States face power cuts as supply deficits rise

Punjab, Haryana, Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh in the northern region, Andhra Pradesh in the southern region, Bihar and Jharkhand in the eastern region and Gujarat in the western region are being adversely affected by the existing power crisis even as the Centre has gone all out to ensure States are not badly hit. There was no outage reported in Delhi, though, on Thursday.

According to the grid regulator, Power System Operation Corporation (POSOCO), which regulates and maintains all India data of electricity demand and supply on a day to day basis, Rajasthan, Punjab and Haryana are the worst affected, registering considerable supply deficits. Bihar and Jharkhand too are registering supply deficits of 5.12 mega units and 4.92 mega units respectively and resorting to eight to 10 hours of power cuts these days.

Rajasthan witnessed 17.89 mega unit shortfall on October 13; Punjab 5.25 mega unit; Haryana 8.73 mega unit and Uttar Pradesh 1.92 mega unit. Jammu & Kashmir and Ladakh regions witnessed a supply deficit of upto 3.45 mega units. There was no outage in Delhi. On Thursday, the maximum demand was recorded 4179 mega watt in Delhi which was met by the discoms. Gujarat faced a shortfall of 3.83 mega units on October 13 and Andhra Pradesh witnessed a shortfall of 3.84 mega units.

The Ministry of Power on Thursday claimed that the coal-based capacity under outage due to coal shortage has reduced. "Power System Operation Corporation Limited (POSOĈO) has reported that the total capacity of units under outage due to low coal stocks has reduced from 11 GW on 12th Oct to 5 GW on 14th October," it said.

Union Coal Minister Pralhad Joshi continued his visits to different coal mines to take first-hand stock of onground situation. After Dipka mines in Chhattisgarh, he visited the Ashoka mines of the Central Coalfields Ltd (CCL) at Piparwar in Chatra district of Jharkhand and held discussions

Eastern Coalfields Ltd (ECL) on the prevailing situation.

Increased economic activity after the second wave of the coronavirus pandemic has driven up demand for coal, leading to a supply shortage, forcing northern states such as Bihar, Rajasthan and Jharkhand to cut power for up to 14

According to the POSO-CO, the power supply in India fell about 830 mega units short of demand during the first 13 days of October, largely due to a coal shortage, a deficit of 1.6 per cent. The October shortfall was already the biggest in absolute terms for a single month since November 2018, even with 19 days of October

After meeting with the CCL and ECL's officials on Thursday, the minister said the power plants in the country will continue to receive the required amount of coal. "We are witnessing an improve-ment now," he said, asked about the current situation. The minister said that closure of some mines, and inundation of a few others due to monsoon led to the crisis but there is no need to panic as the situation is improving."We can produce two million tonnes of coal per day," he said, asserting the need for producing more coal.

The farmers' unions have already given a call for burning the effigies of Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Union Home minister Amit Shah on Dussehra, a six-hour nationwide 'rail roko' agitation on October 26 and a 'kisan mahapanchayat' in the state capital on October 26.

SAUGAR SENGUPTA ■ KOLKATA

The Trinamool Congress, Left and Congress have vehemently protested against the Centre's decision to expand the jurisdiction of Border Security Force to 50 kms say-ing it is a direct infringement of State's rights. The BSF hitherto enjoyed a jurisdiction of 15 km from the international border.

"Law and order is a State subject and that cannot be infringed upon by the Centre . the Constitution is clear on that ... this move by the Centre to expand BSF's jurisdiction will amount to meddling in law and order matters of the State which is unacceptable," said senior TMC leader and Bengal minister Firhad Hakim.

The Trinbamool Congress Government strongly opposes this high handed decision taken by the Centre ... it is arbitrary and amounts to an infringement on the rights of the state... What was the sudden need to enhance the BSF's jurisdiction without informing the State Government ... is it because they want to compensate for their electoral defeat in Bengal?" TMC spokesperson Kunal Ghosh said.

By amending the BSF Act the Centre has provided the BSF with additional teeth to carry out its works unhindered by the police and without the help from the State police. It can undertake search, seizure and arrest suspects within 50 km inside the border in the States of Bengal, Assam border with Bangladesh a "territorial expansion" for the BSF can mean a "substantial loss" of iurisdiction for the State Police worth a whopping 110,850 square km. This is exclusive of the border distance shared by Nepal and Bhutan. Bengal-Bangladesh has a di8stance of 2,217 km.

With Bengal sharing a long

Reacting strongly to the development TMC MP Saugato Roy said that the "State Government is concerned with the development because the Home Ministry under Amit Shah has an unimpressive track

Left leaders like Sujan Chakrabarty too opposed the decision attacking the BJP Government for "its expansionist" policies and the Trinamool Congress for "creating a situation where the BJP is feeling encouraged and emboldened to take such actions ... this deplorable."

Congress Lok Sabha leader and PCC president Adhir Chowdhury said that the move would fire resentment in days to come.

He tweeted: "The expansion of BSF area of jurisdiction up to 50 km from border of some states amounts to brazen infringement upon the territory of states. HMO India (ministry of home affairs), you should not indulge in any 'Chherkhani' (meddling) else will face the consequences.' However, the BJP leadership defended the central move saying New Delhi had to take the decision as the State police had failed to block terror transit points and stop arms and drug smuggling.

AIADMK: A golden jubilee sans fervour and enthusiasm

KUMAR CHELLAPPAN ■

The All India Anna Dravida ▲ Munnetra Kazhakam (AIADMK) which is formed on 17th October 1972 by matinee idol late M G Ramachandran is entering a crucial phase of its history this Sunday. The year 2022 marks the Golden Jubilee of the party that ruled Tamil Nadu for a total of 25 years (1977-1987, 1991-1996, 2001-2006 and 2011- 2016) since its birth in 1972. The AIADMK won all these elections under the leadership of party founder MGR or his chosen heir Jayalalithaa. With the demise of Jayalalithaa in 2016, the AIADM has become like a rudderless ship and was wiped out in the 2019 Lok Sabha election as well as the 2021 Assembly election.

