Action against rebel MLAs: Anyone free to take legal recourse, Speaker tells Opposition

Under attack by the Opposition for not acting against the "rebel" legislators, Punjab Vidhan Sabha Speaker Rana KP Singh on Tuesday threw an open challenge, declaring that everyone is free to take legal recourse.

Adding, the Speaker said that the legislature, in its wisdom,

The Speaker's assertion came after the opposition parties
— Shromani Akali Dal (SAD) and the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) — urged him to take action under the anti-defection law against the MLAs who switched sides.
The issue was raised by Akali legislator and former during the zero hour when the AAP MLA Kanwar Sandhu

On this, Majithia said that he did not want to speak against anyone, but questioned why the Speaker was kind to the rebels. against them, "but no action has been taken yet."
Notably, AAP has been seeking disqualification of its rebel legislator Sukhpal Singh Khaira under the anti-defection law. In January 2019, Cheema had writen to the Speaker for Khairaś disqualification under the 10th Schedule of the Constitution for quitting the party and floating his own political outfit.
Khaira, elected MLA from Rupnagar MLA Amarjit Singh Sandoa too had joined the Congress before the 2019 Lok Sabha polls. But in December 2020, Sandoa returned to his parent party AAP.

"It is unfortunate that the Vidnan Sabha Speaker has failed to disqualify AAP leaders who had let the party to either form their own political fronts or had joined the Congress. Now these same legislators are being used by the Congress to oppose SAD for holding a protest against Governor VP Singh Badnore at the assembly yesterday," said Majitthia.

The study conducted by the Zoological Survey of India (ZSI), Kolkata had pointed out that feral dogs in high altitude areas which are habitat of globally significant wildlife species like Snow Leopard is a bit concerning. The Lahaul and Pangi landscape of Himachal Pradesh has about three feral (wild) dogs per 100 square kilometres area.

It also pointed out, "Many times, when the need of domestic dogs becomes over, locals and nomads leave these dogs as stray where the chances of these dogs becoming feral are very high. Hence, it is important to ensure the ownerships of dogs strictly to reduce the stray dogs population in the landscape."

"The identification of dogs to differentiate among domestic dogs, stray dogs and feral dogs is crucial to implement threat abatement plan of feral dogs is fructual to implement at the at abatement plan of feral dogs in the Lahaul and Pangi valley. Although the local communities are aware of the feral dogs in their surroundings but their knowledge pertaining to the ecological impacts of feral dogs on wildlife population is not sufficient. Thus, mass awareness programmes about the implications of disowning dogs, conversion of domestic dogs to the feral dogs is also planned as a long-term strategy to deal with the problem of teral dogs, he said. As per the study, the feral dog density was found to be 2.78 individuals per 100 km2 on an average ranging from 1.4 to 5.5 individuals per 100 km2 in the Lahaul and Pangi land-scape. The feeding analysis of feral dogs suggested that they feed upon species such as marmot, pika, blue sheep, flying squirrels and cattle grazing in wilderness areas.

Although the population density of feral dogs in the landscape is not at an alarming stage, the Department has started mitigation planning of the imminent threat of feral dogs in high range Himalayan ecosystems. Notably, the study had emphasized that a threat batement plan of feral dogs in the Lahaul and Pangi valley is crucial as it has a population of several globally threatened species including Snow Leopard, Himalayan Brown Leopard, Himalayan Brown Eary, Mush Deer which are ecologically low in densities. Birds including wetland migra-tory birds and pheasants, threatened by the dogs are also found in the valley. The feral dogs prefer lower elevation areas, mostly the val-ley region in the Lahaul and Pangi.

PAPER WITH PASSION

Scorcher ahead!

