India has once again requested the world body for a comprehensive aggression against terror even if it doesn’t have even a common definition.

Failing that, the Mumbai attack perpetrators continue to live free, posing a serious threat to Pakistan. Obviously, the world are not ready to accept a common definition of terrorism and a comprehensive convention against it.

The world is not ready to accept the culture of humiliation, which is the hallmark of Pakistani terrorism.

Discussions on with RBI over digital currency: FM

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman on Monday said discussions with the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) on digital currency are on, which she said will be held in the coming months.

Sitharaman, who chaired a meeting of the Group of Twenty (G20) Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors, said the group is working on the technology and the use cases of digital currencies.

"The discussions with the RBI on digital currency are ongoing and will be held in the coming months. There is a great deal of interest in digital currency as a way to increase financial inclusion and reduce transaction costs," she said.

"We are also looking at the possible use cases of digital currency and how it can be used to promote financial stability," she added.

On a related note, the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) has reintroduced the reserve ratio (RR) for banks, raising it from 8% to 9%, in order to increase the liquidity in the banking system and support economic growth.

Have a healthy & a happy liver

Chronic liver disease including cirrhosis and liver cancer are major threats to public health. For instance, over 800 million people worldwide have chronic hepatitis C virus infection. These conditions are caused by chronic inflammation of the liver. In India, the situation is no less alarming, with at least 20 million people estimated to have hepatitis C.

The damage to the liver caused by these infections is irreversible and can result in liver failure, which may require liver transplantation. However, there is a lack of understanding among patients about the importance of early treatment and the need for regular follow-up. This has led to many patients not seeking treatment in a timely manner, which in turn leads to a higher risk of complications.

The importance of early detection and treatment cannot be overstated. The earlier the treatment, the higher the chances of survival and a better quality of life. Regular liver function tests, ultrasound scans, and biomarker testing are essential for early detection.

In this context, it is crucial to raise awareness among the public about the importance of regular check-ups and the need for timely treatment. Awareness campaigns, educational programs, and public health initiatives can play a significant role in this regard. Healthcare providers and policymakers must work together to ensure that everyone has access to quality healthcare services, including liver health care.

The story of Virendra Paswan, a 46-year-old man from Bihar, is a stark reminder of the importance of early detection and treatment. He was diagnosed with advanced cirrhosis and was advised to undergo liver transplantation. However, due to financial constraints, he was unable to afford the treatment.

One day, while watching a television program, he came across a advertisement for a liver transplant at Metro Hospitals & Heart Institutes in Noida. With hope in his heart, he contacted the hospital and soon started the journey towards a new life.

Six months after his transplant, Virendra is leading a normal life. He is grateful to the hospital for giving him a second chance at life.

As we celebrate World Liver Day, let us remember that every liver is precious and deserves the best care possible. Together, we can make a difference and save lives.

The story of Virendra Paswan is a reminder that with timely detection and treatment, we can overcome the challenges of liver disease. Let us support each other and work towards a healthier liver for all.
India seek to sort out batting and fielding woes against NZ

PTI

The challenging task the Indian cricket team faces in the upcoming Test series against New Zealand is akin to climbing a mountain, according to former cricketer and current India coach Rahul Dravid.

In an interview with PTI on Tuesday, Dravid, who also served as the team mentor and mentor during the 2019 World Cup, said that India's preparation for the New Zealand Test series has been thorough, with a focus on improving batting and fielding.

"We have a lot of work to do before the Test series starts," Dravid said. "The batting has been a concern, and we have to adapt to the Pakistani conditions. The fielding has also been a worry, and we need to improve our catching and fielding.

"We've had some practice matches, and we've had the opportunity to work with some of the young players," he added. "We've also talked about the mental aspect of the game, and we need to make sure our players are focused and mentally strong.

Dravid's comments come at a time when India is preparing to face New Zealand in the first Test match, which starts on February 13 in Hamilton. The series is crucial for India as it seeks to win back the Border-Gavaskar Trophy after losing the previous series in the West Indies.

"It's going to be a tough series for us," Dravid said. "New Zealand is a strong team, and we need to be at our best to have any chance of winning.

"We have a lot of talented players in the squad, and we need to make sure they perform to the best of their abilities," he added. "We need to be disciplined and focused, and we need to make sure we learn from our mistakes.