The general view among political commentators in the State is that AIADMK does not have a leader who could match the stature and charisma of MGR or Jayalalithaa. Adding to the woes of the party is the turf war between Leader of the Opposition Edappadi Palaniswami and coordinator Panneerselvam, sulking over the denial of the post of the LoP

Adding to the woes of the party cadre is V K Sasikala, former aid to Jayalalithaa, who is struggling hard to take control of the party. Mumbai: Maharashtra reported 2,384 new Covid-19 cases on Thursday, up 165 from a day ago, while 35 more patients succumbed to the infection in the state, down from nearly 50 the previous day, said an official from the health

With the latest additions, the state's caseload increased to 65,86,280, while death toll rose to 1,39,705, he said. The State has been reporting an upward trend in new cases since Monday. There were 1,736 Covid-19cases on Monday which increased to 2,069 on Tuesday, while Wednesday saw 2,219 fresh infections. However, fresh deaths reported a drop from 49 on Wednesday to 35 in the last 24 hours. The official said 2,343 patients were discharged from hospitals in the last 24 hours, pushing the count of recovered cases to 64,13,418. Maharashtra now has 29,560 coronavirus patients under treatment. The state has 2,26,249 people in home quarantine and another 1,070 in institutional quarantine, he said.

The official said Maharashtra's Covid-19 recovery rate stands at 97.38 per cent, while the fatality rate is 2.12 per cent. The cumulative number of coronavirus tests conducted in the state climbed to 6,06,83,524 after 1,36,952 samples were examined in the last 24 hours, he said. Among districts, Mumbai reported the highest new infections at 558 besides five deaths, taking the state capital's cumulative infection figure to 7,50,494 and the toll to 16,172, he

Among the eight regions of Maharashtra, the Mumbai region reported the highest 998 new Covid-19 cases, followed by 689 from the Pune region. The Nashik region reported 429 new cases, Kolhapur 153, Latur 64, Aurangabad 36, Nagpur 12 and the Akola region three, he said. According to the official, among the 35 fresh fatalities, the highest 10 were reported from the Mumbai region, followed by seven each from Pune and Nashik regions.

Burning sensation

Innovative ways to deal with stubble burning instead of cash incentives are needed

It is the second week of October and the annual problem of stubble burning has resurfaced around Delhi. The Central Pollution Control Board says the air quality in Delhi has already reduced over the last week. The air quality index (AQI) on October 13 was 171. It falls under the 'moderate' category of 101-200 AQI. The index has jumped from the 'satisfactory' since the last week of September and crossed three digits to 125 on October 7. Between now and the end of November every year, Punjab, Haryana, western Uttar Pradesh record a high number of stubble burnings. This year, however, the burning is delayed; NASA images show a lesser number of fires in Punjab and Haryana. In Ghaziabad and Gautam Budh Nagar of UP, however, instances of stubble burning are increasing. The response of the UP administration is simply to lodge an FIR against persons involved in the crop residue burning and impose fines ranging from ₹2,500 to ₹15,000. That hardly deters the farmers who feel their losses will be more if they don't burn the stubble and get the field ready for the next crop in the small window available for doing so. The solution lies not in punitive measures and ordinances and laws but in innovation. Certain steps that Delhi, Punjab and Haryana are taking this year may show the way.

The crux of the problem is that around 20 million tonnes of paddy straw was generated in the monsoon harvest. There is a 55-day window to clear it for the winter wheat crop. The straw cannot be used as fodder and burning it is the easiest and cheapest method. However, that badly pollutes the air, in and around Delhi. Governments have introduced effective machines to remove the stubble but the farmers find them expensive. Innovation has now come into the picture. The Delhi Government has started using the Pusa Decomposer this month. Developed by the Indian Agriculture Research Institute (IARI), it is a low-cost microbial bio-enzyme that decomposes crop residues, including stubble. Thousands of farmers in Punjab and Haryana have registered with a firm to use the decomposer. A Bengaluru-based start-up has tied up with the IARI to simplify the use of the decomposer. It provides the mixture in capsule form that can be transformed into a ready-to-use powder that can be mixed with water and sprayed instantly. There are other experiments that States are undertaking. Farmers are being persuaded to diversify into Basmati paddy that can be used as fodder. Scientists are exploring microbial solutions that can dissolve the stubble and convert it into soil nutrients. Trials are underway to generate bio-CNG and bioethanol from the stubble. Paper and sugar mills are being incentivised to install boilers that use stubble as fuel. It is time the innovation leads the anti-stubble war instead of impractical solutions like giving farmers a cash incentive of ₹100 per quintal for not burning stubble.

The TMC has brighter prospects after winning West Bengal, but Delhi is still far away n July, when after her resounding success in Bengal elections Mamata Banerjee told the media in Delhi that she was a mere cog in the anti-BJP wheel even a nitwit knew she was testing waters. Three months later, the Trinamool Congress mouthpiece Jago Bangla projected her as the woman behind the Opposition wheel who could take down Narendra Modi in 2024 general elections — dismissing Rahul Gandhi's claim to it all.

TMC has no doubts that with the help of team PK read Prashant Kishor — she will succeed where Jyoti Basu and Pranab Mukherjee failed. No doubt the TMC think tank is walking on a presumptive trajectory. According to them, in the absence of Buddhadeb Bhattacharjee, Banerjee has emerged as the undisputed leader of Bengal with 42 parliamentary seats. Bengal is the third largest State after Uttar Pradesh (80) and Maharashtra (48) in terms of the MPs. The TMC is convinced that her thumping success in Bengal and Rahul Gandhi's repetitive failure elsewhere to jack up a decomposing Congress keeps her ahead of the grand old outfit.

But can she do in Delhi what she did in Kolkata? The

However, the proverbial "pros" notwithstanding, the bacterial "cons" may erode Didi's prospects because winning Bengal and grabbing Delhi are different ball games. First of all, she has to offer a viable Bengal Model for PM Modi's Gujarat Model. Industry is her Achilles Heels. Despite her having "convened" yearly global business summits with huge fanfare, the resultant investment is in the vicinity of a regulation zero. Back from one such summit meeting in Kolkata, a mighty big industry captain from Gujarat privately told his board of directors that investing in Bengal was equivalent to putting necks on railway tracks. Didi must be running her ploys in Singur and Nandigram that brought her to power but that remain the cause of her biggest woes as a Chief Minister. Secondly, though Banerjee has blasted Modi for selling out national assets and cutting down Government jobs, her own Government is responsible for eating up more than 5.5 lakh posts. Unlike Jyoti Basu, who commanded respect by his politics, trustworthiness, untainted image and age, the contemporary heartland politicians with their own ambitions and personal ego may not accept Mamata's suzerainty. Hence Delhi is very much visible from Kolkata but it is still far away. Dilli abhi door hai, Didi!

