Indian farmer at crossroads: Market, state or collective action?

Emotions are pent-up in the ceaseless fray, the eternal battle of the titans. The state, as the ultimate arbiter, holds sway over the market, which in turn influences the farmer's decisions. The collective action of farmers has historically been a powerful tool in asserting their demands. However, the question of whether to resist state control or seek integration with the market remains a complex one.

In the post-independence era, the state's role in agriculture has been a contentious issue. Initially, the state aimed to control the market to ensure food security and stability. However, this led to a decrease in the productivity of farmers and a decline in their income. The state's role in this arena is thus a delicate balance between regulating the market and allowing the market to operate freely.

The traditional Indian farmer is often seen as a provider of food security for the nation. However, the state's policies have often neglected the needs of farmers, focusing instead on the needs of the larger population. This has led to a decline in the standard of living of farmers, who are often forced to take on multiple jobs to make ends meet.

From the perspective of farmers, collective action has been a way to voice their concerns and demand changes in state policies. However, the effectiveness of collective action is limited by the fragmented nature of the farming community. The lack of organization and coordination among farmers makes it difficult to bring about change.

The state, on the other hand, has a duty to ensure that the farmers' needs are met. It is responsible for providing a fair price for the produce, ensuring that farmers are not exploited by middlemen, and providing support during times of crisis. The state should work towards creating a market that is fair and just for all stakeholders.

In conclusion, the state should balance its role in regulating the market with the need to support farmers. Collective action can be a powerful tool, but it requires organization and coordination. The state should also work towards creating a more inclusive market that benefits all members of society.

A parent said, “Our child is in another school and they are making this compulsory while GD-1 is already granted but no action taken by the school. The students are being asked to fill the form and the schools are下手恐吓 threatening to ask the students to sign such forms.”

What can be the reason behind the school asking the students to sign such forms? According to the parents, it is to check whether the students are active in class and also to make sure that they attend the class on time. The parents are not in favor of such practice.

In the meantime, the Hyderabad District Education Authority has directed all the schools to ensure that the students are not harassed in any way and that they are not forced to sign such forms.

India's COVID-19 case load has fallen below the 3-lakh mark for the first time in nearly seven months and comprises just 1 per cent of the world's daily fresh cases. Minister of health and family welfare Harsh Vardhan on Wednesday said as on December 30, there were 3,21,882 active cases in the country, with 97,199 new cases reported in the last 24 hours. "Thirty-four states and UTs have reported zero new cases," he said.

"The active cases have fallen to the lowest ebb since July 27, 2020," the minister added. He, however, said that the surge in cases for the last week was due to the ramping up of testing and because of the festive seasons. "Monsoon season is over and hence rainfall cannot be a reason. We should not lose the momentum," he said.

"Globally, India has one of the lowest daily new cases of COVID-19 cases per 1 million population," he said.

"The average daily fresh cases in India have received the maximum fall since July 14, whereas, other countries in the Southeast Asia region such as Vietnam, Japan, Indonesia have not been able to achieve this," he added.

"This is a very significant achievement and a result of the lakhs of tests that we are conducting. This is due to the concerted efforts of the Centre, states and the people," he added.

"We are taking necessary steps to ensure that the states maintain the momentum and will continue to concentrate on testing," the minister said.

"The Centre wants to ensure that the states maintain the testing momentum and that they do not go back to the old ways of low testing," he said.

"I would like to urge the people to continue following the COVID guidelines and to take necessary precautions," the minister said.

"There is a risk of the second wave, but it is unlikely with the steps that we have taken," he added.

"We are also concerned about how we will handle the surge when the winter season kicks in," he said.

"We need to maintain the testing momentum and continue to test, test and retest," he added.

"The Centre has requested all the states to prepare a plan to continue the testing momentum till December 2020," he said.

"We have asked all the states to set up multi-purpose testing laboratories in every district," he added.

"We have also asked the states to ensure that testing is conducted in every block in every district," he said.

Rather than quibbling over Neta ji’s birth anniversary, the farmers may not even pay any heed to the celebration. There are allegations and counter-claims of the deaths being related to the COVID-19 jab, and the families of the deceased are still awaiting justice. The family members of Neta ji have been forced to fight this battle all alone, as none of the political parties have taken any initiative to address their grievances. The family members of Neta ji have also appealed to the Government to declare public holidays on their son’s birth anniversary, but their request has been turned down. The Union Government has not even united over the issue. It sends a very wrong message to the people of India, especially the youth, that the Government does not value their sentiments and does not care about their welfare.

