The Government on Sunday strongly refuted the allegations of co-opting the Opposition, and accused the Opposition of using its access to the Parliament Information Technology Network and Communications Minister Anurag Thakur, whose name was also found in the list of people whose phones had been tapped, demanded immediate action against those who had acted in this manner and said it would be impossible, for this Government to work in an atmosphere of fear and intimidation.

The Opposition, on the other hand, had said it was not clear who was tapping whom. In fact, it had refuted the Government’s claim that tapping was carried out for national security reasons.

The Opposition had also been critical of the Government’s handling of the pandemic, saying that some decisions were taken based on selective leaks, the timing of the discussions in the Parliament and the Opposition’s inability to properly question these decisions.

Many of the Opposition party and international org parties have been accusing the Government of being involved in a campaign to smear the opposition by tapping phones to get information about their activities, especially in the run-up to the General Elections of 2023.

The Opposition had also said that the tapping of phones was illegal and a violation of the principles of parliamentary democracy.

The Opposition had also tabled a motion in the Parliament to discuss the issue of phone tapping and had also sought a clarificatory statement from the Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister had earlier defended the Government’s actions and said that the tapping of phones was being done in the interest of national security.

The Prime Minister had also said that the Opposition was trying to provide a false narrative to divert attention from the real issues facing the country.

The Opposition made its protest known when Naidu started his speech in the pre-lunch session. Similar situations were witnessed when Modi came to the House to introduce the newly inducted 14 members. The Opposition was unhappy that he didn’t allow them to suspend the scheduled business of the house and raise the matters by raising hands. Giving his reason for doing so, Naidu said it was not feasible to call 17 MPs in one go, and assured the members that all the important matters would be discussed in the House.

The Opposition was agitated when Naidu said: “I wish to inform you that the House is not in order to suspend the scheduled business of the house and raise the matters by raising hands.”

The new Leader of the House and Union minister Chandrakant Patil said: “The business which the House has decided and announced will take place in its order.”

The Prime Minister said: “If you have any issue, you can present them and I will address them.”

The Delta plus variant—new, more infectious variant of Delta strain—has been detected in 55-60 cases across India, according to the India’s National Surveillance, Analysis and Response System for COVID-19 (INSACOG) said on Monday. The Delta plus variant is a sub-lineage of the Delta variant (B.1.617.2 strain) of the SARS-CoV-2 virus, a study by the Indian Council of Medical Research (ICMR) said. It has been detected in 55-60 cases across India, according to the INSACOG.

It is also reported that Chief Labour Minister Dr Saraswati Tripathi has said that Chief Labour Minister may give the go-ahead for the Delta plus variant to which a significant wave will be driven. However, the Delta plus variant is considered by scientists as the most contagious strain, and higher immune responses will be induced.

WordPress CEO calls on governments, to take Pegasus makers to task

F "WordPress CEO, Matt Mullenweg, in a tweet on Monday, expressed concern over the rights of journalists and human rights activists and called for action against the companies that make surveillance software which enables governments to spy on their citizens.

He said that the companies behind the surveillance software should be held accountable for their actions. Mullenweg stated that the companies should be taken to task and their products should be banned from use in countries with poor human rights records.

"I have the highest respect for the companies behind these technologies, but I cannot support their use in countries with poor human rights records," Mullenweg tweeted.

"We need to take a stand against these companies, and ban their products from being used in countries where human rights are not respected," he added.

A thorough probe into the reported act of snooping is surely needed to clear the air

Snooping is back. Facebook claimed in 2019 that a spyware, Pegasus, developed by the Israeli company NSO Group, was used to target Indian leaders, lawyers, and rights activists among them. This Sunday, Pegasus surfaced again, reportedly targeting large groups of Indians, including journalists, activists, politicians, and government officials. The government has repeatedly denied any interest in the matter.

The Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology said that the report was not "true in fact or substance" and "false in nature." It added that the "Ministry was not party to the report, and the report is not based on any evidence or facts." The report has also been dismissed by the Ministry of External Affairs.