Beijing not really the bigger fish

The aggressive behaviour of China has antagonised many countries. North Korea and Pakistan apart, it is difficult to think of a Chinese ally

T is true that Xi Jinping's China is by now sufficiently worked up, for whatever reasons. It also is increasingly apparent that China has to be stopped in its tracks, if the world is not to plunge into a devastating war. Had Europe, Britain and France in particular, done likewise in 1936, WWII would have probaverted. been Notwithstanding Germany being bound by the Treaty of Versailles in 1919, forced to downsize its military and remain peaceful, its Fuhrer Adolf Hitler ordered his troops to seize the demilitarised Rhineland — formerly German territory - in 1936, in complete violation of the Treaty. No European power did or even said anything. Germany's generals, who were then reluctant to precipitate another armed conflict, began having faith in their Fuhrer's supposed strategic calibre.

In 1938, just two years after Rhineland, Britain's Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and France's PM Edouard Daladier promptly accepted Hitler's invitation to a conference in Munich to settle the Sudetenland issue. This Czechoslovakian province was substantially German-speaking. The Fuhrer wanted it for the greater glory of his fatherland. The visiting leaders promptly con-ceded this demand without so much as even consulting the Czechoslovaks. Chamberlain publicly eulogised the success of this conference as having achieved "peace in our time". This conclusively convinced the Germans that their Fuhrer knew what he was doing.

The inevitable happened hereafter. Austria was the next to be gobbled, as part of greater Germany, without a shot. In September next year, Poland was overrun in less than six weeks, with France capitulating in a similar duration in 1940. Had the French and British resisted Nazi Germany, which was militarily less prepared in 1936, Hitler would possibly have lost power or stayed away from such military adven-pared, economically and militarily. It has progressed leaps and bounds, particularly after Deng

Xiao Ping. But how far would it have gone had the American gates for its goods not opened up? China's goods are not products of its own technology, but the result of very diligent copying, politely called 'reverse engineering. The cheap cost of Chinese goods can be attributed to virtually free grants of land and throwaway interest rates for term loans to local entrepreneurs and of course, low wages to its workers, at least in the early phase of China's meteoric rise.

This is in contrast to Japan's manufactures — automobiles, electronic goods, computers, watches, et al. These are not only original but also largely unsurpassed by other countries. Militarily too, unlike Japan, China does not have a sufficient tradition. Strangely, the People's Liberation Army (PLA; China's armed forces) belongs to the Communist Party of China and not to the country. Moreover, China's armed forces are not made up of volunteers but mostly conscripts. It is one thing for anyone to be prepared to give his life for his country; it is difficult to fight with the same spirit for a political party, which can rise and fall, like the Congress in India, for instance. Else, there can be factional feuds too within a party, which partly explains a vast number of Chinese soldiers losing their lives in most skirmishes and small battles they have been involved in, over the last few decades. Also, more crucially, the Chinese armed forces have not been involved in fighting since 1979 when they invaded Vietnam, a war where the yellow giant took a beating.

STRANGELY, THE

PEOPLE'S LIBERATION ARMY BELONGS TO THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF CHINA AND NOT TO THE COUNTRY. AS A SOLDIER, IT IS DIFFICULT TO FIGHT WITH THE SAME SPIRIT FOR A POLITICAL PARTY

Battle experience is more important than training, in order to be a soldier. A battle hardened soldier is far more dependable than a well-trained recruit. Anyone who has not faced bullets is unpredictable in a combat situation, as to how he would react when the shooting begins. Today's PLA may not have a single soldier who has faced actual combat. In the meantime, the aggressive behaviour displayed by China's political leadership has antagonised many countries. North Korea and Pakistan apart, it is difficult to think of a Chinese ally. While North Korea's army is large and marches excellently in military parades, it has not felt a bullet since 1953, which is 68 years hence. In contrast, the Indian army was originally founded by the British, who were amongst the best trained armed forces other than the German ones. The country has fought five wars, as well as continual insurgencies in eastern India and Kashmir.

China is presumably militarily as mighty as most people worry. Taiwan is a major issue with the current leadership in Beijing. The South China Sea is another flashpoint. The Himalayas in India's north are potentially the third one. There are Japan and Taiwan, which for their size have excellent air forces. There is Australia further south. All that is necessary is for the USA to open its treasury of advanced weaponry. The rest of the allies are strong enough to halt the yellow giant from going any farther, if not actually force it to take a few steps back in its aggressiveness. This is also imperative because China's much-hyped rise has already happened. In other words, China is no longer rising but has risen. The window of opportunity to grab global hegemony is closing. And that makes the situation as dangerous as it was in 1914.

FIGHTING THE TINY-MIGHTY DEMON

Sir — As the matter stands, we are making a pertinent move to get rid of the COVID-19 pandemic as the number of deaths and the number of cases are reducing day by day. We are taking resolute actions to reduce the caseload and the people's cooperation is needed in this direction. As the COVID-19 hangs over the Dussehra celebrations, we must not fall prey to the eyeing 'rakshasa' in the form of the virus. Celebrations are a necessary part of social living as they spread an ethos of joy and togetherness. However, reckless celebrations can lead to consequences that we would not want.

We are all waiting for the D-Day with baited breath when the nation will announce the clearance of the outbreak. The Genie will be out of the bottle and Coronavirus will take its place. Once bottled, it will be thrown deep into the sea never to be found again. Until then, we must celebrate the triumph of good over evil in a safe and planned way.

A BLAST FROM THE ARCHIVES

Sir — Defence Minister Rajnath Singh's claim that Vinayak Damodar Savarkar submitted mercy petitions to the British at Mahatma Gandhi's behest is not corroborated by historical facts. It was a vain attempt at whitewashing Savarkar's reputation as part of the project to rewrite history to present Hindu Right's past in a good light. Rajnath Singh's claim was a distortion of facts; it is demolished by the fact that the mercy petitions submitted by Savarkar in 1911 and 1913 preceded Mahatma Gandhi's return from South Africa and his joining the freedom movement in 1915. The mercy petitions predated Mahatma Gandhi's article.