Climate change is real; not acknowledging it is not going to protect us from the inevitable the rising temperatures in the last few days of February and an unusually hot March are bothering you, it is because most of the northern, western and eastern parts of India breached the 30°C-mark nearly two to three weeks before they usually do. In fact, the country needs to brace for a hotter-than-usual summer this year as the India Meteorological Department (IMD) has forecast that day temperatures are likely to be 0.86°C higher than normal in the north, northeast, parts of east and west India between March and May. The worst impact is likely in Odisha and Chhattisgarh, where the maximum temperatures will deviate 0.86° C from their usual averages. Last week, Bhubaneswar was the first region to record 40°C anywhere in the country this year and Delhi, Himachal Pradesh, Haryana and Uttar Pradesh should brace for summer temperatures anywhere from 0.46°C to 0.71°C above normal. The IMD last month had said the minimum temperature recorded in the country in January was the warmest for the month in 62 years, with South India being particularly warm. It is not surprising that we expe rienced a shorter winter and are getting warnings of a sizzling summer ahead as, according to a Government report on current climate change impacts and future scenarios till the end of the century, India needs to control greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions on a war footing. The failure to do so will mean major heat-waves, droughts, cloudbursts, floods and a more degraded coastline, says a report by the Indian Institute of Tropical Meteorology (IITM). Worryingly, India's saverage temperature rose by around 0.7°C during 1901–2018 and, unless urgent steps are taken to control GHG emissions between 2070 and 2099 average, the temperature will rise by approximately 4.4°C relative to the recent past (1976–2005) average). The high GHG emissions would increase the heat on Earth's surface by 8.5 watts per square metre. Called RCP8.5, this is the worst-case scenario used by climate modellers worldwide. In a medium GHG emissions scenario, called RCP4.5, the average temperature in India would rise by 2.7°C in the last 30 years of this century. Before that, during 2040-2069. India's average temperature would rise by 2°C in a medium emissions scenario, and by 2.4°C in a high emissions scenario. Despite all nations making pledges under the 2015 Paris climate agreement, current emissions are taking the world to the worst-case scenario, though other development pathways are not only available but eco-nomically more attractive in the medium and long term. So, the only option before us is to go green, else we will perish because we are already feeling the effects of a planet that has been pushed to breaking point. The most recent examples of this are the Chamoli tragedy in Uttarakhand and the "Big freeze" in Texas. It is the collective responsibility of the peoples, every business and every industry on the planet to fight climate change so that we leave a greener, cleaner world for our children and not a dying planet.

Modi's plans and policies speak volumes about his intention to empower the 'real' farmers at the grassroots

Thousands of farmers in India die by suicide every year as they see no option to get out of the debt trap. The poor and marginal farmers depend upon loans for purchasing seeds, fertilisers, pesticides, irrigation and even harvesting. Most of these growers find it more convenient to borrow at heavy interest rates from moneylenders or big cultivators rather than from banks, thanks to the cumbersome paperwork and the broker-bank officials' nexus. However, these deaths. as recorded by the National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB), fail to shake the collective conscience of society and are just another figure for most of us. Ironically, there is no outcry, no borders are sealed, no tractor rallies organised, no national monuments sieged, no violence. This is because these deaths don't affect the interests of the politically connected and powerful "arhatiya" community that drives the Agricultural Produce Marketing Community (APMC) in Punjab, Haryana and parts of Western Uttar Pradesh. This strong community is at loggerheads with the Government over three new agril laws for shielding its own interests. Prime Minister Narendra Modi recent-parted that the Covernment is underlay for the agriculture sector in Budget 2021-22 and reit-parted that the Covernment is underlay for repail and angelium level former.

erated that the Government is working for small and medium-level farmers.

One might argue that Modi is not concerned about the farmers camping at Delhi's borders and project him as "anti-farmer" and "pro-corporate", but his plans and policies speak volumes about his intention to empower the "real" farmers at the grassroots. The Prime Minister has said that India needs to expand its agriculture sector to the global market for processed food. He also emphasised that the number of agro-industry clusters near villages should be increased so that the rural populace gets farm-related employment in the vicinity. It is indeed a plan that will likely empower the marginal and small farmers. If the Government succeeds in providing market access to these farmers (small and marginal) beyond mandis, it would prove to be a milestone. Further, the Government has increased the agriculture credit target to ₹16.50 lakh crore and infrastructure fund to ₹40,000 crore, besides doubling the micro-irrigation fund. All this proves statute failed to Applications of the Application o to camp at Delhi's borders for months and hold the Government to ransom.

The Internationale: Kumbh of protests

The agrarian issue is being politicised by media magicians but, for the farmers, it's a question of livelihood and existence reen mango flowers are now bursting and kites dance in the sky purple flowers bloom one last time and farmers in Tihar Jail, New Delhi, welcome a silent spring. The warm air rustles the yellow plastic tents at the floazipur Border, flowing from AH2 to the Tikri Border, announcing a new season and the next phase of the Farmers' Revolution begins.

the next phase of the Farmers Revolution begins.