The Opposition has held the government responsible for the snooping report and demanded an explanation. A probe is surely needed to clear the air; otherwise, allegations of such a nature will pose a threat to Indian democracy. Only a thorough, independent, and impartial probe can ensure the rule of law and the integrity of all knowledge, which is an important challenge for our times.

The Pegasus report has once again raised the question of surveillance and privacy in India. It is a reminder that our digital data and personal information are not safe from prying eyes. The government must take immediate action to ensure the protection of our privacy and the rule of law.

The government should also take action to prevent the spread of fake news and misinformation. Social media platforms must take responsibility for the content that they allow to circulate on their platforms.

The government should also ensure that the media is free to report on these issues without fear of reprisal. The media must be allowed to investigate and report on these issues without interference.

The government should also take action to prevent the spread of hate speech and violence against religious and other groups. The use of social media to spread hate speech and incite violence is illegal and must be stopped.

BAD DIET HITS KIDS WITH OBESITY

Especially in these times of the pandemic, they must avoid industrially processed food

The Indian Academy of Pediatrics (IAP) has warned the definition of childhood obesity needs a relook to curb the obesity among children. In a recent report, the IAP says, "It is time to redefine the definition of child obesity. Currently, the World Health Organization (WHO) defines it as an undesired, high body mass index (BMI) for age and sex in children and adolescents. However, this definition is not always accurate and does not consider other factors that contribute to childhood obesity, such as lifestyle, diet, and physical activity."

The report underlines the need for a "holistic" approach to address childhood obesity, emphasizing the importance of healthy eating, physical activity, and mental well-being. It highlights the role of parents, schools, and the community in promoting healthy lifestyles among children.

The IAP recommends that the definition of childhood obesity should consider the following factors:

1. BMI for age and sex: This is currently the standard measure used to assess obesity in children.
2. Body composition: The IAP suggests that body composition (percentage of fat mass and lean mass) should be considered in addition to BMI.
3. Physical activity levels: The report emphasizes the importance of physical activity in preventing childhood obesity.
4. Sleep patterns: Sleep-related issues are also linked to childhood obesity.
5. Dietary habits: Unhealthy diet choices are a significant contributor to childhood obesity.
6. Mental well-being: Emotional and behavioral factors play a role in childhood obesity.
7. Socioeconomic factors: The IAP notes that poverty, lack of access to healthy foods, and environmental factors can contribute to childhood obesity.

The report concludes that a "holistic" approach, which considers multiple factors, is necessary to prevent and manage childhood obesity effectively. It calls for a multidisciplinary approach involving healthcare professionals, educators, policymakers, and parents to design and implement effective strategies to address childhood obesity.
Microsoft Exchange email hack was caused by China, says US

The Biden administration believes that a hacking campaign against Microsoft Exchange email servers was carried out by Chinese nationals who probed 300,000 organizations, including 23,000 in the US, in the early months of this year. The US has already taken action against the Chinese government, and domestic firms are said to be at risk. The White House announces plans for US to respond to the hacking campaign.

Biden holds exiting king’s intimate confidants in Middle East

President Joe Biden is set to host King Abdullah II of Jordan this week for talks on one of the most difficult moments of Jordan’s 22-year reign and a pivotal time in the Middle East for Biden. Abdullah, who is set to make history by becoming the first monarch of a Middle Eastern country to visit the US, is facing a crisis in his relationship with the US after his aide and former aide were arrested on bribery charges. The rebel group Hamas, which is McKenna’s main opponent in the upcoming elections, has threatened to disrupt the visit.

Sebi proposes swing pricing mechanism for debt mutual funds

Sebi on Monday proposed swing pricing mechanism for debt mutual funds, the first step in its scheme to ensure that interest rates on these funds are disclosed at the time of investment. The swing pricing mechanism will range between 0.5 and 1.5%, which will be applicable to all schemes. Sebi said in a notification that the swing pricing mechanism will allow investors to choose between a lower initial cost or a higher initial cost, but with lower ongoing charges.

The swing pricing mechanism will be applicable to all schemes, both open and closed. The swing fees will be calculated based on an annualized rate of interest, which will be determined by Sebi. The rate will be applied to the net asset value of the fund at the end of each month, and will be adjusted quarterly.