The words in his petitions were not worthy of being called a freedom fighter. He pledged loyalty to the British crown and appealed to its 'manifold beneficence' to secure his release from the Andaman Cellular Jail. In a reaction, External Affairs Ministry spokesperson Arindam Bagchi has also read the Chinese side the Riot Act, asserting that Arunachal Pradesh is an integral and inalienable part of India and, hence, Indian leaders keep visiting the State at will or when an occasion demands. He further reminded that the unilateral attempts by the Chinese side to alter the status quo on the Line of Actual Control (LAC) in the Western side of India-China border against the bilateral agreements, are responsible for the ongoing imbroglio. FIRST COLUMN PLI SCHEMES: NOT A LONG-TERM ANSWER

Straightening out our manufacturing inefficiencies is the key to boost growth

he COVID-19 pandemic has created awareness of the vulnerabilities of supply chains and shortage in essential products not only in India but worldwide. This has led to renewed sense of economic nationalism with Governments pushing domestic companies to produce and employ more. The Union Government's latest ₹26,058 crore package to boost production of automobiles, auto parts and drones is part of the strategy to make India a manufacturing hub. Known as Production Linked Incentive (PLI) scheme, this an element of the much larger Atma Nirbhar Bharat initiative to make India self-reliant in key products across sectors that are critical and important for India's future growth, by reducing its dependency on imports and developing globally as an export hub. Particularly designed to improve manufacturing capacities in both sunrise and strategic sectors, this scheme aims to reduce import bills, enhance cost competitiveness, and generate employment across skill categories. By achieving these objectives, India wants to expand the contribution of its manufacturing sector to the GDP, from 17 percent to 25 percent. The scheme also intends to encourage foreign investors who may want to inject capital into or establish business relationships with companies that have access to PLI incentives. As many as 13 sectors have been identified as intended beneficiaries of the PLI scheme. Taking the example of mobile manufacturing and electronic components industry, a total of 16 applications worth ₹35,541 crore have been approved so far. Five of them were from the global champions category, another five companies were from the domestic champions category and the remaining six companies were from the electronic components category. These companies together invested approximately ₹1,300 crores under this scheme in the first six months of operation inspite of tough times prevailing at the time, and added upto 22,000 jobs. This, in a way, fulfils the very reason for which the scheme was conceived.

Samsung, Foxconn, Hon Hai, Rising Star, Wistron and Pegatron are some of the global electronics giants who have started their operations under the scheme. As contract manufacturers for Apple iPhones, their presence will enhance the manufacturing base in India immensely. There are high expectations from domestic companies alike. After getting approval under PLI scheme, it is anticipated that Indian companies shall expand significantly by increasing their manufacturing operations and gain recognition as national champion companies in mobile phone production. There is an expectation that there would be high demand for mobile phones in future. This is evident from the latest mobile export figures of ₹4,600 crore for the quarter ending April-June 2021. This was a growth of 250 per cent over the previous period. The imports also nose-dived by 80 percent to ₹600 crore from ₹3,200 crore. These figures would jump immensely when Pegatron commences production this year. In this context, the PLI scheme is anticipated to head to a production of approximately ₹10.5 lakh crore with over 60 per cent of this to be exported. This scheme was extended from FY 2025 to FY 2026 at the request of the industry and allows applicants to pick FY 2022 as the base year. With the additional investment of ₹11,000 crore, over the next five years, direct employment would increase by two lakh and indirect employment by three times. Overall, the PLI Scheme bodes well for the mobile phone industry. However, the same cannot be said about other industries like solar manufacturing. These schemes are at best shortterm in nature and cannot be regarded as replacement for straightening out manufacturing inefficiencies and business complexity. Both the industry and the Government should work together during this time period to develop competitiveness and quality

India towards the space and beyond

Opening space programmes to private players is a breakthrough act and the world is watching keenly to see how feasible it will be to set up shop here rith the Government of India opening up 'Space', the private sector is all set for their time under the sun. For over five decades, ISRO has been the mainstay for all space related activities under the Department of Space (DOS) which is directly overseen by the Prime Minister. It has to its credit various successful missions from being the world first space agency to find water on the moon to having the world's largest constellation of remote-sensing satellites and two satellite navigation systems namely, GAGAN and NAVIC.

Currently the Indian Space industry accounts for a mere $7 billion in the rising $360-billion global space market. Despite its huge and undisputed achievements, ISRO, by its own admission, has been falling short in meeting the ever-increasing demands for space-based appli-cations and services within India. Almost every sector starting from agriculture, fishing, transport, weather department, oil and gas, and urban development are dependent on space and satellite technologies for their

The move to open India's space programmes to private players is a break-through act and the world is watching keenly to see how feasible it will be for them to come in with their facilities and services and set up shop here. The private industry, which was unable to compete due to their limited roles earlier, can now participate in the entire gamut of space activities not just as a vendor but as partners. ISRO infrastructure, scientific and technical resources, and even data for space programmes are accessible to the private industry. The Indian National Space Promotion and Authorization Cente (IN-SPACe) is set to act as a facilitator and a regulator; it will be an interface between ISRO and private players to facilitate the best use of resources.

The space start-up segment in India looks vibrant and is doing extraordinary work in upstream, in-orbit and downstream segments. A multitude of private players and young start-ups encouraged with new age investors having a better risk appetite and patience for projects with long gestation period, are setting up ventures from launch facilities, satellite thrusters, mm Wave and optical communication Links, Satellite manufacturing, earth observation applications, Space Situational Awareness (SSA), Collision detection, Debris mitigation and de-orbiting et cetera

The entry of large organisations has enabled start-ups and MSMEs to play a critical role in the value chain. Currently, there are around 500 firms directly and indirectly engaged with space technologies and a score of start-ups are engaged with the Government.

As a nation India has immense entrepreneurial spirit which has never been more pronounced than the recent difficult times of pandemic and with youngest sets of founders creating disruptive technology and business models in the field of micro-satellites, advanced rocket propulsion, launch vehicles, AI, Robotics, deep intelligence, etc., this segment is ready to find its wings given the right conditions. However, despite having 60 years of experience and expertise in space missions and satellite communications, India lacks on many fronts.