It's been over a month since farmer leader Rakesh Tikait's tears galvanised the farmers from Uttar Pradesh (UP) to Rajasthan and much has happened over the spring—Basant Ritu—since then Lakhs of devotees have cleansed themselves taking dips in the holy Ganga from Haridwar to Prayagraj, Prime Minister Narendra Modi may have shed explaiory tears as he reassured his followers that the three farm laws are good for farmers and for business. But the farmers of the world are not convinced.

laws are good for farmers and for business. But the farmers of the world are not convinced. Recently, major US-based farmer groups like Agrarian Trust, National Farmers Union and 87 other organisations have started an international movement expressing solidarity with the farmers' revolution. Over 50 Canadian organisations have also extended support. They have been exerting pressure on their public representatives too to end this "injustice". Their criticism comes from having suffered due to the market-led agricultural policies since the 1960s in the US. This is no longer an "international conspiracy" or "attack on India's soverignty" or "attack on India's soverignty" or "sedition" perpetrated by "international media celebrities like Rihamna or Greta" but a moment of true global solidarity beyond race and religion.

Foreclosures and debt have destroyed millions of US farm families. Suicides and despondency plague rural America while Big Ag grows. India farmers are jubilant about the US support but, as the harvest season nears, some of them are now returning with the stories of their struggles and indignation to their villages to work the fields, while others farmers are on the road to Delhi's borders. In Haryana, media reports indicate, hundreds of villages have pledged to send one person from each house to join the revolution. The farmers' revolution is getting ready for the hot summer. Although the Modii Governments version occupies the media discourse, the farmers' revolution is getting ready played to the media discourse, the diagnostic played to the media discourse, the farmers' may have outwitted pies the media discourse, the farmers may have outwitted the Government once again. How? With the help of the returning farmers, their unions and leaders have now expanded their base far beyond Delhis borders. Even the Government is finding it hard to call them "a handful of farmers" as it did in early January. Now the discourse has become "crowds don't get the work done." The movement today represents not just farmers but all those who work the land — migrant workers and the traders. This is a united rural India resisting a corporate auction. Meanwhile, the Government has unleashed the biggest round of privatisation of public assets since Yellsnis Russia.

No one knows why fuel prices have skyrocketed. Why

No one knows why fuel prices have skyrocketed. Why taxes and cess keep increasing, squeezing the middle class, and yet arterial roads of Delhi have potholes? The fuel prices directly impact farmers input costs and offset the MSP calculations. India is being rigged for food inflation. Indian agri produce vastly outperforms against the highly subsidised imports from countries like the US.

The agricultural bubble is soon going to burst; the collateral will be rural India and millions of lives. History will repeat itself as from its ashes shall emerge a new class of neo-zamindars that shall profit from each morsel. The US is a fine example of The US is a fine example of this, where four corporations control over 80 per cent of the food and about 50 per cent of all produce is wasted!

The Modi Government needs to correct course by abandoning the laws and making a fresh start with farmers, for their movement is no longer an Indian affair or internal matter as the External Affairs Ministry is already involved in this diplomatic issue.

already involved in this diplo-matic issue.

We as a nation should remember that India loses face in the world only because democracy dies at home. This is an agrarian issue that is being politicised by media being politicised by media magicians, swaying public opinion inciting more hate in society. But for the farmers, at home and abroad, it's a question of livelihood and existence. We need to stand in solidarity because it's a fight for the survival of our soul and roit, together.

For the Congress, the intention to go all

Congress? The Congress grip over the States is loosening each passing day. For the Congress, the intention to go all the way and the determination to win appears to be missing. That the Congress is enjoying power in only three States is an unmistakable sign of decay and degeneration in the party. Of the three, the wind may change direction in Rajasthan and Chhattisgarh anytime. So, what's the party left with? When a party is reluctant to learn even after repeated drubbings, nothing can infuse hope among the people in the party's future. Despite top leaders saying "enough is enough," nothing has been done to revive the party. The filp-flops over Rahul Gandhi assuming the party presidentship should end. Either he should assume party presidentship or leave politics. Even at the cost of some leaders leaving the party, the Congress must resolve its issues soon.

FULL SPEED AHEAD WITH INCOULATION
Sir — This refers to the editorial "Taming the virus" (March 2). By taking the jab, Prime Minister Narendra Modi has given a promising impetus to the pace of vaccination in the second phase. This phase of vaccination for senior citizens and those above 45 with comorbidities is expected to witness a good footfall or inoculation rate.
So far, the drive hasn't matched up to India's immense population challenge but the opening of centres at private hospitals and flexible options for registration can give it a big boost. All Chief Ministers,

Make the cyber system robust

The Maharashtra cyber department has sub-mitted a provisional report to the State Government on the recent massive grid fail-ure. If the massive power outage in Mumbal in October last year is the result of a Chinese cyber campaign against India, I should be a cause of concern for the Indian Government. If it stue, it means none of our establishments, including the Defence Research and Development Organisation and other institutions related to national security, are safe from mal-ware attacks by foreign forces.

