW X4 is great but not the most practical car

I first drove the BMW X4 around the Blue Ridge mountains on the border between North and South Carolina in the summer of 2018. This is because most of the BMW manufactures 'X' range of Sports Utility Vehicles is at a factory in Spartanburg, South Carolina. In fact, if Donald Trump had imposed taxes on European imports into the United States and Europe had responded, BMW would have been the worst affected carmaker because it would have suffered from both ends.

Opposite the factory, there is a BMW track where they test their SUVs. There was one sweeping left-hander, which in the US is on the other side of the steering wheel, and had a negative camber. That is the inside of the turn was higher than the outside, quite unlike turns on most racetracks which are angled into the turn, described as positive camber. In a positive camber turn, the most extreme examples of which are oval racetracks in the US, the banking of the corner helps turn the car into the corner with less steering input, thanks to centrifugal force. In a negative camber corner, you are fighting that force that wants to pull you down and those are challenging for both the car as well as the driver. But in a corner that just how well it handles, even after a couple of laps having switched some of the driver aids off. It is a testament to just how superlative handling has become on some SUVs, that a corner like that which might have led to a rollover at higher speeds a decade ago, can be handled so darn easily. One reason for that is the couple like shape of the X4, giving it a lower stance than the X3 on which it is based. On the twisty hill roads in the Carolinas, the X4 was really fun to drive. Well, the X4 30d, the top-end variant that BMW India sells, is just how I remember it around the corners. Fast and steady.

are driving yourself all the time, one can question the extra ₹60,000 you spend on a comparable 30i petrol-engine variant. I agree that the 265hp 30d variant with the three-litre turbocharged diesel is not available on the X3 but that just highlights my point that the X4 is a driver's car. If you really want drivability, the five-series sedan with the petrol engine is ₹10,00,000 less, although the M Sport 530i with all the toys costs 61 lakh, the sedan is better.

Yes, the X4 will stand out and the 30d has a lot of power to get out of almost any situation. But the X4 is targeted at a single person or a young couple because the X3 is a lot more practical with its shape able to hold a lot more luggage inside. I feel that the X4 30d is better value in terms of its overall package than the Jaguar F-Pace or even the Porsche Macan, the latter being a bit pricier. The Mercedes-Benz GLC Coupe 300d is its biggest rival. While, even in the case of the Merc, I'd buy the standard GLC body shape, I think the Bimmer wins on the handling front. The X4 is an excellent vehicle but maybe this is because I'm getting older now, I just cannot see the logic of it when the X3 is around.

It's a well-known fact that rice has always been a staple food in Asia but we usually think or talk about white rice. However, did you know about black rice, the surprising health benefits that it consists? Well, it has properties such as anti-inflammatory, anti-cancer, anti-diabetes and antioxidants. This superfood is also a rich source of nutrients and minerals like protein, fiber, iron and copper. Unprecedented times like these calls for boosting our immune system. The rich source of antioxidants in black rice helps to build up the immunity and improves the body's ability to fight diseases.

Black rice, also known as as forbidden rice or purple rice, used to be a valuable commodity in ancient China and this is why every grain of it was seized and consumed by the royalty only. Hence, the term forbidden was coined. It mainly grows in the Northeast (called as Chak Hao) and the Southern parts (called as Kavuni in Tamil) of India. In order to select the best variety, closely look at the colour of the rice — the darker the shade, the more nutrition it has. Here are a few benefits and uses of it:

RICH IN ANTIOXIDANTS

Black rice is a grain, which is loaded with antioxidants. The deep black colour is a mark of its antioxidant properties. The anthocyanin content found in it is way more than most of the grains and this is what makes it stand out in comparison to other superfoods such as quinoa and red rice. Despite being less popular than other rice

CHOOSE THE DARK SHADE

Did you know about the surprising health benefits of black rice? Nutrition coach PRIYA PRAKASH lists some varieties, research shows that black rice has the highest overall antioxidant capacity and activity. Antioxidants protect cells against oxidative stress caused by free radicals. Adding black rice to your meal helps in more disease protecting antioxidants. Studies have shown that the anthocyanin antioxidants in grains helps the body to protect against heart diseases, cancer and many more. It is good for eye, immune health and skin as well.

LOADED WITH FIBER

Black rice is loaded with fiber and minerals. A typical bowl of 100 gm of black rice serving has over 4.9 grams of fiber. This is double the amount available in brown rice. If you are looking for a fiber rich diet then it is better to start consuming black rice.

ANTI-INFLAMMATORY PROPERTIES

Black rice is a natural healing food. Research has shown that it helps in reducing inflammatory compounds in your body and increase the anti-inflammatory compounds. This increase in the anti-inflammatory compounds further help in reducing inflammation in various diseases such as cancer, arthritis and allergies.

