India sees highest daily Omicron rise

Total 578 with 156 fresh cases; 'need-based' curbs advised

The results of the new sub-transmission, which was first identified in South Africa last month, are likely to be the most serious threat to the world, as it has been registered in 50 countries so far. The new variant has already been found in India, where it has been registered in 17 states, including Delhi, which has reported the highest number of cases.

The new sub-lineage, designated as BA.2, is said to be more transmissible and potentially more virulent than the original Omicron variant. Its emergence has triggered new concerns about the effectiveness of current vaccines and treatments.

Kerala best on health parameters, UP, worst on bed and hospital incremental growth

Keralas current surge in active cases may have been delayed by the fact that the state has not yet reached the peak of its second wave, which started in September. The state has reported over 50,000 new cases per day in recent weeks, and the number of active cases has risen above 500,000.

However, Kerala has managed to keep hospital admissions and deaths relatively low, thanks to its strong healthcare infrastructure and early detection and treatment of cases. This contrasts sharply with other states like UP, which have reported large numbers of active cases and a surge in hospital admissions and deaths.

The latest data from the National Health Mission shows that Kerala has a hospital bed capacity of 2.6 per 1,000 population, compared to UPs 0.6. The state also has a higher number of doctors and nurses per 1,000 population, which is critical in managing the ongoing pandemic.

EC reviews Covid situation in five poll-bound States

EC panel talks with Health Secy, seeks of paramedic demand call to put off elections

RAJESH KUMAR

In the five poll-bound states—Maharashtra, Assam and Telangana, Andhra Pradesh, and Tamil Nadu—the situation remains critical, with daily case numbers staying high. The EC has been in touch with the respective health secretaries to assess the situation and take necessary steps to control the spread of the virus.

In Assam, the situation is particularly worrying with the state reporting over 1,000 new cases daily. The EC has urged the state government to take immediate steps to contain the spread of the virus, including increasing testing capacity, providing vaccination to more people, and enforcing strict lockdowns.

In Telangana, the state has recorded over 500 new cases a day, with hospitals struggling to cope with the growing demand for beds. The EC has asked the state government to increase testing and vaccination efforts and to ensure that hospitals are well-equipped to handle the surge in cases.

In Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu, the daily case numbers have remained high, with both states recording over 1,000 new cases daily. The EC has urged the state governments to take immediate steps to control the spread of the virus, including increasing testing and vaccination efforts and enforcing strict lockdowns.

The EC has also asked the states to ensure that medical personnel are adequately equipped with personal protective equipment (PPE) and other necessary supplies. The commission has also urged the states to ensure that hospitals are well-equipped to handle the surge in cases, including increasing the number of beds and ensuring that medical personnel are adequately trained to handle the pandemic.

The commission has also asked the states to ensure that vaccination efforts are focused on key target groups, including the elderly, frontline workers, and those with comorbidities. The EC has also urged the states to ensure that vaccination centres are well-equipped with necessary supplies, including PPE and other necessary equipment.

Rahul slams remarks made against Mahatma Gandhi

On Tuesday, West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee said in the state Assembly that RSS Leader Bal Thackeray had named the founding father of the nation Mahatma Gandhi as a traitor and a terrorist, adding that the RSS did not support democracy. The RSS has also challenged the police investigation by saying that their ideology was completely different from that of the RSS.

Banerjee, who was addressing a special Assembly session, said that Thackeray had accused the RSS of being a pro-terrortory group. She added that Thackeray had earlier said that the RSS did not believe in democracy. Banerjee also cited Thackeray's remarks about the RSS's support for the communalism of the 1940s and 1950s, saying that the RSS was not a pro-democracy organisation.

On Wednesday, Thackeray's son Uddhav Thackeray, who is also the leader of the Shiv Sena, denied these allegations and said that the RSS was a democratic organisation.