A cyber threat is looming large on India's security and the Government needs to counter it effectively. According to unverified sources, the 100-page report confirms that a malware attack was behind the blackout and about 14 Trojan Horses and eight GB of unaccounted data was found in the system installed at the Maharashtra

An American firm has said that the Chinese could have introduced the maharast. The State Government, however, did not want to confirm which country was behind the possible malware in the system as it fell there could be ta-reaching international ramifications. However, it's time for the Centre and State Government to think about and act upon it. Our Government must devise a robust system which is not to be breached by the hostile foreign nations. India must be prepared for cyber war.

Union and State Ministers and Opposition

Union and State Ministers and Opposition leaders must follow suit so as to encourage others for inoculation. Not only politicians but also bureaucrats and celebrities must take the jab.

Since February 13, India's seven-day rolling average of daily COVID infections has shown a steady surge, signalling a fresh need to ramp up the campaign. India's vaccination strategy is closely intertwined to its economic fortunes. A GIDP contraction of eight per cent in 2020-21 requires a big bounce-back in the new year. But the restrictions on interstate movement in response to February's COVID surge are symptomatic of persisting jitters.

STOP HARASSING WOMEN FOR DOWRY

Despite several NGOs championing the cause of women rights, strict laws for crime against women, special courts and women-only branches in police, nothing seems to have changed on the ground. Women are still vulnerable and are subjected to various sorts of atrocities by their relatives. Even the religious organisations, which keep crying foul over one or the other issue, keep silent over women's issues until it is related to religious tenets.

CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES

We still have a narrow window for vaccinating most people amid the falling number of new infections year ago the Coronavirus made its entry into the country. Since then, we have come a long way from the hard lockdown begin-ning in March-end to the second phase of the vaccine rollout which started from Monday with Prime Minister Narendra Modi taking a shot. By opting for the ICMR vaccine, he sent a clear signal that our indige-nous vaccines are safe. Right now we are at a crucial stage of the pan-demic's trajectory as we still have a narrow window for vaccinating the maximum number of people amid the falling number of new infections in most parts of India. This is the time to focus on mitigation with no scope for complacency. The pandemic is not over until it is actually over all all States and the virus does not have an adequate number of susceptible individuals to infect and survive. We need to chase the virus aggressively rather than the contagion chasing us.

It has been a sort of partial success so far as we have managed to keep infections as well as mortality rates low as compared to many countries in the West with a better infrastructure and capacity to concountries in the West with a better infrastructure and capacity to con-tain and mitigate the virus. However, still more needs to be done as we enter into the next stage of the trajectory with an upsurge in cases in Kerala, Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu, Punjah, Gujarat and looming signs of increasing numbers in Delhi. Vaccine hesitancy remains an issue, with half of the eligible people coming forward for the inoculation. This is a universal phenomenon seen across the globe. Much of this is due to misinformation on social media and the tendency of many individuals to wait and watch. This needs to be aggressively countered and the State has made all efforts to quell this phenomenon. This all-out effort by the Government needs to continue in order to accelerate the vaccination drive which can gain momentum if more vaccines are made available to the public and in the open market so that everyone can get the jab on demand both through the public as well as private healthcare system both through the public as well as private healthcare system. The second strategy should be to continue mass-scale RT-PCR test-ing. There is no reason to scale down testing as we have seen lately in many States because that can be disastrous, especially with new mutant variants of the virus making entry into our cities. These variants be been in India as it is difficult to stop the transmission in view of relaxation of movement in an era of necessary international bravel. More genom-ic sequencing would perhaps help us in early detection of these new variants arriving in the country and within India. We need to prepare for the inevitable and the focus should remain on both COVID-appropriate behaviour as well as vaccinating the masses.

