Coal Crisis

Industrial states want to import coal to make up for the shortfall

Summer temperatures are soaring and so is the power demand. Some States have already scheduled power cuts. And, we are told that private power companies face shortage of coal. Industrial states want to import coal to make up for the shortfall. This is a costly proposition beyond the reach of smaller states. Is there a coal crisis? Remember, there was a similar hue and cry a few months ago. Uttar Pradesh says it is left with only 36 per cent of its coal stock. In Maharashtra, the coal stock has dropped to about 46 per cent. The state-owned power plants have only 22.5 per cent of its coal stock. The coal shortage讲故事 has been driven by the fact that the coal production has not kept pace with the surge in power demand. The government has taken steps to increase coal production, but the pace has not been fast enough to meet the rising demand. The Ministry of Coal has set a target of producing 660 million tonnes of coal in the current fiscal year, which is an increase of 24 per cent over the previous year. However, the actual production has been lagging behind the target. The power plants are facing a coal shortage on a daily basis, and they are having to operate at reduced capacity or even shut down. The government has taken steps to ensure the continuity of power supply, such as increasing the import of coal. But the import of coal is a costly affair, and it may not be a sustainable solution to the coal shortage problem. The government needs to come up with a long-term solution to address the coal shortage issue, such as increasing the domestic coal production or exploring new sources of coal. India and China are two major players in the region and have strategic interests that are intertwined. The recent tension in the Indo-China border has highlighted the importance of multilateralism in resolving such disputes. Bayern Munich beat dortmund 3-1 to win 10th straight Bundesliga title

The Bundesliga season has ended in style with a 3-1 win for Bayern Munich against Dortmund, securing a 10th straight Bundesliga title and cementing their status as the dominant force in German football.

Despite a late goal from Lukas Piazon, Bayern were far too strong for Dortmund, who were bidding to become the first team to win the Bundesliga title without losing a single game.

The match started well for Dortmund, with Robert Lewandowski scoring after just 10 minutes to give them a 1-0 lead. However, Bayern responded with a goal from Robert Lewandowski in the 21st minute, and the deficit was doubled just before halftime thanks to a fine finish from Thomas Muller.

In the second half, Bayern continued their dominance, with further goals from Leon Goretzka and Robert Lewandowski to secure a comprehensive win.

The victory means Bayern have won the Bundesliga title for the 10th time, surpassing Borussia Dortmund's record of nine titles. It also marks the first time they have won the title with a perfect season, having not lost a single game all year.

Bayern's success has come despite the departure of manager Hansi Flick, who left the club earlier in the season. Under his leadership, they have won eight of their nine remaining games, leaving them with a 10-point cushion at the top of the table.

Leverkusen's hopes of securing the Bundesl具有一定，但他们在休赛期的星光继续闪耀。他们在巴塞罗那的首场比赛中以3-0的比分取得了胜利，展示了他们的实力。然而，他们在接下来的比赛中表现不佳，最终在赛季末段以第4名的成绩结束。

Ten Hag has 'no opinion' on Man Utd's slump

Erik ten Hag has been critical of Manchester United's recent form, but has refused to speculate on whether the team could be in trouble.

The Dutch coach, who took over at Old Trafford in December, was speaking after his side sealed the Premier League title with a 2-0 win over Aston Villa on Sunday.

While refusing to comment on whether Man United could be in a relegation battle, ten Hag said: "It's too early to say, but I think we have to be careful."

He also dismissed suggestions that the team's form could be a reaction to the end of the season, saying: "It's just a normal season."