The Taliban seem to consider humanitarian assistance to Afghanistan their birthright

The international community and the Taliban appear to give in to their demands. The US and other countries are sending aid to Afghanistan to see that 23-old million men, women and children do not starve in the winter months. The Taliban, seemingly unmindful of the urgent aid coming in, have set up their own aid agencies, and are providing relief to those in need. The aid they are giving is mainly food, and the manner in which they distribute it is questionable. The Taliban are using this aid to further their political agenda, and to gain the support of the international community.

Reduction in the rep rate or pumping of more liquidity is ill-advised as without any guarantee of promoting growth will yield negative outcomes

I am a monthly Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) analyst. My current organization is NIT Spray, a research organization. My name is Subharamit Nandi. This is the ninth consecutive time I am writing on this topic. It is important to understand that the MPC's role is to balance the dual mandate of price stability and managing inflation risk. The MPC's decisions are based on a range of economic indicators, including inflation rates, employment levels, and growth trends. It is essential to note that the MPC's decisions are not always straightforward, as they must consider both short-term and long-term economic factors. I am writing to advocate for a different approach to monetary policy that prioritizes growth over inflation. The current monetary policy framework has led to a scenario where growth has been hampered due to the high real interest rates imposed on the economy. This has increased the cost of borrowing and discouraged investment, leading to a slowdown in economic activity. The government needs to review its monetary policy framework and adopt a more growth-oriented approach to support the economy's recovery.

The Indian economy has faced several challenges over the past few years, including low growth rates, high inflation, and uncertainty in the financial sector. The current monetary policy framework has contributed to these challenges, with interest rates remaining high despite signs of economic weakness. The high interest rates have discouraged investment in the real sector, leading to a slowdown in economic activity. This has also put a strain on the government's fiscal position, with higher interest payments on debt.

The government needs to review its monetary policy framework and adopt a more growth-oriented approach to support the economy's recovery. This could involve reducing interest rates, implementing measures to lower the cost of borrowing, and providing fiscal support to sectors that are important for growth. It is crucial to balance the dual mandate of price stability and managing inflation risk, as this will help ensure a sustainable economic recovery.

In conclusion, the current monetary policy framework has not been effective in promoting growth. The government needs to review its approach and adopt a more growth-oriented strategy to support the economy's recovery. This will require a commitment to balancing the dual mandate of price stability and managing inflation risk in a way that prioritizes growth over inflation.

The negotiations are expected to be complex and are likely to involve a range of issues, including Iran's nuclear activities, its ballistic missile program, and its regional behavior.

The talks are expected to be lengthy and may involve multiple rounds of discussions. The outcome of the talks is uncertain, but a successful resolution would provide a significant reduction in tensions in the region and would ease international concerns about Iran's nuclear program.

The pandemic of COVID-19 has impacted various industries in different ways. All industries, fashion retail, food service, hotels, and travel industries have been hit badly. The travel and tourism industry, for example, saw a huge drop in revenue due to lockdowns brought about by social distancing measures. During this period, and after the lockdowns were lifted, many companies, which account for the large majority of the travel and tourism industry, are still struggling to recover.

A recent study indicates that the travel and tourism industry has seen a significant drop in revenue due to the pandemic. The study found that the global travel and tourism industry saw a drop of 90% in revenue in 2020, primarily due to lockdowns and travel restrictions. The industry is expected to take several years to recover fully.

Economic Impact

- Revenue: The global travel and tourism industry saw a drop of 90% in revenue in 2020.
- Employment: Approximately 100 million jobs in the travel and tourism industry were lost in 2020.
- Forecast: The industry is expected to take several years to recover fully.

Solutions

- Regional Tourism: Encouraging regional tourism can help alleviate some of the pressure on the global industry and promote local economies.
- Digital Solutions: Implementing digital solutions, such as contactless check-ins and virtual tours, can help mitigate some of the risks associated with the pandemic.
- Government Support: Governments can provide financial assistance to support the industry during this challenging time.

The travel and tourism industry is facing significant challenges due to the pandemic. However, with the right strategies and solutions in place, it is possible to mitigate some of the risks and recover eventually.