A NATURAL DETOXIFYING AGENT

It is a rich and natural detoxifying agent. Studies have shown that the phytonutrients in black rice help detoxify your body and remove harmful toxins from your liver. It helps the liver to flush out waste material with its antioxidant property. So next time you throw a party, have a detox week by consuming it.

A GLUTEN-FREE GRAIN

Gluten is a group of seed storage proteins found in cereal grains. Eating foods with gluten causes an immune reaction that damages the lining of their small intestines. Since most nutrients are absorbed through the small intestine, this can lead to nutritional deficiencies. And black rice is naturally gluten-free. If you are allergic to gluten and have the Celiac (an autoimmune disorder that's triggered when you eat gluten) disease, then you should consider having black rice in your daily diet plan. The potential to cause intestinal damage is a major disadvantage of gluten. Gluten can also cause abdominal and bloating pain. Not everyone can digest it easily. Black rice provides all healthy nutrients including protein and fiber.

FIGHTS DIABETES

The black rice bran contains fiber, which in turn helps glucose to be absorbed by your body over a longer period of time. Research has proven that eating whole grains like black rice helps your body lower the risk of Type 2 Diabetes and also keeps your weight in check in addition to boosting your energy levels. It maintains consistent sugar level. So if you are a diabetic person, you must substitute your regular rice with black one as it's way better and helps fight diabetes.

YOUR WEIGHT LOSS PARTNER

Since it's a whole grain and super-rich in fiber, this combination helps your body reduce signals of hunger, thus, helping in preventing overeating. In addition, researchers have found out that it helps prevent insulin resistance in your body, which leads to and is related to the risk of becoming overweight or obese. So if you are someone who is looking to reduce weight, start with including black rice in your weight loss regime.

PROMOTES HEALTHY HEART

A healing food like black rice has been shown to reduce the atherosclerotic plaque formation in the arteries, which is the main reason for a heart attack and stroke. In addition to this, it also helps to reduce the two common factors in heart disease, namely LDL, triacylglycerol and total cholesterol. Consider including forbidden rice to promote a healthy heart and keep heart-related ailments at bay.

SUPPORTS EYE HEALTH

It includes zeaxanthin and lutein that protect retina from damaging free radicals. Hence, black rice is an ideal food for achieving a healthy body. They are a package of nutrients with several health benefits. Switch to black rice to stay fit!

Bravo is progressing very well, and if he has a couple of good days of training, he could come into selection consideration for the next game

It's unfair to judge Cummins right now. He is one of the best going around in the world. I trust him and I'm sure, he will come good. We are just happy to have him

I back myself to play the pull shots and have practised quite a bit. Pretty happy with the performance of my squad. All my shots were good

We were actually keeping things pretty simple, we knew what strokes are to be executed on this ground, so we just stuck to our plan and it went out really well

MOTION PICTURE

13 years ago on September 24, 2007, India under MS Dhoni beat Pakistan by 5 runs in the final of the inaugural edition of World T20 at Wanderers Stadium in Johannesburg.

KL RAHUL BREAKS SACHIN'S RECORD
Kings XI Punjab captain KL Rahul on Thursday became the fastest Indian batsman to reach 2000 IPL runs. Rahul overtook Sachin Tendulkar, who till Thursday held the record for being the fastest to 2000 IPL runs. Tendulkar, who played all six seasons of IPL for Mumbai Indians, had reached the milestone in 63 innings. Rahul did it in 60 innings. Gautam Gambhir is the 3rd in the list, who had scored 2000 runs in 68 innings followed by Suresh Raina (69) and Virinder Sehwag (70).

DHONI WILL GET BETTER AND BETTER
CSK head coach Stephen Fleming on Thursday defended under-fire skipper Mahendra Singh Dhoni, saying it takes "a bit of work" to find best form after a long break and he will "get better and better" as the IPL progresses. "MS is one of the players that hasn't played much cricket in the last year-and-a-half. Everyone expects MS to come out and do what he has done in the past. It doesn't just happen, it takes a bit of work," Fleming said. "As the tournament goes on, he'll just get better and better. To come in and expect him to get a 30-ball 70 would be a tough ask and we've other players also who are in good form and can do a job. So, it's valuing what each player can do and also respecting Dhoni is one of a kind when he's in form and has been playing."

