Farmer leaders accept PM’s dialogue invite, ask for MSP, farmers should remain peaceful

NEW DELHI

Soon after Prime Minister Narendra Modi reached out to farmers and asked them to come forward for talks to sort out their problems, the Prime Minister’s Office has issued a statement saying that the government is ready for talks with farmers. The Prime Minister has made it clear that the government is serious about addressing the farmers’ concerns and will do everything possible to ensure that their voices are heard.

The statement from the PMO said that the Prime Minister is committed to ensuring that the farmers are treated fairly and that their concerns are addressed. The statement added that the government is ready to discuss all issues, including the issues related to the Minimum Support Price (MSP), which has been a major bone of contention between the farmers and the government.

The statement also said that the government is ready to discuss any other issues that the farmers may have, and that the farmers’ representatives are invited to participate in these discussions. The statement added that the government is committed to ensuring that the farmers are treated fairly and that their concerns are addressed.

Housing loan interest rates slashed
Rate of interest for Delhites for taking housing loan reduced from 7.45% to 6.75%.

NEW DELHI

The Delhi Government has announced a reduction in the interest rates for housing loans, effective immediately. The new interest rate for these loans is 6.75% per annum, as compared to the previous rate of 7.45%.

The reduction in interest rates will make it cheaper for Delhites to buy a house.

"We are committed to making housing affordable for all, and this reduction in interest rates is a significant step towards achieving that goal," said Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal.

The new interest rate will apply to all housing loans sanctioned after the announcement.

"This is a welcome move," said Raghuram Rajan, former Governor of the Reserve Bank of India. "It will reduce the cost of housing for millions of Indians."

Question: Balakot air-strike leak, whodunit: more twists and turns

The death of a long-drawn battle to keep the path open for the Pakistan army troops to carry out the audacious attack on the airbase at Balakot is being tapped into. A 25-year-old army trooper from the J&K Rifles, who was among the 36 soldiers killed in the attack, is said to have had a different view on the operation. The trooper had earlier expressed his reservations about the operation, saying it could lead to more casualties and loss of life.

The Pakistan army has been trying to get to the bottom of the leak, with a special team of investigators being set up to look into the matter. The team will be led by a retired general and will include experts in intelligence and military operations.

Meanwhile, the Indian government has ordered a full inquiry into the leak, with the army chief and the defence minister both expressing concern over the matter. The army has also stepped up its security measures, with additional troops being deployed in the area.

The farmers’ protest that went out of hand on Republic Day reminds one of similar demonstrations in Bengal, especially in the pre-independence era

T he agitators had adzed into the Republic Day last month. The inscriptions on their posters would have reduced permissible space for any counter-protestor to use. The only constant in a American pop culture but also the ability to keep winning is remarkable. The Super Bowl is America’s top sporting event. He was the event that stops the entire country in its tracks, where families sit together in the living room, men and women pile into each other and put their bodies (and minds) on the line playing a violent sport. Tom Brady has been down for 20 years. He has been the pinnacle of this sport, the Super Bowl, an astounding 10 times. After last night’s game, it was an incredible seven times than any other franchise. This year, he went into the season knowing that he was going to face two teams and joining a new outfit in the midst of a pandemic with little time to adjust to new coaches and systems. And, he kept the ball, with a strict salary cap in place, in the NFL is on the face of it, one of the most equitably major sporting leagues in the world. It is more equitable than regular European football leagues such as the English Premier League and Spain’s La Liga. Yet there appears to be one constant, Tom Brady. We Indians may not follow the NFL or really care about it, and might be puzzled when our American colleagues and friends talk about Tom Brady (or “TB12” as he is branded) and how he is the “Greatest Of All Time” or “GOAT” as the American football fans call him. Yes, Tom Brady and a big good sports fan should not just know about Brady but respect and celebrate his over two decades, even if they follow the NFL and may not like Brady’s habit of always winning.

Caution!

Whether human-made or natural, the Chamoli tragedy is another reminder to be on the right side of nature

W hen anthropogenic or natural, the latest catastrophe in Uttarakhand proves that whatever it takes to maintain its balance... again, the mighty nature tries to restore its equilibrium which has undoubtedly been disturbed by a range of human activity like mining and building dams, hydro-electric projects, roads and so on, all leading to pollution and global warming. If monsoons that the “climate change” debate occupies the centre stage only in the aftermath of such calamities. Why do we always wait for nature to wreak havoc to rethink our climate commitments? We seem to have learnt hardly anything from similar catastrophes, the last being the 2013 flash flood that killed more than 5,500 people, except strengthening our disaster response mechanism. It is like emphasising on damage control rather than finding sustainable answers to the existing climate crisis. The governments across the world should keep in mind that coordinated and sincere efforts are needed to live in harmony with nature, and all our attempts to overpower it will eventually prove counterproductive. We cannot win over nature but we can surely win it over. We should not be wise to pass the blame on any one country or continent as, when it comes to nature, we all swim or sink together.

Martial law declared in parts of Myanmar

Yangon: Martial law was declared in parts of Myanmar on Monday, after dozens of people were killed in demonstrations against military rule. The announcement came shortly after the military took control of the country, a move that has sparked widespread protests.