Third, we need to create resilient district health systems. A weak link in most States is the poor status of district hospitals. In contrast to the prevailing political and bureaucratic response with focus on hardware (beds, ventilators, oxygen, and so on) in healthcare facilities, we should also focus on software development (capacity building and better-quality health workers) which is more important. The current pandemic provides us opportunity and finances to influence politicians and bureaucrats to build resilient and responsive health systems at both pribureaucras to build resident and responsive health systems at obuilty many and secondary healthcare centres in States. Since health is a State subject, a collaborative and collective effort both by States and the Centre should be made to augment these district hospitals. Excellence in secondary healthcare is crucial and well-placed, well-funded, well-staffed and well-equipped district hospitals should be developed as the most important component of the healthcare chain to respond to future out-breaks. We have the opportunity to create a resilient secondary district healthcare system that is responsive to the needs of the public with focus on preventive, promotive, curative and restorative patient care.

A less talked about crime against women

Witch-hunting is used as a tool to subjugate women and there will always be a new reason to brand a woman a witch in the hinterlands of India

Tan never forget the night when the entire village, including women, armed with weapons came to attack a helpless woman on the suspicion of being a witch. I would also have been killed with her had I not called the police," recalls 22-year-old Birubala Rabha, a victim-turned-crusader from Assam's Goalpara district, referring to a ghastly incident that took place in a small village on the Assam-Meghalaya border in 2007.
This year the primary school-educated Rabha was the recipient of the Padma Shri, India's high-est civillian award for her crusade against witchand branded as a witch, devoted her life for the cause of other women like her, and, through her organisation Mission Birubala, has been the force behind the State's law to check the practice of witch-hunting in Assam.

There is no dearth of women like Rabha in Assam, who came close to death or got killed, as more than two-thirds of its districts reported incidents of witch-hunting. As per the State Government's records, 107 people, mostly women, got killed between 2011-2019. Locally, even a village on the Assam-Meghalaya border, is called "dainigaon (village of the witches)", where many ostracised women live in isolation.

Many poor people fall into their clutches, not sole-jout of superstitions belief, but also because of their inability to pay for a qualified doctor, says a 2014 field report from the districts of Goalpara and Sonitpur, conducted by the Partners for Law in Development (PLD), a Delhi-based legal resource group.

The PLD's field study in Assam, Bihar, Jharkhand and Chattisgarh, also reveals that "women are more often targeted for material motives." Dibayjotis Saikia, a human rights activist, who leads a Guwahati-based organisation, Brothers, feels that "individual factors like personal rivalry, jealousy, conspiracy come into play in such targeting in semi-urban and rural areas." Mamani Saikia, district co-ordinator, Goalpara, further explains that "in calculated attacks, gender relationship determines the selection of targets, often driven by ulterior interests like grabbing a property or for sexual exploitation, whereas, in surprise attacks, which are more violent in nature, the goal is supposedly to eliminate an evil."

Dalit and marginalised women are doubly prone to such attacks because of systemic patriarchy and also because of their social identity. However, Natyabir Das, a medical practitioner and Bureau, more than 2,500 people, mostly women, got killed in such incidents between 2000-2016, while many believe that the number is much higher, as most States don't list witchcraft as a motive for murder. Nevertheless, some States like. Bishar, Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand, Odishah, Rajasthan, Assam, Maharashtra and Karnataka have framed anti-witchcraft Acts. Commenting on the existing Tonahi Pratadna Nivaran Act, 2005, Chhattisgarh, Dinesh Sharma, a doctor-turned-activist and founder of Andhshraddha Nivaran det. Changard, Dinesh Sharma, a doctor-turned-activist and founder of Andhshraddha Nirmoolan Samitee, rues that "hundreds of Cases are pending under the Act. Many victims have died and without fast-track courts, the purpose of the Act is somewhat defeated.

Moreover, in such incidents of organised community violence, the law cannot overlook the complicity and accountability of a village sarpanch or a kotwal."

Ajay Agarwal, Secretary, Association for Social and Human Awareness, Ranchi, Iharkhand, echoes similar sentiments. He says: "Though more than 1,300 women were killed since 2000 in the Statcher's no official data available under the Prevention of Witch (DAAIN) Practices Act, 2001. Some case get registered under the IPC and only one or two get convicted, while almost the entire village is responsible for such killings."

Assam's new Act, notified in 2018, has been feted as India's toughest anti-witch-hunting law, which makes any offence under it non-bailable, cognisable and non-compoundable.

However, the State's ADGP, LR Bishnoi, highlighted that the wider scope of legal protection included in the Act with the setting up of special courts and addition of new offences related to targeting, humiliation and ostracism, and so on are hitherto not part of the IPC.