The farmers may not even pay any heed to the celebration of Neta ji’s birth anniversary, as they are more concerned about their daily struggles and the ongoing tension between them and the Government. The farmers are not alone in their struggle, as the people of India are also standing with them. The people of India are united in their support for the farmers and are willing to stand by them in their fight against the Government.

On the contrary, the Government is not doing enough to address the issues faced by the farmers. The Government is more concerned about its own political interests and is not willing to listen to the farmers’ demands.

GAIL has also declared an interim dividend of 1.55 per cent of the total paid-up capital, at a price of Rs 30 per share for the coming year. This share buyback forms a part of the company's strategy to create long-term value for its shareholders. GAIL has been a leader in the Indian natural gas and petrochemicals sector, with a track record of consistent growth and profitability. The share buyback is expected to boost the company's stock price and enhance its attractiveness to investors.

This sounds like the Government is creating a culture where there is no such thing as a small mistake. These changes have taken place in recent years, but they may not have been fully appreciated by the public. The Ministry of Health and Family Welfare has been working on this for some time, and it must be noted that these changes have been made with the utmost care and consideration.

Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning are rapidly growing and are opening up new avenues for entering the world of technology and for being vocal about the trends of today.

Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Machine Learning (ML) are making headway in various industries. AI has been around for decades, but its recent growth is driven by advancements in computing power, data availability, and algorithmic improvements. ML, a subset of AI, focuses on developing algorithms and statistical models that can automatically improve through experience and by being exposed to new data. Together, AI and ML are transforming industries across the board, from healthcare to finance, from transportation to retail.

AI and ML are driving innovation in various fields. For instance, in healthcare, AI-powered diagnostics can help doctors make more accurate diagnoses, while ML algorithms can predict disease outcomes and patient needs. In finance, AI is used to detect fraudulent transactions and ML models can personalize investment advice. In transportation, self-driving cars utilize ML to navigate complex environments and make split-second decisions.

The writer, Maaz Ansari, is the founder of AI and Machine Learning (ML) company, Transforming Insights. He has been a vocal advocate for the adoption and advancement of ML in various industries. His company, Transforming Insights, uses AI and ML to drive process optimization, automation, and innovation.

Transforming Insights has forecasted that the worldwide AI adoption rate will grow from 12% in 2020 to 65% in 2025. The company has already completed over 60 projects and is currently working on 320 projects. The company has forecasted a 10X growth in the forecast period 2020-2027. As an AI and Machine Learning professional, Maaz is passionate about sharing his knowledge and expertise with others. He believes that AI and ML are the future of technology and that everyone should be familiar with its potential and limitations.

Business Forecasting and Analysis

This technology is strategi-gically poised to acquire a set of data at a point in time which then is examined and utilized for making smart decisions. With the changing world and dynamism AI and machine learning can give companies with accuracy in high as 90-95% cost. Companies will soon start using recurrent neural networks for high fidelity forecasting.

Increased adoption of hyper-personalized and contextual communications

2021 will bring in a change that may affect “contact” king. With the adoption of AI and ML tools and technologies, organizations are increasingly adopting a more personalized and context-aware approach. This approach allows organizations to better understand their customers and provide them with more relevant and personalized experiences. This is leading to increased adoption of hyper-personalized and contextual communications.

As a result, the future of AI and machine learning is bright, and organizations are investing more and more in these technologies to stay ahead of the curve. The rapid growth of AI and ML will continue to drive innovation and transform industries across the board.

Warne predicts huge fall out in Oz team

The leg-spinner Shane Warne believes the embarrassing Test loss to an under-strength India will result in a "huge fallout" in the Australian team and a search for a new leadership structure. India recorded one of their most memorable wins on Tuesday. They batted them out of the game with a full-strength Australia to pocket the four-match series 2-1 and retain the Border-Gavaskar Trophy.

"I think that's a huge fallout from this (series). I think too many times you look to the seconds or the sixth seconds or the 10th balls of the over, that's when you're our two or three players that play that role," Warne said.

"So that's our first test, our duty, our role. We've got too many big players for that. Our strength is our bowlers and our middle order and our batting was our problem. I think we need to re-think a lot of things." Warne was quoted as saying by Fox Cricket.

"Their bowlers are on the verge of greatness. Their bowlers are on the verge of greatness, this is the same team that is competitive in the world. They've got a lot of depth and they've got a lot of quality. Their batting will improve. Their middle order is strong, they've got some quality quicks."

His comments came on the back of Australia's thrashing in the second Test in Brisbane on Tuesday, when the tourists were batted out of the game for just 205 in their first innings in reply to India's 308.

"I don't think the team stood up to the mark. They didn't have any fighting spirit, they didn't have any pride."