The start-ups lack resources and technology to handle independent space programmes. And even though the private sector firms can now use ISRO's infrastructure and resources, there is no clarity on the processes involved, the time frame for the sanctions and permissions etc. An easier facilitation center to deal and help the Start-ups in a time bound manner will go a long way in helping in this.

Lack of enabling policies makes the start-ups move to other geographies to set shop -- regulatory and financial barriers create uncertainty for young businesses which is detrimental in this large-investment and slow ROI segment. These barriers force the young entrepreneurs to look for environment that offers easier prospects.

Access to satellite spectrum is a basic issue across the industry and is a critical to the success of this segment. Presently there is no clarity on the availability of satcom spectrum. Without policy level certainty on spectrum allocation the young start-ups will find it very difficult to conduct routine telemetry, telecommand and payload data opera-

There are three distinct authorisations/licenses that are required, viz., GMPCS, VSAT, INSAT MSS and the license categories under the Universal Licensing do notoffer any clarity for satellite services for the business in the upstream and downstream sectors. It is time for India to consider start-up-friendly licensing regime like the short-term experimental licensing by ISRO for their tie ups with the Universities for their Satellite Missions.

The Department of Space's current combined role as licensor, mar-ket regulator and satellite operator, is causing a conflict of interest with private satellite builders and satcom service providers. Further there is DOT, DOS, WPC, INSPACE, and NSIL creating multiple layers permissions and asks, hampering the ease of doing business scenario for the sector. A clear delineation of functions is necessary for the commercial units to not seek places elsewhere to start their entity.

The new rules allow foreign companies to set-up facilities in India and enables 100 per cent FDI in the space sector which is a positive move and could give rise to several joint ventures. This paves the way for collaborative development of satellites, huge investment, job creation leading to enhanced GDP

Currently, too many layers of taxes at various levels including GST, revenue share, multiple DOT, DOS charges and withholding tax, etc., has led to almost one third of the entrepreneurs actively looking relocating out of India to reduce compliance and tax burdens. Countries like Singapore, Hong Kong and Malaysia offer a far more structured and rationalised tax structure than India and it makes more business sense for the entrepreneurs to shift base there.

There are several accelerator programmes run by the Government to promote the startup ecosystem. Îndia is the third largest start-up ecosystem in the world after the US and China and this is one more chance for the segment to grab their chance at suc-

There are challenges ahead, there is no doubt. India has 140 incubators and accelerators compared to China and the US which have over 2,400 and 1,500 incubators and accelerators, respectively. There is an urgent need to simplify regulation around registrations, bankruptcy laws, grants, investments etc to get entrepreneurs back into the system.

ISRO and the Government have a crucial role to play in resolving the policy gaps and loopholes by assur-ing the star-tups and private sector of a lucrative market for their products and services. A large-scale market opportunity awaits the private players in the upstream sector to engage in the manufacturing design and development of hightech spacecrafts and in proliferation of the satcom applications in down-stream sector. Regulators and rele-vant authorities need to work closely with emerging start-ups to bring about much needed reforms and incentives that allow industry to operate locally for the country to benefit from their success.

Space is a global phenomenon and India must not allow itself to miss the opportunity to be at the top of this frontier. Policies must be harmonised with the global best practices. Developments and standards need to be on par with the rest of the world.

The industryhas the wherewithal to grow and contribute significantly both in terms of technological development and GDP growth, thus becoming a true partner to the Government on India's journey towards space and beyond.

Climate negotiations need an innovative approach

Over the past several decades, key indicators of the climate system are changing at rates unprecedented in at least the last 2,000 years

→he climate change negotiations are held period-L ically under the banner of United Nations Forum for Convention on Climate Change (UNFCC) among participating countries through Conferences of Parties (CoP) The next CoP is the 26th and scheduled to be held in Glasgow in November. Former British Cabinet Minister Alok Sharma, chairperson for CoP 26, has exhorted the countries to agree for ambitious emission reduction targets that will lead to net zero emission by 2050. He had red-flagged the sixth report of Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPC) report published in 2021. World leaders will arrive in Glasgow like a jamboree and with several thousand negotiators, Government and business representatives in tow for twelve days of talks.

One of the important features of this year's CoP will be taking stock of the Nationally Determined Contributions of the countries they were asked to bring after five years since the Paris agreement. One of the issues will be to see how the countries are going to fare in controlling the rise in atmospheric temperature to 1.5 degree Celsius. The participants in CoP 26 will have to agree to step-up phasing out coal, curtail deforestation, speed up the switch to electric vehicles and encourage investment in renewables. Apart from mobilising finances for climate change adaptations, it will be necessary to build warning systems and resilient infrastructure and agriculture activities responsible for this to avoid loss of homes, livelihoods and even lives. The sixth report of IPC indicates longer term changes in the Earth's climate. The report clearly proves that during 2015 to 2021 each subsequent year has been hotter than the previous one and 2021 is proving to be the sixth hottest year ever recorded. The report states that global warming has constantly increased during the previous four decades compared to the 80 years before. The report vividly describes the human rise in temperature and consequent climatic vagaries being notices every year with increasing intensity resulting in acute hardship to the poor and disadvantaged sections of the world population.

It would be interesting to quote the sixth assessment report of the IPC for larger public demonstration and stern warning to the policy makers. It says: "Observed changes in the atmosphere, oceans, cryosphere and biosphere provide unequivocal evidence of a world that has warmed. Over the past several decades, key indicators of the climate system are increasingly at levels unseen in centuries to millennia, and are changing at rates unprecedented in at least the last surface temperature has increased by 1.09 C between the pre-industrial baseline period 1850-1900 and the most recent decade of 2011-20. This was more likely than not the warmest in roughly 125,000 years. Similarly, the rainfall pattern will change to extremities in volume and intensity resulting in excessive rainfall within few days and then prolong draughts in all over the world. As for sea ice, between the decades of 1979-88 and 2010-19, the average monthly August-October Arctic sea ice area shrunk by around one quarter with a loss of around two million square kilometres of ice.