DECISION ON ASH, ISHANT AFTER TRAINING
Delhi Capitals will decide on spinner R Ashwin and pacer Ishant Sharma for their next match against CSK after their practice session on Thursday. While Ishant picked up an injury before their first match of the season against KXIP, Ashwin dislocated his shoulder during the game. "Ashwin is going for practice today (Thursday) and we haven't taken a call yet if it is going to be available or not for tomorrow's (Friday) game. We will see how the practice goes," assistant coach Mohammad Kaif said in pre-match conference. "We are monitoring him closely. But yes, if he is not fit to play tomorrow, we have Amit Mishra who is a very experienced player, and has been doing well in the IPL." Kaif said that Ishant "was sprinting well and is currently under observation". "Our team physio has been keeping a close eye on him and we will also take a call today after our practice session in the evening," said the 39-year-old.

Rahul's unbeaten 132 powers KXIP to 206/3 against RCB

Kings XI Punjab captain KL Rahul celebrates with teammate Karun Nair after he hits Dale Steyn for a six

PTI ■ DUBAI
Skipper KL Rahul smashed the first century of the 2020 Indian Premier League to propel Kings XI Punjab to a daunting 206 for 3 against Royal Challengers Bangalore here on Thursday.
Rahul, who was dropped in the 17th and then again in the 18th over by RCB skipper Virat Kohli, played the role of sheet anchor, scoring 132 off 69 balls that was laced with 14 boundaries and seven sixes.
With his spectacular knock, he surpassed Rishabh Pant to post the highest individual score by an Indian in IPL history. Playing his 60th innings, KXIP CAPTAIN KL RAHUL SMASHED AN UNBEATEN 132 OFF 69 DELIVERIES AGAINST RCB TO RECORD THE HIGHEST-EVER SCORE BY AN INDIAN IN THE HISTORY OF IPL. IT IS ALSO THE HIGHEST-EVER SCORE BY A CAPTAIN IN IPL. RAHUL ALSO BECAME THE FASTEST INDIAN BATSMAN TO REACH 2,000 IPL RUNS, TAKING 60 INNINGS tion of spin into the attack in the seventh over, Yuzvendra Chahal (1/25) struck with the last ball, cleaning up Agarwal (26) with a delightful googly.

Nicholas Pooran (17) and Glenn Maxwell (5) once again failed to make an impact as Shivam Dube (2/33) accounted for the duo. Karun Nair pitched in with an eight-ball 15.
The pace troika of Umesh Yadav (0/55), Dale Steyn (0/57) and Navdeep Saini (0/37) had a torrid time as the KXIP skipper was on fire in his second game as captain.
All players wore black arm-bands to honour Australian cricketer turned commentator Dean Jones, who died in Mumbai due to a cardiac arrest on Thursday.

Youth vs Experience

CSK Dad's Army take on Iyer's youth brigade

PTI ■ DUBAI
Skipper Mahendra Singh Dhoni's much-awaited promotion in the batting order will be an area of interest when Chennai Super Kings strive to pick up pieces against a confident Delhi Capitals in their third IPL encounter on Friday.
The shock defeat against Rajasthan Royals on a batting belt at Sharjah could be primarily attributed to a poor showing by the spinners along with a disastrous 20th over but the batsmen can't absolve themselves completely, especially Murali Vijay, Kedar Jadhav and the skipper himself.
Dhoni had come in to bat at number seven, promoting the likes of Sam Curran, Jadhav and Ruturaj Gaikwad ahead of himself, but the pull backfired badly leaving Faf du Plessis with too much work in too little time.
While his fans still swear by his six-hitting ability, a closer look would show that Dhoni is unable to change the gears against express pace and it was only when Tom Curran came with his medium fast, Dhoni launched an attack. That too when the match was a contest was over.
However on a big Dubai ground with bigger-sized boundaries, the skipper can rotate the strike better unlike Sharjah and also take those extra deliveries to settle down.
For Delhi Capitals, winning a cliffhanger right at the end would have given them a lot of confidence even though Ravichandran Ashwin's probable absence after a shoulder injury could force them to reshuffle their bowling line-up.
Senior spinner Amit Mishra could be an option to partner Axar Patel in case Ashwin is unable to 'Professor Deano' dies of cardiac arrest

PTI ■ MUMBAI
Former Australia batsman Dean Jones, one of the finest exponents of ODI cricket, died of a sudden cardiac arrest in Mumbai on Thursday.
Jones, 59, was in Mumbai with the Star Sports' commentary team for the Indian Premier League. He was in a bio-bubble in a city hotel. He is survived by his wife and two daughters.
Jones played 52 Tests and 164 ODIs for Australia and was part of the 1987 World Cup winning team.
"It is with great sadness that we share the news of the passing away of Mr Dean Mervyn Jones AM. He died of a sudden cardiac arrest," Star Sports said in a press release.
"We express our deep condolences to his family and stand ready to support them in this difficult time. We are in touch with the Australian High Commission to make the necessary arrangements," the release added.
According to an IPL source, it happened in matter of seconds.
"Deano was standing in the hotel lobby and he suddenly collapsed. Brett Lee was standing by his side. Brett tried to revive him by applying CPR (Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation) but he didn't respond," said the source.
"He was then taken to Harkisan Das Hospital in Girgaon where he was announced dead on arrival." Jones' family is in Melbourne and the Australian High Commission is in touch with them.