The announcement was made by the armed forces, who said that martial law would be in effect in the country’s three largest cities, Yangon, Mandalay, and Mandalay Region. The military said that the move was necessary to maintain order and security in the country.

The announcement came amid growing concerns about human rights abuses in Myanmar, where the military has been accused of using deadly force against protesters. The International Society for Human Rights (ISHR) has said that at least 40 people have been killed in protests since the military took control of the country on Monday.

The military announced that martial law would be in effect for three days, during which time it would have the authority to carry out arrests and impose宵lockdowns.

The announcement was met with widespread condemnation, with many countries calling for an end to the violence and the restoration of democracy in Myanmar. The United Nations has said that it is “deeply concerned” about the situation in the country and has called for an end to the military coup.

The military said that it had taken control of the country because it was necessary to maintain order and security. The announcement came shortly after a group of military officers seized power in a coup, ousting the elected government of Aung San Suu Kyi.

The coup has sparked widespread protests, with demonstrators calling for the restoration of democracy and the release of political prisoners. The military has used deadly force against protesters, killing at least 40 people so far.

If you have diabetes, it is a powerhouse of health. In the early morning hours, our body is at its most active state, and we start to produce insulin to help maintain blood sugar levels. In people with diabetes, however, this process is disrupted, and insulin levels may remain low. This can lead to elevated blood sugar levels, which can cause health problems such as heart disease, kidney disease, and nerve damage.

Why is it important?

Diabetes is a chronic disease that affects the blood glucose control system. Blood glucose, also known as blood sugar, is a type of sugar that is found in the blood and is produced by the body when you eat carbohydrates. When you eat something that contains carbohydrates, your body breaks it down into glucose and uses it as a source of energy. Some of this glucose enters your bloodstream, where it is carried to your cells to be used for energy.

How does it work?

Glucose enters the blood from the digestive system when you eat a meal. As a result, your blood glucose level increases. Your pancreas responds by releasing insulin, a hormone that makes blood glucose available to cells throughout your body. Insulin helps your body convert blood glucose into energy that can be used by your cells.

What are the symptoms?

Diabetes occurs when your body either cannot produce enough insulin or cannot use insulin effectively. The symptoms of diabetes include:

- Increased thirst and urination
- Fatigue or weakness
- Blurred vision
- Tingling or numbness in your hands or feet
- Frequent infections
- Unexplained weight loss or gain

How is it diagnosed?

Diabetes is diagnosed through a blood test called the hemoglobin A1c (HbA1c) test. This test is done during a doctor's visit, and it measures the percentage of hemoglobin in your blood that is attached to glucose. Normal levels are between 4.5% and 6.0%, and an HbA1c level of 6.5% or higher indicates diabetes.

How is it treated?

There is no cure for diabetes, but there are several ways to manage it:

- Medications: Your doctor may prescribe medication to help lower your blood glucose levels.
- Lifestyle changes: Eating a healthy diet, exercising regularly, and controlling your weight can help keep your blood glucose levels within a healthy range.
- Insulin injections: Some people with diabetes may need to inject insulin at certain times of the day to help manage their blood glucose levels.

What can I do to prevent diabetes?

You can reduce your risk of developing diabetes by:

- Eating a healthy diet
- Exercising regularly
- Losing weight if you are overweight or obese
- Not smoking
- Limiting alcohol intake

Conclusion

Diabetes is a serious condition that can lead to significant health problems if left untreated. By understanding how diabetes works and taking steps to manage it, you can help keep your blood glucose levels within a healthy range and reduce your risk of developing complications. If you have diabetes, it is important to work closely with your healthcare provider to develop a personalized treatment plan that meets your needs and helps you live a healthy, active life.

Another reason for the growth of tattoos has been the increasing demand for body modifications. People are increasingly looking for ways to express their identity and individuality through tattoos. This trend has been further fueled by the rise of body-positive movements and the acceptance of tattoos as a form of art. The popularity of tattoos has also been boosted by the rise of social media, which has allowed people to showcase their tattoos and share their experiences with others.

As a writer, you must be a dreamer who has a lisp and can’t express in a way that makes sense to everyone. You have to keep writing until it becomes second nature. You have to bring your ideas to life in a way that resonates with the reader. You have to create characters that readers can relate to and feel a connection with.

Please don’t spend so much time on internet. As a person I am extremely opinionated and vocal. I have grown up with the internet and, expressing myself online comes very naturally, and it is almost second nature to me. But now I have realised that since I have a certain responsibility and following, I cannot say just anything. Earlier, when I did not have that following, I had that liberty.

BRACKLEY:

"I want to win the Premier League this season." Liverpool's manager Jurgen Klopp has set his sights on a title triumph after defeating Chelsea in their FA Cup semi-final last weekend.

"It's been a long time coming for us after finishing runners-up last year," said Klopp. "But we're fully focused on the job at hand and we'll give it our all to lift the trophy.

"Winning the FA Cup was a fantastic achievement for the club, but we're not satisfied with just one trophy. We want to win the Premier League and we're ready to do it.

"We've been working hard all season to be at our best and we're confident we can achieve our goals. Let's give it our all and see what we can do in this season of the Premier League."