This in world of increasing competition, the success of a firm can hang on communications which is directly driven by content strategy, says Tanya Kanna.

Move beyond media

Original content is innovation and engagement are key aspects of your own domain. Without these, your media plan or any other engage- ment can be meaningful.

Pod PR for your future

Radical PR as the premise for all the PR activity, our world is digitally connected world, simply PR is enough. The conversation based PR for discussion, dialogue and exchange of ideas is what differentiates the idea of creating value and communicating engagement, story is easily created.

Carry your capability forward by creating value

Visibility across diverse media ultimately leads to new business, simply by establishing capability, aided by communication and outgoing activities.

Move beyond the story, the aesthetic and engaging value by creating intent and the narrative, being authentic to who and not just selling a product. This means a business is built on understandings, values and perception of services.

The words with us

For communication today emerging from state printer media of problems, brochures, and publications to social media, virtual and virtual social media platforms, some are at war with others. The essence of the global economy is it is important to improve. Instead of being alone and trying to build a fol- lowing out of this, one can optimize on the outreach of what you want to attract in the long run.

What is your USP?

I want to do a film that just entertains but also infuses with the right information that change. When I heard the concept, I really touched me, and more so, I think. So, I decided to extend my association with it as a pro- ducer rather than just being an actor. Additionally, it is quite heartening to see how the women in this industry have grown in stature.

Even though I was not able to get much of a buzz, the film has appreciated my performance and I am grateful for that. Because I have been a face of one of the people who led my performance in the film and that I have done a role in their production which has grown significantly. I am sure the two films which have been released will also make a significant impact.

Don’t panic: Karan Kundrra

Actor Karan Kundrra talks about the fear of the third Coronavirus wave and the new Delta+ variant could lead to something serious. He explains the importance of following precautions.

“Karan says, “If you have any complaint against the Government or your local transport or go to the market, or sit in a restaurant, every such activity has a risk. This is something that you don’t understand, but this becomes a risk. You can always complain if you are not sure or you are or about the incident or the person who is not following the laid rules. You can message me personally, but it is something that we can do.”

Talking about Suhana, Karan said, “I am fascinated by her because she has a great talent for acting, which is evident from her direction. She has a lot of fun with the film.”

I was determined to hit first ball for six: Kishan

Colombo: Before going out to bat in his debut ODI against Sri Lanka, Kishan said he was determined to hit the first ball for six in the ball-warming match ahead of the Twenty20 International (T20I) series.

And he did what he had promised by hitting a six in the fourth over of the match.

Kishan, who celebrated his 23rd birthday on Saturday with a smashing 42-ball 50, said he didn’t have much help from the captain as he was looking to hit the first ball for six.

“I had told everyone in the dressing room that I would try to hit a six on the first ball,” Kishan said in his post-match press conference.

“I believe you should look to hit the first ball of every over during the entire innings,” he said.

“Certainly, as a debutant, you would want to build your innings slowly and play defensively in the initial over. But as a young player, I think you should go all out to hit the first ball of every over. It is a sign of your hunger and enthusiasm,” he added.

Kishan, who has been in good form in white-ball cricket, said he was looking forward to the T20I series against Sri Lanka.

“We want to keep the momentum going and make sure we play our best cricket in the T20Is,” he said.

One or two bad games can’t finish you: Kuldeep

Kuldeep Yadav, who has been in good form in recent months, said he was determined to bounce back from any misfortunes.

“I have been in good form for a while now and I am confident of my abilities. I have been hitting the ball well and I am looking forward to the T20I series,” he said.

“First innings I batted well and I will try to continue that in the second innings. There will always be ups and downs in cricket and I will try to come back strong,” he added.

Yuzvendra Chahal on being called up for T20Is

Yuzvendra Chahal, who has been in good form in recent months, said he was happy to be called up for the T20I series against Sri Lanka.

“I have been playing good cricket and I am happy to be called up for the T20I series. I will try to make the most of my opportunities,” he said.

“Being a part of the T20I series will be a great opportunity for me to improve my skills and I will try to make the most of my chances,” he added.

Perusik’s positive result this season