DEAN JONES 1961-2020
A player well ahead of his time, Jones scored over 6068 ODI runs at an average of 44.61 with seven hundred and 46 fifties.
For Indian fans, he will forever remain in their memory for the timeless Test in Chennai, where he laid the foundation of a big Australian score with an unbeaten double hundred in challenging conditions.

There was an iconic picture of Jones throwing up while batting and so severely dehydrated he was that he had to be admitted to a hospital during the course of the Test match.
In ODI cricket and those numerous World Series Cup matches on Australia's Channel 9, Jones, clad in yellow jersey and the lips lined with zinc cream is etched in memories of the late 80s and early 90s generation.
In ODI cricket, he would often charge down the track against fast bowlers and hitting them over in-field. He played a one-day Test in Chennai, where he laid the foundation of a big Australian score with an unbeaten double hundred in challenging conditions.
He could polarise opinion and would often get trolled. He also once courted controversy for calling Hashim Amla "terrorist" on air, a light-hearted comment but the racist undertone forced the particular broadcaster to take him off air.
His on-air banter, with fellow commentator and Trans Tasman all-rounder Scott Styris was enjoyed and lapped up by new generation of cricket followers.

Modi asks Kohli about Yo-Yo test

PTI ■ NEW DELHI
Skipper Virat Kohli explained the Yo-Yo test helped Indian cricketers aim for high-level fitness when Prime Minister Narendra Modi asked him about the mandatory running aerobic fitness routine.
Prime Minister Modi was interacting with fitness experts and influencers from across the country to mark the one-year anniversary of the Fit India Movement.
Modi was keen to know what is Yo-Yo test and asked if the captain also has to pass it or he gets spared?
"I heard these days there is a Yo-Yo test for the team, what is this test," asked Modi during the virtual interaction.
"This test is very important from fitness point of view. If we talk about global fitness level, our fitness level is still low compared to other teams and we want to take it up, which is a basic requirement."
The gruelling routine has two sets of cones that are 20 metres apart. Once the beep is sounded, the athlete has to reach the marker on the other side by the time the next beep sounds, turn and get back to where he started before the third beep.
The frequency of the beeps gradually increases for the subsequent runs.
Kohli, who is currently in the UAE for the IPL, said even he has to clear the test to get selected for the India team.
"I'm the one who goes to run first and this is the condition that if I fail that I am also not available for selection. It is important to set that culture and it will lead to improvement in overall fitness levels."

Hat-trick hero Havertz

AFP ■ LONDON
Frank Lampard said Kai Havertz is just getting started after opening his Chelsea account with a hat-trick in a 6-0 thrashing of Barnsley, while Arsenal also booked their place in the League Cup fourth round with a 2-0 win at Leicester.
Havertz had struggled to make an impact in his first two Premier League games since sealing a reported $94 million move from Bayer Leverkusen as the most expensive signing of Chelsea's £230 million spending spree in the transfer market.
But the 21-year-old German was one of just three players to retain his place from Sunday's 2-0 defeat to Liverpool and Lampard's decision reaped its reward as he scored his first senior hat-trick.
"I am delighted with Kai, it was everything I wanted from him," said Lampard.
"He had no pre-season so I wanted to give him more time on the pitch with his teammates, learning how we play and press. It was a great night for Kai and it is the first

The Senegalese international will compete with Kepa Arrizabalaga and Willy Caballero for a starting spot at Stamford Bridge.
"I am so excited to be joining Chelsea," said Mendy. "It's a dream for me to be a part of this exciting squad and to work with Frank Lampard and all of his coaching staff."

Barcelona: Atletico Madrid announced the signing of Barcelona forward Luis Suarez on Wednesday, confirming the Uruguayan striker is set to continue playing in La Liga rather than joining Juventus in Italy.
Barcelona said that Atletico had agreed to pay six million euros for Suarez, who left his last training session in tears on Wednesday having been told over the summer that he was no longer required by new coach Ronald Koeman.
Since joining Barca from Liverpool in 2014, Suarez has won a host of trophies, including the 2015 Champions League and four Liga titles.
He leaves as the club's third highest scorer with 198 goals behind Cesar Rodriguez (232) and Lionel Messi (634).
The move to Barcelona's La Liga rivals follows a failed attempt to join Juventus.
Juventus' Andrea Pirlo disclosed last week a deal was unlikely because of delays in the Uruguayan's bid to get an Italian passport. AFP