Dibyajyoti Saikia opines that "the Act is yet to make any visible impact.... and the police still have a tendency to settle cases through a compromise." Natyabir Das says that agencies like the ASTEC (Assam Science Technology and Environment Council) have been chipping in through awareness different machen with the court of the cou Environment Council) have been chipping in through awareness drives, but admits that "a thorough training of police officials is required. Executive Director, PLD, Madhu Mehra, states that the Assam Act is definitely an improvement, more like the Rajasthan Act. But, unlike Rajasthan, the State is yet to frame rules regarding compensation and rehabilitation.

Manisha Behal, Executive Director, North East Network, a Guwahati-based women's rights organisation, also laments that the menace could have been better tackled on the ground by the front-line workers had the rules been in place.

Many activists point out that the existing legal regime, be it the IPC or special Acts, vests enormous power with the police, who are often found to be wanting in their preventive and protective role, particular-ly when the victim is poor or a woman.

ly when the victim is poor or a woman.

Thus such Acts remain merely as pieces of paper failing to make any dent in the impunity attached to the practice. The legal vacuum for compensation of losses due to social ostracisation, forced displacement, or deprivation in livelihood opportunities is another drawback. Mehra, however, is sceptical about the actual realisation of compensation even if such a provision gets legal backing as the process of conviction is a long-drawn affair, with the accused mostly being as poor as the victim.

accused mostly being as poor as the victim. Many activists wouch for sociolegal measures like dialogue and awareness creation to help people distinguish between what is a socially permissible act and a crime. Some also voice the need for a central legislation reviving the Prevention of Witch-Hunting Bill, introduced in the Lok Sabba in 2016.

Witch-hunting is used as a tool to subjugate women and there will always be a new reason to brand a woman as a witch. As incidents of women bearing the brunt of person-woman as a witch. As incidents of women bearing the brunt of personal vendetta and unfounded smear campaigns continue to pour in from many parts of India, the issue of witch-hunting deserves greater attention not only from the legal point of view but from a wider socio-economic perspective.

Apparently, there was strong discontentment among the Congress MLAs when he was handpicked by the party president. The appointment of Kiran Bedi, the former super cop of Delhi as the Lieutenant Governor (L-G) of the Union Territory (UT), was like opening another war front by the BJP Consequently, the running battle between the CM and the L-G hogged the limelight in the last four years. FBI chief to face questions on extremism, Capitol riot

AP ■ WASHINGTON

RPBI Director Chris Wray is set to testify for the first time since the deadly January 6 deadly riot at the US Capitol, with lawmakers likely to press him on whether the bureau adequately communicated with other law enforcement agencies about the potential for violence that day. Questions about the FBI's preparations for the riot, and investigations into it, are expected to dominate Wray's appearance Tuesday before the Senate Judiciary Committee. He's also likely to be pressed on how the FBI is confronting the national security threat from white nationalists and domestic violent extremists, and tic violent extremists, and whether the bureau has ade-quate resources to address the problem.

Make way for online school

PMS ■ NEW DELHI

The first online school of India has been launched in the Millenium city of Gurugram in Delhi-NCR. Known as Cyboard School, the salient feature of the virtual school is a hybrid model of delivery encompassing a mix of online classes which will be followed by physical camps spread over 30 days in a year and city-level interactions. The school targets enrolment of about 5000 students in Classes I to III by the end of March 2021.

A brainchild of two serial entrepreneurs and visionaries — Rajat Singhal, Co-Founder & CEO, and Kunal Singhal, Co-Founder & CEO, and Kunal Singhal, Co-Founder & CTO, the model aims to overcome the drawbacks in conventional K-12 education, including lack of personalised learning, lack of requisite infrastructure and good teachers, limited student-teacher interaction and increased dependence on utilions and impart futuristic education to students through expert faculty members, irrespective of any geographical barriers.

"The online K-12 segment is projected to be nearly 3.7 times its existing size of $1.16 billion by 2025. The pandemic has underscored the significance of digitisation across sectors and education is no exception," said Singhal.

With the union budget of 2021 focusing like never before on Healthcare through the three-pronged, holistic approach -including preventive care, curative care, and well-being, there will be a bigger push toward a healthier country. To meet the demand for healthcare solutions that was generated last year, there has been many frugal state-of-the-art innovations associated with touchless diagnostic tools, ventilators, mediand surgical devices that support better patient outcomes and faster healthcare administration in hospitals.

