However, there is no response from the government though they were promised. The committee was not informed about it, according to Jagga. He said that the state market department has been manufacturing the drug, but it is not being used. He also alleged that there was no local initiative to manufacture it, and it is being imported from other countries.

Jagga added that the government was not doing anything to ensure the availability of the drug, and there was a need to increase the supply to the market.

He also said that the government should take immediate steps to ensure the availability of Remdesvir in the state, and there should be a proper mechanism to keep a check on the prices.

Stop the cruelty
The Hazaras, for decades at the receiving end, are still facing torture in Afghanistan

A fghanistan, a country where war and bloodshed never seem to end, is again in the news. As the US troops start withdrawing from Afghanistan, the Taliban has taken control of the country, and the Hazaras have become the receiving end in the Afghan society. They have faced discrimination and torture but this time it was blatantly and公開ly as the attack targeted young Hazaras. A bomb attack on Kabul’s Sayed-ul-Shuhada High School killed over 60 people; most of the victims were young girls. It is not clear which group was behind the attack. But wherever groups did, it is clear that the Taliban is the major cause behind the attack, and its aim is to spread fear and create an atmosphere of terror. The Taliban and the government are both responsible for this kind of attack, and they should be held accountable for their actions.

The Taliban have already shown that they are not interested in following the previous rules and regulations. They have started enforcing their own laws and regulations, which are based on strict sharia law. They are targeting women and girls, especially those who are involved in educational activities or are working outside the home. They are also targeting minorities, such as the Hazaras, who have been living in Afghanistan for generations.

The government, on the other hand, is completely indifferent to the suffering of the Hazaras and other minorities. It is not doing anything to protect the rights of these people, and it is not taking any steps to address the root causes of the problem. The government should be held accountable for its actions, and it should be forced to take immediate steps to address the issue.

The world should not remain silent in the face of this atrocity. The international community should come together and take action to ensure that the Hazaras and other minorities are protected. The United Nations and other international organizations should be involved in this issue, and they should be provided with the necessary resources to address the crisis. The government should also be held accountable for its actions, and it should be forced to take immediate steps to address the issue.

This is because despite the Indian Constitution calling India a secular country, the truth is to the contrary. Most Hindus are communally inclined and they believe in a Hindu identity. This can say anything from your personal knowledge. When I am with my own relatives, and they are with their own relatives, then there is no problem. But when we are with Muslims, or with the people who are not Hindus, then there is some conflict. The conflict between Hindus and Muslims is not new, and some say that it is even old. But in recent times, this conflict has come to the surface because of the issue of the creation of a temple in Ayodhya. The conflict between Hindus and Muslims is not new, and some say that it is even old. But in recent times, this conflict has come to the surface because of the issue of the creation of a temple in Ayodhya.

The truth is that secularism is a feature of industrial society, and India is an industrial society. Most notable cultural resurgence is happening in India. To end communalism, a radical transformation of Indian society is required, which is only possible through a revolution. But this is as yet nowhere on the horizon. The truth is that communalism will thrive in India. To end communalism, a radical transformation of Indian society is required, which is only possible through a revolution. Hope for US boost pushes luxury goods sparkle

Luxury brands are already taking steps to prepare for a potential 21st-century version of the “Great Depression” in the US, when high-street retail sales were hit hard by the economic downturn. These steps include developing new e-commerce channels, enhancing sustainability efforts, and focusing on digital marketing and customer engagement. As a result, the luxury industry has seen a robust recovery in online sales, with some brands reporting double-digit growth. This trend is expected to continue as consumers become more comfortable with online shopping and demand for luxury goods remains strong.

Sales of luxury apparel, jewel and watch products have increased by as much as 23% in the first three months of 2021, according to the Bain & Co. report. The report also notes that luxury brands are investing heavily in e-commerce and digital marketing to reach new customers and strengthen their online presence. The industry is also focusing on sustainability and ethical sourcing to appeal to consumers who are increasingly concerned with the impact of their purchases on the environment.

In the most optimistic outlook, luxury brands are planning to focus on expanding their online presence and enhancing their digital marketing strategies. This includes developing new e-commerce platforms, leveraging social media and influencers, and offering personalized shopping experiences. Luxury brands are also expected to continue to invest in sustainability and ethical sourcing, with a focus on reducing their carbon footprint and promoting responsible business practices.

The luxury industry is expected to continue its strong growth trajectory in the coming years, with online sales set to account for a larger share of total revenue. As consumers become more comfortable with online shopping and demand for luxury goods remains strong, the industry is well-positioned to continue its robust performance.