In a nutshell, this assessment of IPC is a grim reminder for the world lead- sion. They use the emissions

Specifically, global mean ers to have a time-bound action plan for the next five to 10 years to achieve the targets set by the Paris agreement for 2030. In this regard, the United States after returning to the negotiating table, must shoulder the responsibility to lead the developed world.

The negotiators must draw lessons from 'Carbix' a company co-founded by an Indian, Vinit Dighe, and J. Sammy in Quincy, Massachusetts, USA. They develop reactors to harness carbon dioxide from emission streams generated by waste to energy plants, geo-thermal plants, water desalination and natural gas plants. They target cement manufacturing which alone contribute to eight percent carbon emiscium carbonate and limestone while at the same time remaining carbon negative. It is like catching the emissions and converting to produce minerals like cal-

them into valuable minerals. There is a huge scope for a permanent carbon sequestration market. It would be appropriate if Environment Minister Bhupendra Yadav invites the Indian innovator who is breaking new ground on climate change mitigation to have a tie-up with Indian industries to produce minerals out of emissions. India could then be a world leader not only in climate change innovation but also effectively control pollutants and use pollution as a raw material for mineral production.

Economic pickup will support borrowers, says Moody's

Covid risks will remain high

Mumbai: Over the next three to six months, auto loan delinquency rates will stay elevated, though broadly stable from current levels, Moody's Investors Service said in its comment on auto loans.

Indian auto loan asset backed securities (ABS) delinquency rates have improved alongside the easing of coronavirus restrictions over recent months, but remain elevated.

Delinquency rates will stabilise at high levels as coron-

Moody's said, citing that Indian auto ABS delinquency and collection rates improved in June and July as economic activity picked up after coronavirus restrictions eased.

While economic conditions have improved, this year's virus outbreak has eroded borrowers' financial reserves. Over the next three to six months, we expect delinquency rates will stay elevated at around current levels as many borrowers continue to deal with the pandemic's economic after effects," the ratings agency said.

The Indian auto ABS we rate benefit from non-amortizing cash reserves and substantial excess spread," Moody's said, adding that these features mitigate risks from elevated delinquency rates for Indian auto ABS, because they provide deals with liquidity and buffers against losses.

Auto ABS performance improved because the pickup in economic activity over recent months raised demand and rates for goods transportation. Improving conditions for goods transportation are positive for the Indian auto ABS sector, because deals mostly securitise loans to commercial vehicle operators who earn income by moving

Punit Goenka questions Invesco's silence on merger proposal with Reliance

Mumbai:In the ongoing Zee-Invesco tussle, the company's Managing Director and CEO Punit Goenka has now broken his silence charging the company's largest shareholder with hiding facts that prevented it from bringing facts about a merger proposal earlier.

...on a personal note, I have some questions as well. Why didn't Invesco make its plans public earlier? Does good corporate governance only apply to corporates and not their institutional investors?" Goenka asked in a statement issued by his office.

The statement talks about IANS | a merger proposal brought forward by Invesco in February involving Reliance Industries, which was rejected by him as it would have resulted in loss of shareholder value to the tune of Rs 10,000 crore.

"During my briefing to the Board, I emphasised on the points pertaining to the proposal from Invesco. My attention was on the imbalance observed in the valuation and how it was not in the best interest of our shareholders. The only reason I did not agree to the proposal was because the shareholder value was getting compromised," Goenka said in his statement.

WPI inflation at 6-month low of 10.66% in Sep; food prices ease

New Delhi: The wholesale pricebased inflation eased to a sixmonth low of 10.66 per cent in September, helped by moderating food prices even as crude petroleum witnessed a spike.

"The high rate of inflation in September 2021 is primarily due to rise in prices of mineral oils, basic metals, non-food articles, food products, crude petroleum & natural gas, chemicals and chemical products etc. As compared to the corresponding month of the previous year," the Commerce and Industry Ministry said in a statement. GIVE NATURE A CHANCE

ventional cinema has ruled the entertainment game for decades, has a negligible, but growing, interest in documentary films. A fact that most of us are familiar with, without having to turn to surveys or studies on the same. However, a lot has changed in the past several

While we are talking about the shift in consciousness that has become increasingly visible and loud, we have to admit that the pandemic brought matters to the fore. A month into the nation-wide lockdown, pollution levels in cities were down to bearable levels; with factories not functioning, and not pumping waste material into the rivers, the colour of the water in these rivers also changed. Such observable changes led us to scratch our chins and wonder, would the environment be better off if we were not around?

Roughly a year and a half post the first lockdown, we have lowered our masks and we are back at it. It appears we humans forget quite easily. However, it is a stroke of luck that there still are some individuals among us who can't help but remember something they have realised.

Meet Kunal Khanna, the founder of the All Living Things Environmental Film Festival (ALT EFF), India's first environmental film festival. Born in Mumbai, and raised in Panchgani, Khanna gained his sense of independence through an adulthood in Australia. After returning to his roots in India, back in 2018, Khanna started running a permaculture farm and realising our dependency on nature, he developed ALT EFF In a conversation with Christy Varghese, KUNAL KHANNA, the founder of ALT EFF, shares that we still have time to reverse the damage we have done to our environment to become a catalyst for environmental change in India.

While ALT EFF launched virtually in 2020, against the backdrop of the pandemic, Khanna reveals that the film festival was originally conceptualised as a physical festival back in 2019, full of experiences, gatherings and a lively sustainability market. However, working on the virtual model was a blessing in disguise as they were able to engage viewers from across the world. With 33 films, and over 4,500 viewers, the maiden ALT EFF criss-crossed countries, habitats and some serious issues.

Khanna expresses, "Our motive at ALT EFF is to bring forth stories of hope while inspiring more people to look at the important issues of our time. We are trying to create awareness and through the awareness generate some change in the way we lead our lives."

This time around, their presence was bound to grow with 44 films being screened from October 9-17. Read on for excerpts from the interview, for a peek into Khanna's mind.

□Was there any single incident which acted as an epiphany, of sorts, for you to switch careers and come back to India?