At a national scale there has At a national scale, there has been an unprecedented push towards digitisation through upskilling across sectors. The main reason why it is considered as an unprecedented push towards dig-italisation, is because this was not limited to just the key employees who were used to the II infra-structure that was rowided but also. who were used to the IT infra-structure that was provided, but also all the support staff that included the Admin, HR, Finance, Training and development, etc. to get aligned with the new protocols of commu-nication and also be effectively able to perform the organisations functions without any Jacuna. This sea of change was not any different for the health care professionals of the country.

Without any differentiation of urban or rural, all doctors were urban or rural, all doctors were expected to get used to online con-sultations, ordering online diag-nostics and prescriptions, resulting in the patients getting the said medicines at home, based on the diagnosis. While there was initial reluctance by some of the doctors and staff, everyone was quick to overcome their limitations in technology for the larger benefit of the patients and the country at large. The demand for healthcare solutions also prompted fast-tracking digitisation initiatives by the Government and providers. One such game changer was the Government approval for telemedicine usage in India. This changed the landscape of how doctor-patient visits were being managed in India, resulting in making healthcare more accessible to both urban and rural areas across the country.

Another outcome of the pandemic has been the acceptance of the larger public to become more willing to undergo regular health check-ups to ensure that they remain healthy. This has resulted in identifying more people with different adverse health conditions. This situation has put additional stress on the current healthcare ecosystem resulting in the need for better and faster treatment protocols to support patient care and outcomes. This is an area that can be upgraded by upskilling the medical fraternity. While there ismultiple such continuing medical education for Masters in Medicine (MD), there are only limited options for Masters in Surgery (MS) speciali-

To fill this gap of technical superior and partners. To fill this gap of technical superiority, industry academia partnerships should initiate programmes that allow the sugical residents to get acquainted with the future of surgical care. Facilitating such programmes with Robotic-Assisted Surgery (RAS) will allow the residents to understand the functionality, and scope stand the functionality, and scope stand the functionality, and scope for such tech-enabled surgical pro-

These kind of programmes can give the budding surgeons theoret-ical knowledge about how the robot works, and the clinical applications of the technology that will be imparted by trained and successful RAS practitioner. Early RAS sensi-tisation programmes may lead to better adoption of technology which could result in not just reducing the learning curve, but also enable the country's surgical healthcare land-scape to function more effectively

'Demand for cyber security professionals on rise'

Advancement of digitisation has spurred an increase in cybersecurity solutions leading to lucrative options, says DR SANJEEV KUMAR SHARMA

In COVID-19-era world economy and society are now interconnectived by supply chains, communications technology and travel. The rapid growth of the number of appliances, devices, vehicles and infrastructure are linked which is foremost to the overly interconnected world. Cyber security jobs have been one of the hottest jobs for students today. The demand is unmatched in any other technology domain. Companies across the world have been continuously targeted for cyber-Attacks. This scenario has given massive opportunities for professionals willing to enter the security domain. Cyber security today serves as a major source of employment and a lucrative career option. First step is to acquire basic cybersecurity skills, followed by choosing a specific domain based on personal interest and market demand. A recent parliamentary report states that due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and subsequent lockdowns, the Indian automotive industry suffered ₹2,300 crore loss per day and an estimated job loss in the sector was about 3.45 lakt. This report clearly indicates that there is still a miss-match in the development in the moment to the watch in the education we impart to the youth and the demand they have to meet at the job.

This gap will widen further if we don't initiate structured reforms and initiative in the next Union Budget, which will be tabled in less than a week's time. The dream of achieving a self-reliant $5 trillion economy completely depends upon the education and the skill level of its citizens.

Training the workforce to get adapt to the digital setup
With the advent of COVID-19 vaccines and India's emergence as the soft-power in the medical industry, companies are considering the year 2021 with full of hopes. They are slowly and steadily adapting to the new normal by upskilling, relearning and learning the importance of advanced technologies in order to retain their relevance and competitiveness in this digital era. At this juncture, the public and private partnership can help to bring the major shift in skilling/reskilling programmes in tandem with the government skilling programs. Apart from this, the academic curriculum in schools and colleges must be rebooted to remain in sync with the current realities of the post-pandemic era. It is alarming to see how India despite being renowned for its large talent pool, most graduates are unemployable due to mismatch of their skill sets with industry requirements. The Ministry of Education and Ministry of Skill Development and Entrepreneurship should work together to come up with a new curriculum and skilling programs as per the industry standards.

