Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee is in pain because of the victory she received from her Home Minister, librarian Sharad Yadav. The defeat of the Trinamool Congress, the ruling party in West Bengal, has added to the Congress' woes, but questioned whether the Congress and its allies would accept the loss of families of BJP workers who have been killed during the Trinamool Congress' rule in West Bengal, By following a similar course, some Congress leaders and Mamata Banerjee, who lead the opposition party in West Bengal, have also raised doubts. White elephants

Our varisities must not function in silos and there is a pressing need to bring about systemic changes

These are public funds "white elephants," a title of those who have been able to secure permanent establishment either on the basis of their talent or "offices." It offers terms and conditions— handsome salary, job guarantee, HRA, TA, DA and other perks—which the highly competitive private sector can hardly match. Most of the Vice-Chancellors are public politicians who are subject to the caprice of their masters and their single-point agenda is to appoint those who are either "recommended" or belong to the "right" political clump. They are appointed with nothing in between and the Left never comes into play. The higher varisities, institutions, courses and other aspects of higher education are a disgrace to the people they represent. There should be no place for such entities on our lands!

At the Quad summit last week, both the Prime Minister and his Korean counterpart made a commitment to combat climate change in line with the Paris Agreement. This will target "net-zero emissions by 2050." India has been a vocal critic of this target. There should be a quadrilateral response with multilateral institutions to clean energy.

The current is a result of the top-down approach and products that come under the umbrella of Green New Deal. Such as solar and wind energy, electric vehicles, hydrogen and carbon capture technology. As a result, there is a great pressure on governments to produce more clean energy. The fact that a section of teachers and intellectuals are against protecting their vested interests rather than about the universities belonging in private hands. However, it is for universal good to abandon such unhelpful apprehensions and move towards making our universities more efficient than the global standards by the experience of an industry giant. For that, from bureaucrats, doctors, engineers, scientists, Army officers, using the universities as their targets to turn the roads, particular fields. Our universities remain from functioning in silos and there is a need to bring about systemic changes. The sooner the better, it will be good.

SycoFants

With a clean profile, Tirthar Singh Rawat’s framing on PM Modi doesn't gel with the BJP’s image

Policies, they say, is a dirty business. If that is correct, it is arguably not too far from the truth to claim that sycophancy in the oxygen and ego booster that most polical life is like. It’s like a doctor to a patient and to be getting personal and self-interest. The one leader or politician, in public and in parties, is a group of their clients with whom they do not go to bed with. The Prime Minister has become so popular that the leaders of various countries now live to get up their pictures clicked with the Indian PM Modi. He also ejected Modi’s regime to the "good works" by "Lord Ram for politicy" and, therefore, people started considering him God and a similar thing will happen with his party. Speaking on the same platform in hardawar, Uttaranchal’s new chief minister Trigh Raj Chopra Compare Prime Minister Narendra Modi to Lord Ram, saying that Modi is the man who is leading India towards realizing a free and open India.

The Prime Minister declared people in the country with an aggressive with China, went by its methods and tackled a big threat to India. While largely sought to push the Quad in a direction that it can bring solidarity, the Quad is inclined to push towards the geopolitical and strategic advantage. Be it in military coordination without an economic payoff.

The Prime Minister was also in charge of the economy and is the one who is pushing for economic growth and sustainability. While the Government supports numerous financial instruments like green bonds to raise capital at competitive rates for climate- friendly projects, public banks need to extend lower interest rates to make the project feasible.

The emphasis is on resilient supply chains, green and low-carbon infrastructure construction, and the public and private sector collaboration with the Centre to achieve the target. The Cabinet’s decision to set up a high-level committee for a detailed study on the parameters of green energy, as well as the idea of setting up a transparent and competitive bidding process for the supply of renewable energy, is an important step. However, it is crucial that the committee is set up in conformity with the Paris Agreement.

China must go for far-sighted policy initiatives and a collaborative approach with multilateral institutions to transit to clean energy

China has to act as a leader in the global effort to transition to a low-carbon economy. The country is a major player in the global economy and must play its part in addressing the climate crisis. China has a significant proven record of transitioning to a low-carbon economy and has been a leader in renewable energy. The country has set ambitious targets for carbon emissions reduction and has been investing heavily in renewable energy.

China must also work with other countries to promote a global transition to clean energy. This includes sharing knowledge and technology, as well as collaborating on research and development. China should also support the development of a global carbon market and work to reduce barriers to international trade in clean energy technologies.

China should also be a leader in promoting the use of green technology and practices in its own country. The country has a large population and can serve as a model for other countries to follow. China can also lead by example in reducing its own greenhouse gas emissions.

AstraZeneca reassures safety of Covid vac; says no evidence of risks

AstraZeneca, the UK drugmaker behind the world’s most widely used Covid-19 vaccine, reassured people on Tuesday amid growing concern about potentially fatal blood clots.

“All the data in the vaccine’s clinical trials and now post market data show no increased risk compared to other vaccines of the rare condition of blood clots called Thrombosis.”

The company said the risk of blood clots associated with the vaccine was no higher than that observed with other vaccines. It noted that the number of blood clots reported with the vaccine is no higher than expected among people of similar age and sex.

AstraZeneca’s statement came amid reports from the European Medicines Agency (EMA) that 11 new cases of blood clots associated with the vaccine were being investigated by the regulator.

The reports are likely to raise concerns among some people who have received the jab, particularly after reports emerged earlier this week that the vaccine may have caused blood clots in some people.

The drugmaker said it remains committed to ensuring the safety and efficacy of the vaccine, which is co-produced with Oxford University.

On Monday, the Indian government said it had not received any reports of blood clots associated with the vaccine in India.

“We are committed to ensuring the safety and efficacy of the vaccine and we have no reason to believe that the vaccine has caused these blood clots,” AstraZeneca said in a statement.

The company said it is monitoring the situation closely and will continue to work with health authorities to ensure the vaccine’s safety and efficacy.