It was not a moment but many things over a couple of

I trained as an economist for my undergraduate studies and later went on to work at the state treasury of Victoria. And I could not help but be concerned by the way classic economic theory had us looking at the world. Essentially, we could be doing a lot of damage, the way we go about producing things and living our life, but as long as a 'profit' is being generated, we dont need to worry about the rest of the details - and this was very fundamental in economic

I was practising economics for about three years and I could not digest that information any more because the world around us was changing and we could see the environmental impact, the damage that was being inflicted upon nature, unfolding before our very eyes. That is when I started questioning the system we live in and the economic model upon which our system is based. At that time I decided to go and do a master's in environment with the intention of devoting my life to that subject. During my 13 years in Australia, I observed the power of films and how it could cause change and that is what led to the India's first environmental film festival.

□ Is it a bit too late to raise our voice for the environment?

As per recent studies and reports, and considering the way how things are going, one might feel that things have gotten out of hand. However, the fact that so many of us are working towards the conservation of our environment, in varying capacities, is based on the ideology that it is never too late. And I believe so because I have seen up close how if we give nature a chance to do what it does best, it won't take too long to regain its past glory.

We as humans have created a solution for every problem that we have encountered for aeons and hopefully, this is just another such instance, even though it is a big one, admittedly. The entire premise of the environmental film festival is to bring about that hope.

I feel that we, who are in India, have limited exposure to what is going on around the world. Our exposure, in terms of news and the people that we follow on social media and/or interact with, is actually very limited. Which is why we bring stories from across the globe out of 44 films that are being screened this time around, 31 are from 31 different countries.

They really open our eyes to what all is happening; are you aware that at this moment there are waves of numerous individuals who are standing up and raising their voices to attract our attention to this serious problem? We hope to inspire more and more people with time and create a tsunami of change.

□What did your role as the innovations lead city of Melbourne entail? Did vou try to incorporate some changes keeping in mind environmental factors as well?

Yes, of course! My role over there was to consider innovations and creative ways to ensure that Melbourne continues to be one of the most liveable cities in

The role required me to diversify my skills, and taught me a lot, as I had to work on multiple aspects such as developing interfaces to make life a little more convenient for the people of the city and also what we can do to address environmental issues. such as introducing green spaces in the urban areas, or how we can manage organic food waste. I would work with a very wide range of ideas and concepts. but my role was to use the innovations that the people of Melbourne had to offer. Every major city across the world welcomes innovations that can help its citizens and India too has a lot of potential in that regard, with some very capable people doing some incredible work. However, governments often fail to capitalise on that

Melbourne, which has been featuring in the top 10 liveable cities in the world for quite some time now, takes such steps very seriously. We transformed how we were managing the waste systems, while I was the innovations lead.

While we are familiar with the two dustbin system, one for biodegradable waste and the other for non-biodegradable waste, we introduced a third bin — for food waste. We turned that into compost, to be used as organic fertiliser by people growing their own to a resource. I also remember open innovation competition, which I have led in the past, where we invited new ideas centred around the concept of circularity. Essentially, this means designing ways where waste is essentially non-existent, where it is turned into something useful and this this system goes round and round. Our goal was to ensure circularity as a city, while reducing the environmental footprint.

We transformed a liability

□Documentary films do not have many takers in India. What are your expectations from the second edition of ALT EFF?

The reason why documentary films are not given enough attention is because there aren't enough platforms in India. Lack of funding is another reason. When there are more film festivals that celebrate documentaries and lesserknown stories, it will translate into more people picking up this format of filmmaking.

This year we want to inspire the youth to cover environmental topics. It would be ideal if fictional films would also highlight this important aspect, but let's see how that Currently we aspire to obtain more traction in the form of funding which would help us fund students and other aspiring film makers to go out and cover important topics. To view the films being screened and to know more about ALT EFF, visit alteff.in.

I had the recent opportunity to talk to one of the finest maestros in the industry and thoroughly enjoyed the conversation, making me look at Indian music in a newer light.

Ustaad Bahauddin Dagar is an acclaimed rudra veena player and the son of the renowned north Indian musician, Ustad Zia Mohiuddin Dagar. He represents the 20th generation of the Dagar lineage, which dates back, to Nayak Haridas Dagar, to the 16th century.

In an exclusive interview, he shares his journey and comments on how the rise of social the perspective of the audience in recent times.

Read on for some excerpts from the interview:

*When did you start your journey of music?

I have been raised in a family where almost everyone is into music, thus, the journey of learning music began during my childhood. We were always surrounded by a motivating atmosphere when it came to music, art, and poetry. Musicians and students used to be gathered at our house in order to learn and grow together. When you are nurtured in such a manner, you get inclined towards art. I also used to listen to rock, pop, jazz, along with several forms of Indian classical music. So, by the time I was 16, I had planned to be a musician, and I asked my father if he could teach me, and that was how my first venture into this enigmatic world happened.

Who is your inspiration?

I have always been inspired by my father, Ustad Zia Mohiuddin Dagar, and my uncle, Ustad Zia Fariduddin Dagar Music. For me, music is a way of expressing emotion. I was inspired by the good works of musicians like Kishori Amonkar. The concept of contemporary music is also unique. Music is ever dynamic and every musician has contributed something, in their own manner, thus, achieving success in the process.

*Did you learn any instrument apart from Rudra veena?

At the age of seven, I had started learning sitar, but I dropped it as my only desire was to learn and get to know the rudra veena.

How is rudra veena different from saraswati veena?

Saraswati veena is popular in the south, and it is made up of one piece of wood. It is designed to suit the Carnatic style of music.

Rudra veena is basically a stringed instrument designed for north Indian music, like khayal and dhrupad. Rudra veena is also considered as a yantra or a compass as it measures the notes, microtones to their exactness and helps the singers understand how the notes are placed.

*Apart from music, what are your other areas of interest?

Apart from music, I like to go to museums, observe beautiful paintings displayed at art exhibitions, spend time with nature, visit wildlife sanctuaries, and so on.

What is your favourite genre of music?

Currently, I am working with dhrupad, and the last 30 years have proved to be extremely enriching. It has helped rearranging my music clearly, and it has kept me occupied throughout. I hardly get any time to listen to any other music. Once in a while, I get time to explore western music or other forms of music like qawwali, ghazal, and so

*What is that one flavour that you miss in today's music?