New job opportunities demands new

In order to cope with the company's new transformation, the existing and n workforce also needs to have constant workforce also needs to have constant skilling, reskilling and upskilling. The new job requirements will also demand the knowledge of new set of a reas including loT, mechatronics, robotics, 3D printing, AI, machine and deep learning, analytics, virtual collaboration, automotive design, and computational trinking. A lot of training programmes is the meed of the hour to build the capacity of these workforces.

Even the current time demands a complete change in the mindset of youth and their parents. An engineering student's goal should be getting a job, becoming financially independent than merely holding a degree. Once this mindset sets in, there is no use I date and he harkfel the lead in no way India can be taking the lead in becoming a hub for manufacturing, and supplier of skilled talent.

India's Test vice-captain Ajinkya Rahane on Tuesday said there is no need to take criticism of the spin-friendly pitches in the country 'serious-ly' as not a word is spoken about the 'damp' tracks else-where and England can expect another turner in the fourth Test.

The 23-year-old, lavished praise on left-arm spinner Axar Patel, who has grabbed 18 wickets from two Tests.

"You know, he (Axar) is a very good bowler, especially in these conditions, he has been very accurate, he doesn't give you much to score, and he has got one that goes straight on, in these conditions, one (to) turn, so he is very good bowler," said Crawley.

"When you see players having so much success, like Ravichandran Ashwin, who has just got to 400 Test wickets and has a lot of experience in India, and Axar Patel, who has had a great start to Test cricket, of course, you try to learn from them," Leach wrote in a column for Sky Sports.

"Then Axar is someone who seems to present every ball the same, a squarish seam, then a few skid on and the odd one grips — that has been so effective on the wickets we've played on.' Leach is up for the challenge that awaits him in the final Test and sounded confident after picking up the wickets to the

"So, he works out what are the weaknesses of the batsman. He plans those dismissals and that's why I think he is reinventing himself, Laxman, a veteran of 134 Tests, said on Siar Sports show Cricket Connected. To prove his point, Laxman cited the example of Steve Smith's trouble against Ashwin during India's recent tour Down Under. "We saw recently in the Australia series how he (Ashwin) troubled someone as great as Steve Smith and that's another thing that makes Ashwin or any champion player special, that he wants to be the best and competa against the best," he said. Former India opener India opener Askash Chopra too lavished praise on Ashwin, saying he is one of the biggest match winners the country has ever produced. wickets overall in the 3 Tests that he played against India," it further stated. Gayle focused to win third T20 WC

Chris Gayle said on Monday he is focused on the "bigger picture" of winning a third T20 world title with the West Indies later this year, ahead of the veteran batsman's return to International cricket this week.

The 41-year-old was named in the Windies' 14-man squad for the three-game T201 series against Sri Lanka, which start in Antigua on Wednesday.

Gayle, who was part of the World T20-winning sides in both 2012 and 2016, played the last of his 58 T20 Internationals against England in March 2019.

last of his 58 T20 Internationals against England in March 2019.

The Windies will attempt to defend their title in India in October and November.

"I want to accomplish, starting off by winning the series, but the bigger picture is actually to get three T20 titles under my belt," Gayle told a press conference.

"That's actually the goal I'm setting in my head-winning the T20 World Cup. The World Cup is still a long way off but by the time you quint (blink), it's World Cup time."

Gayle has made 1,627 T20I runs with a highest score of 117 at an average of over 32.

His record tally of 22 centuries in all T20 cricket is 14 more than anyone else - the Australian trio of David Warner, Aaron Finch and Michael Klinger have all struck eight.
"I want to win the series," Gayle added. I'd want to get off to a good start. It's really good to be back. Hopefully I can perform, help the team, and put the team in a winning position." Gayle was initially left on the sidelines by Kings XI Punjab during last year's Indian Premier League, but showed the team what they had been missing when he was selected midway through the tournament with a string of high score. midway through the tour....... of high scores.

Having spent the vast majority of his career as an opener, he impressed in the IPL batting at No 3, averaging 43.88 from nine innings.

He is one of four openers in the West Indies squad, but said that he could be used lower down the order again.

"It seems like I'm the number three specialist now," he said. "Its not a problem. I'm good at playing spin, I'm as good at playing fast bowlers as anyone as I'm an opener.

"But with West Indies cricket, whatever role they want me to play, I'm willing to play that particular role. If it's opening, I'm ready, number three, number five - I'm pretty much flexible. I will still be the best number five in the world, best number three in the world."
