Democracy is proving clouds can not last

Thanks to technologies of the 21st century, the mind of a hacker is available. And that has led to Democracy entering the back door, unnoticed.

The concept of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) was first introduced in the 1950s by the United States. In the Indian context, CSR was introduced by the Companies Act, 2013, in which it was stated that every company having a net worth of ₹50 crore or more, or a turnover of ₹100 crore or more, or a book profit of ₹5 crore or more during the immediately preceding financial year, shall as a mandatory obligation spend 2% of its profit after tax on CSR activities.

The introduction of CSR has been a mixed blessing. While it has brought a lot of benefits, it has also led to several problems. One of the major problems is the lack of transparency in CSR activities. Many companies have been caught red-handed for not spending their CSR funds as per the mandate.

Another problem is the lack of accountability in CSR activities. Many companies have been accused of cherry-picking projects that benefit them, rather than those that serve the society.

Despite these problems, CSR is an essential part of any business. It helps in building a positive image of the company, which in turn helps in attracting more customers.

The key to improving CSR activities is to make them more transparent and accountable. One way to do this is to make companies disclose their CSR activities in their annual reports.

Another way is to make companies report their CSR activities on a regular basis. This will help in keeping a check on companies and ensure that they are spending their CSR funds as per the mandate.

Finally, the government should also play a role in improving CSR activities. They should make it mandatory for companies to spend a certain percentage of their profits on CSR activities.

In conclusion, CSR is an important aspect of any business. It is essential that companies spend a certain percentage of their profits on CSR activities. However, it is equally important that these activities are transparent and accountable. The government should also play a role in improving CSR activities.

Regain the lost glory

Traditional handmade lamps tapped in modern e-commerce sites during the pandemic for realising their marketing potential.

Say no to flaky skin

Following a good skin care routine, especially a simple and consistent moisturisation one is a must, says Dr Sushruta CK.

Wash your face twice daily to keep the skin clean and healthy. This is especially important for oily types, who are more prone to flaky skin.

After washing your face, pat dry with a soft towel, then apply a gentle moisturiser.

Avoid using astringents or toners that can dry out the skin. Choose a moisturiser that is suitable for your skin type.

Stay hydrated by drinking plenty of water throughout the day. Drinking water helps to flush out toxins and keep the skin hydrated.

Protect your lips by using a lip balm that contains moisturising ingredients like shea butter, coconut oil, and Vitamin E. These help to keep the lips soft and supple.

Sun protection is also important. Use a broad-spectrum sunscreen with a SPF of at least 30 to protect the skin from UV damage.

Lack of hydration can cause dryness, flakiness, and other skin issues. Drinking enough water, using a hydrating moisturiser, and wearing sunscreen are essential for maintaining healthy skin.

Tips to prevent dry lips

- Apply a lip balm after washing your face to help lock in moisture.
- Choose a lip balm that contains ingredients like shea butter, coconut oil, and Vitamin E.
- Avoid licking your lips, as this can further dry them out.
- Use a gentle exfoliant once a week to help remove dead skin cells.

Say no to flaky skin

Ditch crash diets, stick to a routine

When a rise in the humidity and temperature accelerates, the body tends to get rid of excess heat and sweat, and if it is not moistened and toned, it can lead to flaky skin or dryness. Follow a good skin care routine, especially a night-time regime, and use products rich in moisturising ingredients like Cocoa Butter and Wheat Germ Oil. The latter can be beneficial in having moist and nourished skin.

Additionally, for cracked lips in winter, look for a lip balm with the goodness of Shea butter, Beeswax, and Carrot Seed Oil. These ingredients help protect and nourish your lips. Also, use a good skin care gift by Dr Sushruta CK, an e-commerce expert, Research & Development Manager at Himalaya Drug Company.

Nutritious meals

As much as moisturising skin right after a shower is necessary, maintaining healthy skin goes beyond the bathroom. A balanced and nutritious diet is also crucial.

Fruits and vegetables are rich in vitamins and minerals that nourish the skin. They contain antioxidants that help protect the skin from damage and promote healthy skin. Make sure to include a variety of fruits and vegetables in your diet.

Tips for healthy skin

- Drink plenty of water daily to keep the skin hydrated.
- Use a gentle cleanser to remove dirt and oil from the skin.
- Use a moisturiser after cleansing to lock in moisture.
- Protect the skin from the sun by using a broad-spectrum sunscreen.
- Exfoliate once a week to remove dead skin cells and help speed up the skin's renewal process.
- Use a gentle eye cream to target the delicate area around the eyes.
- Use a gentle lip balm to keep the lips soft and supple.

Stress-busting tips

- Practice mindfulness or meditation to help reduce stress.
- Get regular exercise to improve blood flow and maintain healthy skin.
- Get enough sleep to allow the skin to repair and regenerate.
- Avoid smoking and excessive alcohol consumption as they can damage the skin.

The Great Indian Escape

The Indian escape industry is immense as well. It creates 40 million units per year to support this trade and provides work to about 4.3 million people. Its earnings also fuel a huge black economy. The industry looks promising. The global demand for handicrafts is on the rise as consumers seek unique and one-of-a-kind products to express their individuality.

With the increased interest in sustainable and eco-friendly products, the Indian handicraft industry is poised for growth. The industry is also benefitting from the growing popularity of e-commerce platforms, which are providing a new channel for artisans to reach a global audience.

Promotion Councils and Handloom Export Promotion Councils are working to increase the reach of handloom and handicraft items of India, adding pure handspun and handwoven products to the world market and promoting the skills of artisans.

Handloom and handicrafts industry is the backbone of the livelihood of a significant number of people, especially in rural areas. It plays a crucial role in income generation, skill development, and empowerment of artisans.

While the industry is experiencing growth, there are also challenges. The demand for handloom and handicrafts is seasonal, and artisans need to be prepared to adapt to changing market trends.

Governments and organisations are taking initiatives to enhance the visibility of handloom and handicraft products and provide support to artisans to help them stay competitive and sustainable.

Despite the challenges, the Indian handicraft industry has a bright future, driven by a growing demand for unique and authentic products and a strong base of skilled artisans.

In conclusion, the Indian handicraft industry is a valuable resource and a source of livelihood for many. With continued support and initiatives, it has the potential to thrive and contribute significantly to the economy.
Kohli has India to tough side: Hussain

Former England captain Nasser Hussain feels Virat Kohli has India to tough side. Hussain was a part of India’s 2005-06 Ashes winning team and was left out of the squad for the 2010-11 series against Australia. Hussain believes Kohli has India to tough side.

"That’s really a good sign that they’re doing, that with harder task, you’re not one inch fall. He’s leading by example and he’s a very good leader. There’s no one who plays all three roles, then when? It’s the way of the world at the top," Hussain said. "For me, his captaincy has been absolutely spot on. This series, with a lead-in to get your game and your rhythm back, and he got his rhythm back with a century at Edgbaston. Kohli believes in the old adage that form is temporary but class is permanent."

"Sometimes in a few series, a team is all off but that doesn’t mean that they’re gone. A player needs just one knock to get back to his rhythm. If he is going through a bad patch, my captainhood means my job. It’s tough, but he always has to be ready for a tough one in the four-Test series."