I think that the music has become more polished and refined in the present times. Also, I miss long hours at concerts that used to be the norm of our day. Nowadays, concerts have a tight schedule. When we had short concerts, one singer used to sing for two to three hours so the singers and the audience had time to warm up, but things have changed now. Today's concerts are more like a performance, which is not the idea of Indian classical music. where one has to keep on rediscovering new ideas. I miss lengthier concerts that felt like like four to five journeys, where the musicians would share their journey with you.

*You have a long legacy. Does it work in your favour or do you need to raise your bar?

The legacy favours us because we follow our particular sanskar at home. However, sometimes we need to work twice as much as people are looking up to us all the time. You need to raise your bar all the time else your time will be over.

*How has your audience changed over the years?

I think the audience has changed due to platforms like YouTube and other social media platforms, which have promoted so many genres and increased spective of the audience has changed. I remember the times when the musicians had a lesser audience to entertain. With the rise of social media platforms, a new generation of the audience has come up. Today, every recording is available online, so if you don't play well enough, you will get criticised.

*What has changed for the artists and the audience amidst the pandemic?

The audience is missing out on the fun of live performances and concerts, while artists have suffered economically. Many musicians' careers have ended and some have taken up odd

At the same time, I also feel that musicians had time, during the pandemic, to reflect on who they are as human beings and how their work has progressed. Both good and bad things happened.

*What are your upcoming projects?

Once you get into this kind of role, your entire life becomes a project. There are some concerts lined up. On October 23, I am playing in Jaipur at Jawahar Kala Kendra; then next year, I am supposed to go to Paris for the morning. It's fairly common to find people sipping hot coffee, cold coffee, latte, or any other variety of coffee beverages and revelling in its bittersweet taste. However, it is also common to find the same people complaining of exhaustion and dehydra-

RAUNAK KHOSLA advocates substituting conventional coffee with coffee honey to live a healthier life

According to experts, more than four cups of coffee a day can cause headaches, anxiety, irregular heart-beats, and even chest pain. However, despite knowing that even a moderate amount of coffee can be detrimental to health, the caffeine addiction is real and compels people to never give up on this savory brew.

The question is, in the age-long war between health and taste buds, who will emerge victorious? However, no one should be forced to make such a decision when both health and taste buds can co-exist together, right? This is where coffee honey is revolutionising the world for coffee lovers.

The goodness of honey and mental alertness of coffee

Along with relishing the taste and resinous aroma of coffee and sweetness of honey, a coffee honey drink is perfect for triggering psych activity in the morning, afternoon, or evening, but without the side effects of a cup of coffee. Coffee honey doesn't mean that it's simply coffee with honey instead of white or brown sugar. No, it's something more magical than that.

To be precise, honeybees are naturally attracted to coffee flowers. These flowers contain caffeine in the nectar part, which attracts honeybees instinctively. However, it is quite challenging to harvest as the pollination period of coffee flowers is extremely limited. Nevertheless, the bees skillfully draw out the sugarrich liquid from coffee plants, and a flavorful dark, rich coffee bean color honey is extracted. Like most coffee, coffee honey efficiently relieves mental and physical fatigue, alerts the brain, and keeps consumers perked up throughout the day. It also stimulates the central nervous system, boosts immunity, and controls insulin levels to elevate the overall wellbeing and productivity of the consumer. Having said that, it doesn't bring the negabeans. In fact, coffee honey consists of high volumes of antioxidants and can be highly beneficial in regulating the common cold and cough.

Furthermore, it has endless health benefits for humans and the caffeine nectar of coffee plants is incredibly beneficial for honeybees. It activates their memory process and enables bees to return to the same flower and collect more nectar.

Moving forward On a daily basis, more than one billion people worldwide drink coffee. Imagine how many cups of coffee everyone must be consuming. Although, it's the most widely consumed beverage in the world, it's still not everyone's cup of coffee. Honey coffee, on the other hand, not only soothes consumers' hectic nerves but also aids in weight loss.

The conventional charm of honey coupled with new-age innovations has opened doors for several ventures diving deeper into the world of nectar and organic honey. Honey-based products like coffee honey are usually free of sugar, additives, and artificial flavors. The latest food technology is specially designed for such alternatives that keep the original taste intact while enhancing the healthy attributes of natural products. And coffee honey is an apt example under this category.

The aforementioned data clear

y states that because caffeine addiction has become an integral part of most people's lifestyle, it is crucial to opt for healthy, sustainable, and nutritious options. Coffee honey fits the bill perfectly.

With diet culture leading to eating disorders, mood swings, guilt and anxiety, PALLAVI Moulick suggests ways to heal your relationship with food by attaining balance

The most ironic fact about intuitive eating, is that it is not very intuitive for most of us. It takes intentional effort to get to that point. 80 per cent of women in the Chronic dieters know that they will always gain the weight back. Dieting has a negative connotation to it, even while thinking about it. Now that the supposed villain is floating around everywhere in the world, it is time to find the main protagonist.

weight is weighing on pretty much every woman's mind. There are deeper roots of the diet mentality than what may seem on the surface. To a certain extent, it stems from the patriarchal viewpoint of seeing beauty in thin bodies. The body does its best to conform to massive changes in life and protect itself. But if the main source of fuel is heavily restricted, the body responds back in the same non-loving manner.

- Del Monte pumpkin seeds:
- Coconut sugar: ³/₄ cup
- Rose petals to garnish

 Soak tapioca pearls in soften and bloom.

In a saucepan, add the soaked tapioca pearls, remaining coconut milk and jaggery and heat over medium heat till it reaches a simmer. Then reduce the heat and let it cook for 15 minutes until the pearls are cooked through and it has all thickened. Keep stirring occasionally to prevent the tapioca from sticking to the bottom. If you wish to have it much thinner, add another cup of coconut milk. Pour into bowls or ramekins to the top and let cool in the refrigerator.

 Toast the pumpkin seeds on a pan for three-four minutes and place on a silicon mat.

- Cook water and coconut sugar in a saucepan over medium heat, stirring slowly with a metal fork, until melted and golden. Cook caramel without stirring, until deep golden.
- Immediately stir it over pumpkin seeds placed on the silicon mat, spreading it all over so it hardens. Let it cool down and set at room temperature for about 15 minutes. Then break shards of the praline and add that over the tapioca pudding. Garnish with rose petals.
